MAY CROP BULLETIN

Monthly Statement From the Ontario Department of Agriculture

The following statement regarding crop conditions in the Province, based on the returns of correspondents sent in on or about the 15th of May, has been issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Fall Wheat.—In the April crop bulletin, which was based on statements of correspondents reporting on the first day of that month, fall wheat prospects were said to be encouraging, as the crop had come through the winter practically unscathed. April, however, proved to be a most trying time for the young wheat, and it suffered severely from the formation of ice and from "heaving." The area ploughed up this spring will not be relatively great, as farmers have preferred to drill barley or other spring grains in the bare spots rather than lose the grass that was seeded down with the fall wheat. Some correspondents report a most promising outlook on high and well drained land, but the bulk of the fields are more or less spotted, or patched in with other grain. Very little injury from insects has been reported, odd mention only being made of the Hessian fly."

Clover.—As in the case of fall wheat, clover fields are very variable in appearance. This crop also suffered more or less from the testing weather of early part of April, which caused considerable heaving, especially in low and poorly drained situations, although some correspondents report the fields as looking well on rolling and well drained lands. Two year old clover is much poorer than that in the new fields, as the older meadows were greatly tried by last summer's drought. Some correspondents also point out that many pastures were rather too closely cropped last fall for best results.

Alfalfa.—This crop has not come through the winter quite so well as clover. There is a strong desire expressed by correspondents for a hardier variety of alfalfa suitable for the climate of this Province, and Prof. C. A. Zavitz, of the Ontario Agricultural College, has recently expressed himself as being hopeful that he will be able to satisfactorily meet this need very soon.

Vegetation.— Correspondents differ greatly as to the present stage of vegetation, some stating that the season is well forward, while others claim that it is a week or more late, the first two weeks of May having been too cold and wet for much growth. Cattle and sheep were reported to be on the grass at dates ranging from the 1st to the 11th of May. When correspondents wrote vegetation in the fields appeared to be more forward relatively than in the case of orchard and forests.

Fruit.—The low and sustained clips in the temperature at times during the winter caused much anxiety among growers of peaches and other tender fruits, and the results have shown that they had reason for their fears. In nearly every peach section the fruit buds have been more or less frozen back. In some cases in the Niagara district the loss will be almost complete, while in Essex, Kent and Lambton the injury has been lighter. One correspondent points out the fact that early varieties have escaped better than the later sorts. However there has been comparatively no root freezing, and our great peach industry at the most is likely to suffer but one season's loss in bearing. On the other hand apples, pears, cherries and plums are very promising as to blossom, but the presence of the San Jose scale and the oyster shell bark louse is threatening many orchards. The tent caterpillar is also much in evidence in York and other counties to the east. Small fruits have come through the winter with comparatively little injury, and present prospects are good. Correspondents speak approvingly of the increase of the practice of spraying fruit trees, but complain of the lack of competent farm help in orchard work.

Fodder Supplies.—During the past seven year the farmers of Ontario have learned to make their supplies go farther than formerly. Hay and the grains are now fed sparingly, the coarser fodders being much more largely utilized. The quantity of hay on hand in most quarters is said to be sufficient for emergencies; but while individually some report a surplus others have had to buy in order to carry live stock over until they could be put on the grass. All classes of grains are being more and more fed on the farm, although it is likely that a decided rise in prices would bring out a fair supply of wheat, barley and oats. The rather backward spring, however, has had a tendency to decrease any surplus of either hay or grain.

Spring Sowing.—The soil was in a splendid condition for a seed bed in the latter part of April, even heavy clays having been well pulverized by the severe frosts which occurred during the winter. Farmers who got on the land to sow early were well advanced—and some through—when returns were made; but cold rains early in May prevented those who had been tardy from getting to work for a week, and in such cases seeding was more or less unfinished, while the soil was in a much stiff condition than at the opening of the season. However, the general tone of the reports is very satisfactory, except in the case of some from the low lying townships of Kent and adjoining counties.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Unprofitable Servants. Luke xvii:1-10.

Golden Text—He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord. II Cor. 1:31.

1. Verse 1 — Why is it impossible that offences will not come?
2. What scriptural reason is there, if any, to expect that the time will come when there will be no more offences?
3. What is the gravest offence or injury that one may do to another
4. Verse 2—What is the penalty to one who causes another to lose his hope of heaven?
5. Why would it have been better for a man to have been drowned rather than to hurt one of God's little ones?
6. Verse 3—What is the best way to avoid doing another person an injury
7. In how many ways are we liable to be injured by our fellows?
8. What should our attitude be toward those who injure us?
9. If a person who injures us does not repent, but is glad he did it, what should our attitude be to him?
10. Verse 4—Why should we forgive a person who injures us seven times in a day?
11. If we decide that there is a limit to our times of forgiving others what will be the consequences?
12. How many times a day would you say that an ordinary sinner offends against God?
13. Verse 5—What relation has faith with forgiving those who injure us an unlimited number of times?
14. What is faith as here mentioned?
15. Verse 6—Is faith a natural human quality, or is it the gift of God, and why?
16. Is it possible to have faith sufficient to perform a miracle except God specially gives it? Why?
17. If God is the author of all wonder working faith, how much trouble is it for him to uproot a tree or over throw a mountain?
18. Verse 7-8—Why is it that there is no particular merit to us even if we have mighty faith and do great things?
19. On the merits of the case, what obligation is God under to serve us?
20. What is the nature of our total dependence upon God, and our supreme obigation to serve him?
21. Verses 9-10. Why is it that God makes no profit out of us no matter if we do all he commands us?

Lesson for Sunday, May 31, 1914. The Grateful Samaritan. Luke xvii; 11-19.

You Are Invited To Be There

The Gurney Oxford Gas Range is the Last Word In Cooking Convenience.

At the TURNBULL STORE, during the week of June 1st, there will be a series of short talks, on the subject of Kitchen Engineering.

Admission will be by Tickets, which will be sent to our customers and any other Ladies interested, upon request.

The Lecturer will tell how to prepare a meal, a simple meal or an elaborate one, on a Gurney Oxford Gas Range, so that everything will come out right: i.e. each course, from soup to dessert, ready in the proper order and done "to a turn."

The Gurney Foundry have gone into the matter of Kitchen Engineering very thoroughly and the information you will get at these talks will take all the uncertainty and much of the labour out of cooking.

Cooking by Gas is a wonderful help to modern house-keeping. It eliminates waste, time, the carrying of coal and ashes.

So every housewife should attend these talks.

They will not be long but they will be interesting.

At Afternoon Lectures, Tea will be served to visitors.

All the Ladies of Peterboro' and Vicinity are invited. The information that you will get will be valuable three times a day.

FUNERAL MARCH OF SALMON IN BRITISH COLUMBIA BEGUN

VANCOUVER, May 21 — Nobody ever saw a Pacific Coast salmon more than seven years old, although some spring salmon have been caught that weighed almost 100 pounds.

This is the tragedy of the Pacific in one sentence. The salmon run, which has begun now in the rivers of British Columbia, is a funeral procession. This applies to five out of six members of the Pacific Coast salmon family. The sixth member is a small species related to the trout. The other five species visit the spawning grounds only once, and then die. The salmon always spawns in fresh water, as far up from the sea as it can get, near the sources of the river. The young fish agree with the current and this accord takes them back to the salt sea.

The salmon inhabits the sea until it is a grown-up fish, and feels the strong influence of the mating instinct on its mind. This, like the sex impulse of the bee, is a message of death.

Take no Food in Fresh Water.

Then the salmon mate, and begin their nuptial voyage up the rivers to the spawning beds. It is no exaggeration to say that the beautiful fish, in whose bodies life runs rich and strong, meet their death after a desperate honeymoon of struggle and suffering, which lasts only a few weeks. They do not take food after they leave the salt water.

Each female salmon lays about 5000 eggs. Only one of these, on the average, becomes an adult fish. The rest of them will for the most part, hatch, but the young fish serve as food for other fish.

Yet a vast number of salmon are taken by the cannery fishermen on the Pacific Coast. If one takes, for example, an average by year, say 1911, and makes a little research into the records, one finds that about 68,000,000 were actualy packed into cans in that year's run. Six million one hundred and forty thousand cases were packed on the Pacific Coast that season, or 294,762,576 one-pound cans. Then about 25,000,000 more samon were caught that year by commercial fishermen and sold fresh in the markets and mild-cured, smoked and frozen for cold storage. About 10,000,000 others were probably caught by Indian fishermen and by others who were fishing for private food supply

SEAL AFFIXED TO OTONABEE'S LOCAL OPTION BY-LAW

Mr. J. M. Drummond, clerk of the Township of Otonabee, has written the Examiner to the effect that the official seal is now affixed to the local option by-law, which makes it as valid as if it had been originally properly sealed. Prosecutions under the by-law will now have the full force of the law behind them.

Will Appeal Judgment In the Brightman Quigley Money Case

The judgment given in the case of Brightman vs. Quigley at the non-jury sessions of the High Court a few weeks ago will be appealed and will be heard in the appellate division of the Supreme Court of the Province. Mr. G. N. Gordon, acting for Mr. Quigley, has notified Mr. S. T. Medd, counsel for Mr. Thos. Brightman, of the intention to appeal. Mr. Quigley resides in Vancouver, but formerly lived in Hastings.

Mr. Brightman was awarded his full claim of $2.334 and costs, amounting to $2,700.

C. N. R. PROPOSALS ARE POSTPONED

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 22.—Further consideration of the Canadian Northern proposals has been postponed by the Government until Tuesday next. Many of the members will be absent over Victoria Day, and it is not thought advisable to continue the discussion on legislation until the full House is in session. Minor legislation and estimates will occupy the attention of the House to-day and to-morrow.

Boy Falls Into Well

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LINDSAY, Ont., May 22.—After two hours' search yesterday, the body of the two-year-old son of James Kerr, of Lotus, near here, was found in the bottom of a well. There was a deep gash on the side of the head. The little lad was probably killed as he fell down the well. The parents are prostrated with grief.

REST FOR TIRED MORTALS

After a trying day in the office or factory, it's nice to sit quietly and enjoy a little good music. Come and hear FRANK OLDFIELD to-night in St. Andrew's large cool church, 8.15 to 9.45. Miscellaneous programme. Admission, only 25 cents.

TORY TORONTO SETS A PACE IN SOCIAL REFORM

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 22.—One of the most significant features up to date in the provincial election campaign is the announcement of a non-partizan Progressive committee to arrange for the organization of the Riding of Northeast Toronto in the interests of the social reform programme submitted by Mr. Rowell and his colleagues in the Legislature.

The committee list is quite unusual for several reasons. It contains the names of well-known Conservatives, such as ex-Alderman James Hales, law-partner of the Hon. I. B. Lucas; A. R. Williams, a prominent wholesale machinist; T. W. Self, a contractor and an influential Orangeman; and Harry Goodman, vice-president of the Langmuir Company. There are also the names of several Independents.

The list is notable too, for the number of prominent business, financial and professional men, many of whom, up to the present, have not taken an active interest in practical politics, but who are frankly attracted now by the programme of social reform presented by Mr. Rowell.

Contained in the list are the names of Liberals who, on the Reciprocity issue, are said to have voted against their party.

Another significant feature is the inclusion in the list list of a number of young men, which is another indication of that movement of young men to the side of the progressive and social reform party, which is reported to be general throughout the province.

Several speakers at the recent Conservative meeting in North Toronto warned their colleagues that they were face to face with the "fight of their lives." The announcement of this committee explains at least part of the Conservatives' nervousness.

It is expected that similar committees will be announced within a few days for some of the other Toronto constituencies.

$100,000 CHURCH FOR CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS

Every Dollar of the Cost Will Be Provided Before a Spade is Turned or a Brick is Laid

Toronto is to have a $100,000 Christian Science Church, the building of which is to be proceeded with at once. The present First Church of Christ, Scientist, has become inadequate to accommodate the rapidly growing congregation, every Sabbath many being unable to gain admission.

But perhaps the most striking feature of this Church undertaking is the fact that the new edifice will be paid for before it is built. Every dollar of the cost will have been provided for before a single brick is laid, and the members and followers will enter their new church edifice absolutely free of debt. There will be no overdrafts to make up, nor mortgages to disturb the harmony and spiritual thought of worshippers; no promise-to-pay envelopes with name and amount of subscription left blank; no begging from pulpit or preacher, from a Carnegie fund, or any similar source. In fact, to do so would be in direct violation of the Christian Science Manual, which forbids any such source. Any one soliciting subscriptions on behalf of Christian Science is not a true Christian Scientist. The contributions to the building fund of a Christian Science Church are voluntary and unsolicited. The only thing that is known is that there is a building fund; gratitude and thanksgiving for the spiritual uplift and physical healing of its members are the sole and only incentive to giving. Christian Scientists rejoice in secret gratitude and bounty, "hidden from the world, but known of God."

LETTER OF APPRECIATION

To the Prudential Insurance Company of America—

Gentlemen,—We wish to tender our hearty thanks for the prompt manner in which you settled our claim, on the life of our late daughter Lena. Your representative called on us immediately upon being notified, and we assure you we appreciate the promptness with which the claim was paid. Thanking you again for all the kindness and courtesy shown me, and recommending your great company to any one taking out insurance, we remain,—

Yours sincerely,
Mr. and Mrs. Darrah.

Many Collections Have Been Added To The Victoria Museum

From time to time the splendd collections in the Museum in Public Library are augmented by gifts or loans, and as a result the museum as it stands at present, is worthy of a visit from all residents of Peterborough who are interested in curios. Although some may have the opinion that they have seen all that there is to see, a tour of the collection of relics now on exhibition will speedily undeceive them. For the care, responsibility for, and arrangement of these, great credit is due to Messrs. T. A. S. Hay and G. H. Clarke, the two gentlemen in charge of the museum at present.

Among the latest contributions to the museum is a collection of Indian archeology, which is highly interesting. The collection includes stone relics of hundreds of years ago, arrow heads, pipes of all descriptions, iron axes from the miniature to the mammoth size, and other works of the ancient red man. Silver hair broaches and buckles worn by the squaws of years ago are included in the collection and the change in style from the olden day custom and the present time is very clearly exemplified. In all there are 2,322 pieces in the collection.

The skulls of the mound builders, dug up while excavation work was being carried on near Young's Point a few weeks ago, have also been added to the large list of relics in the museum.

A fine collection of military badges is also on exhibition. They represent almost every Canadian regiment, and numerous foreign corps. Old arms used centuries ago, revolvers and pistols of the early stages have also been collected, either by loan from some relic collector or outright gift. The majority of the arms which have been recently received are from the collection of D. A. Woods, Toronto. Shells fired at Santiago in the Spanish-American war are also on exhibition.

Collection of Coins.

The collection of coins is one of the finest in Canada. Included in the lot are coins of the ancient Grecian and Roman governments, which are very rare specimens. There is also a collection of old bills and bonds donated by Mr. Woods. One of the bonds issued to raise money to help the cause of the South in the Civil War is among the list. Theer is also a display of valuable coins owned by Fred T. Brown of Peterborough, and Mr. Brown is to be congratulated on the work he has accomplished in securing the collection he is showing at the museum.

Mineral relics, the headlight of the first engine which ran over the Peterborough and Cobourg line, as well as a sportaman's kit of years gone by also prove highly interesting as well as instructive.

One of the choicest of relics and one which every Canadian who has read the history of his country will be interested in is that of an accordion which belonged to Louis Riel, instigator of the rebellion of '37. The accordion was secured at Bostok. Riel had evidently fled a moment before, as his clay pipe, which was found beside the accordion, was quite warm. Another relic of interest to Canadians in general is a Boer flag captured at Johanesburg. Seven Britishers hit the dust in the capture of the flag, which still bears blood stains of that terrible struggle. It was donated to the museum by Col. Greenwood, C. M. A. There are shown plumes which some brave Britisher carried with him to Waterloo and also a badge of a member of the Scots Greys, that noble regiment which was such a big factor in causing the route of Napoleon in the dying moments at Waterloo.

Another notable relic is an original commission signed by General Brock on May 1, 1812 which advanced Sergeant Durand to the rank of Captain. The Captain was identified with the Fifth Regiment of Lincoln Rifles, which was literally wiped out at Lund's Lane. There is also a medal ribbon picked up after one of the battles in India in 1799. It was donated by Webber Turner.

A SCREED ON SMELLS BY "PURE AIR"

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Sir,—In Tuesday's issue of your paper was a letter about the incinerator. Now the writer of that letter did not put it half strong enough. In the first place it never should have been built in the city; anyone knows there was nuisance enough around the C.P.R. station and the wharf without adding any more to it. The incinerator should have been built on wheels, then it could have been moved into the different wards and let each of our town officials have a share in the perfume. We south end people don't want to be selfish you know, as we have more than our share of such attractions. We could easily let the rest of the city have a share. In driving the Royal party around the city these places of interest should not be overlooked, but pointed out to them just to let them see what smart city fathers we have. We must have our bread wrapped for the benefit of the people's health, but I think you better leave the bread alone and wrap up these places, these nuisances, where people have to hold their noses, especially around the C.P.R. station. In conclusion I would like to give a word of praise to Mr. Collins, the driver of our water waggon. To my mind we are getting better service than we have had in years. Thanking you Mr. Editor for your valuable space, I am,

Respectfully yours,
Pure Air.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKET

Special Wire to The Examiner:

UNION STOCK YARDS, Toronto, May 21—Receipts were fair for Thursday: 48 cars, 286 cattle, 2072 hogs; 154 sheep and lambs, 61 calves.

Cattle: Trade in cattle was barely steady, as nearly all of the abattoirs and butchers had got supplies for the week.

Choice butchers steers, $8 to $8.25, and a few cattle at $8.50.

Good butchers steers, $7.75 to $8.

Medium butchers steers, $7.50 to $7.75.

Common butchers steers, $7.25 to $7.40.

Choice butchers heifers, $8 to $8.25.

Common butchers heifers, $7.50 to $7.75.

Choice cows, $7 to $7.25.

Good cows, $6.50 to $6.75.

Canners, $3.75 to $4.75.

Feeders and stockers: Market firmer; short-keep feeders, 900 lbs., sold at $8, the highest price yet.

Choice steers, $.40 to $7.60.

Medium steers, $7.25 to $7.35.

Stockers, $6.50 to $6.75.

Milkers and springers: Market firm at $55 to $100 each; bulk sold at $70 to $90 each.

Calves: Receipts were light, not beginning to be enough to supply the demand.

Choice veals, $9.50 to $10.50; good, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $8, and common, $6 to $7.

Sheep and lambs: Market for sheep and lambs was easier, especially spring lambs, the quality of which was not as good as usual, too many small lambs being offered.

Sheep, $6.50 to $7.25.

Culls and rams, $4.50 to $5.50.

Lambs, choice ewes and wethers, $8.50 to $9.50.

Spring lambs, $5 to $8.50.

Hogs: Receipts were larger and prices easier.

Selected, fed and watered, $8.35 and $8 f. o. b. cars and $8.60 weighed off cars.

KING'S PLATE LOOKS EASY FOR BEEHIVE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 22.—"The King's Plate race looks like a gift to Beehive" is the heading of the Toronto Star sporting editor's prognostications to-day for the classic race to-morrow. Beehive, which is owned by Harry Geddings, is far and away above every other horse favourite for His Majesty's guineas. Beehive is particularly good in heavy tracks, and present indications are that the course to-morrow will be distinctly muddy.

Conference Will Drag For Weeks

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, May 22—Proceedings, this morning, at the Peace Conference were confined to informal talk between the mediators and the Mexican representatives, presumably as to the status of Carranza's Constitutionalist delegates who are expected here Monday. The prospects are that the conference will drag out for weeks, although some correspondents are guessing that it will be over next week.

Is Hydro Commission After Seymour Power Company's Plant?

The Campbellford News says:

The News was credibly informed that the Hydro Commission are at present making an inventory of the Seymour Power Company's plant. Upon enquiry at the power house we were informed that such was not the case, nor were the company making their own inventory at this time.

It was admitted, however, that an official of the Hydro Commission had been making an inspection of the plant.

With the Hydro stepping into the light and power business in Peterborough, it would not be very surprising should they appear here. Hon. Adam Beck some few weeks ago stated in Toronto that the Commission might find it necessary to take over some companies in this district. In this light the official's visit may be significant.

Enjoyable Social Function at East City Club Rooms

Last evening the Girls' Auxiliary and Men's Club of St. Luke's Church entertained those taking part in the recent Minstrel Show, at the East City club rooms. A large number was present and a very pleasant evening was spent in progressive euchre. The prise winners were Mish Clara Adams and Mr. Geo. Butcher.

At the conclusion dainty refreshments were served.

APPOINTMENT OF A POLICE MATRON IS APPROVED OF

Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Regarding the censure of the Police Commissioners by the Woman's Council, kindly let me say to the Police Commissioners through the Examiner that they have the approval of a large number of Peterborough women as well as men, in their attitude toward the police woman agitation.

The appointment of a police matron is what is needed, and no more competent person could have been chosen than Mrs. McElhiney. She is already familiar with the work and is fitted by nature to perform the duties of the position. She has been working in cooperation with the Chief of Police, which is another qualification in her favour.

Just here let it be noted that the petition presented to the Commissioners by the Woman's Council had the signatures of only a small number of the women voters of Peterborough. Not all the women who were asked signed that petition and many who did sign it, when afterwards spoken to, confessed that they had given the subject no consideration, but signed it upon the representation of the women who presented it, or to please their friends. There is little doubt that the situation was not clearly understood by the majority of women.

The members of the Woman's Council may speak for themselves as they see fit, but let it be noted that they have no authority to speak for the women of Peterborough. Their actions so far in regard to social questions have not the sympathy of women of intelligence and experience in these matters.

All serious minded people will agree with the opinion of the Police Inspector of Scotland Yard who says: "After a long experience in dealing with crime of the world we do not find women effective." He also states that a woman's efforts are more effective as a "mother confessor" than they are as a detective: herein we acknowledge the wisdom of our Police Commissioners in appointing Mrs. McElhiney as police matron.

Yours truly,
Mater.

BOY OF FIFTEEN HAS HIS HEART ON RIGHT SIDE

WAUKESHA, May 21.—To have lived to the age of fifteen years supposing himself no different physically from his fellows, and then to learn of such a vast difference that his case was worthy of record at a great hospital, is the somewhat unusual situation in a former Waukesha lad, Kenneth Lebaar, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lebaar

During a slight illness a year ago, the attending physician discovered that Kenneth's heart was on the right side.

His case is the seventh of the kind on record at the Post-Graduate Hospital.

LITTLE RAIN FALLS IN MAY SO FAR

Official Month Record is Consistently a "Dry" Document

Rain is greatly needed at the present time. The last rainfall of any account fell on April 28th, to a depth of about three-quarters of an inch. Scarcely any has fallen during May as yet. During the winter, November and January were the only months that came up to the average in precipitation, and the outlook is for low water this summer, especially in view of the fact that the total for last year (24 inches and 11-100) is the least for some 20 years. The previous year (1912) had the greatest amount since 886. Almost 40 inches fell in 1912.—W. P.

EMPIRE DAY WAS FITTINGLY CELEBRATED

Rev. F. J. Sawers Delivered a Patriotic Address to Normal School Pupils This Morning

APPROPRIATE CHORUSES

Empire Day was fittingly celebrated at the Normal School this morning, when the students enjoyed a patriotic entertainment featured by an address by Rev. F. J. Sawers, of St. Luke's Church, on Empire Day.

Rev. Mr. Sawers' address was as follows:

Empire Day, was begun twelve years ago to be observed in schools as an educational movement, for the inculcation of the virtues which go to make good citizens of the British Empire. It is celebrated everywhere in the British Empire, in India, Australia, New Zealand and all the other British possessions.

On Empire Day we think of the greatness of the British Empire. There was a stamp issued by Sir William Mulock, Postmaster-General of Canada a few years ago, bearing a map of the world with the words "we have a greater empire than has been."

The British Empire is, by far, the greatest in extent of country and number of people. Think of the area —thirteen million and a quarter square miles. Think of its population of 484 millions, one quarter of the world's human life.

As we think of the great area, its inhabitants, its marvellous resources, we may say with truth "we have a greater empire than has been." Naturally we are proud of our great heritage, of the swaying growth and greatness of the Empire.

Ideals of Anglo-Saxons.

We say we are proud of the Empire —why? Is it because of the broad lands and the scattered paths? Is it a matter of figures of arithmetic or multiplication? We are especially proud because of the ideals for which the Anglo-Saxon race, the dominating influence of the British Empire, have ever stood. The British Empire in the past has been known as the fearless champion of freedom, fair play and equal rights. All men within the British Empire are entitled to honest British justice, impartially administered. The people of the British Empire have been made up of God-fearing, law-abiding, industrious people.

Is it not upon these foundations that the British Empire has been built? Among its foundation stones will you not find religion, high morality, undeviating justice, true liberty? As the superstructure is raised of the same great materials, so will the future welfare of the British Empire be assured, we may note F. G. Scott's "Hymn of Empire":

Strong are we? Make us stronger yet
Great? Make us greater far;
Our feet be laved by ocean's fret,
Our crown the polar star.

'Round earth's wild coasts our batteries speak,
Our highway is the main;
We stand as guardians of the weak,
We burst the oppressor's chain.

Great God, uphold us in our task,
Keep pure and clean our rule;
Silence the braggant words that mask,
The wisdom of the fool.

The pillars of the world are thine,
Pour down thy bounteous graces;
And make illustrious and divine,
The sceptre of thy race.

The Ties That Bind.

We may ask now what are the ties that bind all the scattered peoples, that make up the Empire, the different nationalities into one? We have, first, held allegiance to the King—a long line of splendid monarchs. We think of "Victoria the Good"; "Edward the Peace-Maker, and of our own King, George, Second, of the ties of blood and race which gave us great Canadians, the tests of the truth that "blood is thicker than water." The United Empire Loyalists give us a great example in this respect. Third, our common traditions, of justice, freedom, honesty, fearlessness, courage. Of freedom Tennyson wrote these lines:

It is the land that freeman till,
That sober-suited freedom chose;
The land, which girt with friends and foes,
A man may speak the thing he will;
A land of settled government,
A land of great and old renown,
When freedom slowly broadens down,
From precedent to precedent.

Of courage, when we speak of the decadence of the British race, we remember the incidents in connection with the sinking of the Titanic, and the heroic death of Captain Scott and his companions in the Antarctic. When we speak of our literature do we not remember that Shakspere, Scott, Defoe, Dickens, Thackeray, George Eliot, Milton Chaucer, belong to us all as Anglo-Saxons?

Our Army and Navy.

How many times has the British Army given of its best for Canada? Do we not feel secure under the guardianship of Briton's navy?

Such then are some of the ties that bind us close together. Together, though separated by wide oceans. The bond of the one ruling monarch, of the sources of blood and race, of common tradition and literature, of our army and navy.

We say that we are proud to be members of so great an Empire and rightly so. But this glory in our Empire will be an empty thing, if we do not see responsibilities corresponding to greatness of Empire. We remember the motto, "noblesse oblige." That great heritage which is ours urges us to realize the responsibilities that belong to it.

Canada's Problem.

To-day, in Canada, we find ourselves faced by a great problem, a problem, which, in duty to the Empire, as a whole, as well as to our own national life—it is the great problem of immigration. What relation has immigration to the Empire, you may ask. A great and far-reaching relation. We realize that Canada is bound to be a great and united nation, of high and great ideals, a nation that cherishes the great traditions of national life handed down from generations of Anglo-Saxons. We feel that the character of the immigration into Canada to-day is in great menace to the consolidation of national life. In the last fifteen years nearly three millions have been added to our population by immigration, of these a little over a million was from Great Britain, nearly a million from the United States, and nearly a million mostly from countries of Europe—not a safe element in our city populations. In Montreal fifteen per cent. were born in foreign lands. Twenty per cent. of Winnipeg's population was born in Europe, and ten per cent. of Victoria's population was born in Asia. In 1901 a large percentage of Canada's population was of British origin, in 1911 the percentage was greatly reduced. In the fiscal year 1913-14 immigration from Great Britain decreased 5 per cent; from the United States it decreased 22 per cent.; from other parts of the world it increased 19 per cent. Do we see what this means?—In thirteen years there have been added to our comparatively small population one million from various countries of Europe, with entirely different ideas of personal and national life. One million from Europe in the last thirteen years—an increase last year of 19 per cent with a decrease in immigration from Great Britain and the United States.

Canada needs immigration; but the great question is whether the immigration Canada is receiving in such very large numbers can be assimilated. Those who have given this important matter the closest study seem to feel that these people cannot readily be assimilated; that some of our western population, Hindus, Chinese and Japanese in British Columbia will require a long process of assimilation; and the large increase in European immigration is going to make the process an almost impossible one, under the present circumstances, because these European people are forming communities among themselves, and so are in a large measure outside the sphere of Canadian influence in a way, that they will retire if there are only a few Europeans settled here and then in a district distinctly Canadian.

A serious menace.

You will agree with me, I feel sure, that by this very large European influx, Canadian national life and imperial ideals are seriously endangered; and it is well for us to realize the direction in which Canada is drifting by reason of the present large immigration of non-Anglo-Saxons. Can we feel that the present direction is towards the strengthening of imperial sentiment and the binding together more closely of all the people of Canada. He would be a great optimist, who would feel that.

I might speak at this point of the debt to the Empire in the way of contribution towards the navy that seems necessary for imperial stability. Must not Canada do her share in the matter of imperial naval defence? What Canadian has not felt humiliated by the fact that while Australia and New Zealand have done something noteworthy in this matter, Canada has done nothing. In addition to our national responsibility as citizens of the Empire, we have a personal responsibility in respect of personally aiming at a high standard of moral and civic relationship, that becomes us to reach and maintain in order to be worthy of the magnificent heritage our imperial relationship represents.

The following programme was given:

Scripture reading and prayer.
Opening chorus by the School, "God Bless our Fair Dominion."
Reading, Miss White—"A Song of Canada."
Chorus by School—"Only a Small Bit of Bunting."
Three part song, Form II. — "Oh God of Bethel."
Reading, Miss Muriel Anderson—"My Own Canadian Home."
Chorus—"Oh, Canada."
Reading, Miss M. Campbell — "The British Flag."

THE GROCER'S PREDICTION.

Subbubs—"I'm going to start a garden of my own. In a few months I won't be kicking about your prices."

Grocer—"No, sir, you won't. You'll be wondering how in the world I can afford to sell vegetables so cheap."

Trainer of King's Plate Favourite.—Harry Giddings, r., of Oakville, Ont., who has charge of Beehive, the favourite for the King's Plate this year, who has already won two King's Plate races with St. Bass in 1911, and Hearts of Oak in 1913. Mr. Giddings is considered one of the most capable and painstaking of trainers, and his horses are always ready for a hard race when they go to the post.

A DAMNING REPORT ON THE BALKAN WAR

NEW YORK, May 22—According to the report of the international commission which conducted a prolonged inquiry at the instance of the Carnegie peace endowment, the recent conflicts between the Balkan peoples were the worst of all possible wars. The report of the commission, or rather the major part of it, now made public for the first time, proves ad nauseam, that every law and usage of civilized warfare was outraged by every one of the comatant states.

The armies without exception disregarded all the provisions of the convention of 1907, framed by the Hague conference to mitigate the unnecessary horrors of war. Many of the infringments were deliberate; they were committed under orders by officers; even such high commanders as the crown princes of Greece and Servia and General Savoy of Bulgaria.

But the acts of the regularly enrolled soldiery were not the only, perhaps not the worst abominations. The partisan bands which now cooperated with them and again skulked in their wake committed deeds of atrocity that stagger the imagination. Even the "peaceful" population took advantage of the ebb and flow of hostilities to murder, outrage and plunder their neighbours of different racial affinities of religious affiliations.

The commission speaks without prejudice of the spirit in which the three kingdoms, Servia, Bulgaria and Greece went into the earlier war for the liberation of Macedonia. The instincts and motives, though primitive, "belonged to that class of better human traits which was is believed by many to call forth." Nor were the worst tracities perpetrated in this conflict. It is true that all the allies especially the Greeks in Macedonia and the Bulgarians in Thrace, gave way to lust for revenge upon their age-long enemies. But even so, the worst of the outrages were committed by the partisan bands and non-combatants who took advantage of the allies' victories to pillage and slay.

It was when the second war broke out, in which Bulgaria was pitted against all the other powers of the peninsula that a hellish frenzy seems to have seized upon all.

Same Old Trouble, Petes Fail To Hit And Are Beaten 1 to Nil

Bloomfield Failed to Hand Sterling a Run to Work On---London Scores Victory in the First Game of the Series.

SCORED IN THE FIRST

LONDON, Ont., May 21. — The youthful pitcher, Hammond, of the local Canadian League Club, more than got his head out of the water in his baptism before London fans this afternoon when he shut out Peterborough by the score of 1 to 0, allowing but three widely scattered hits. But few opportunities presented themselves to the visitors throughout the whole contest where a base hit would have been a disaster for the big Ohio lad, as each time he emerged unscratched. Outside of the opening inning "Iron Man" Sterling pitched wonderful ball and held the Tecumsehs' contact by making his fielders keep the hitters' efforts well distributed.

NEW MEN FOR PETES

Hard Hitting First Baseman is Expected to Report To-morrow—Another Outfielder is Also Looked For

HOLIDAY GAMES

Several new men may be seen in action at Riverside Park on Monday when the Petes play two holiday games with the Erie Yankees. A new first baseman named Swarting, who comes with the reputation of being a hard hitter, is expected to report here to-morrow and will break into the game on Monday. A new outfielder who can hit is also expected, and every effort will be made to strengthen the club in the department where it has been shown to be most weak. With ordinary strength on the attack the Petes should have won three out of the four games played this week, instead of only getting one decision. Strings are out after the needed hitting strength, and by next week the Petes should look a different aggregation. Erie will be here for a four-game series next week, playing Monday morning and afternoon, and Tuesday and Wednesday, after which the Petes leave on a long trip, playing St. Thomas, Toronto, and Ottawa, and with thirteen road games to play before they return to Riverside Park on June 8th.

Tickets are on sale for Monday's games at Trebilcock's, Collins' Cigar Store, White House and Oriental.

Arrangements have been made to have the men of the visiting 15th Regiment and the local 57th Regiment attend the morning game. Their admission will be arranged and every man in uniform will be allowed to go into the grounds.

With fine weather there will undoubtedly be record crowds in attendance at the holiday games.

POLICE COURT.

At the police court this morning, a local man was fined $10, to be paid in ten days, for dumping night soil on a vacant lot. A charge against a local man of assaulting a girl by striking her with a whip, was dismissed by his Worship, Magistrate Dunable.

A BOX OF CIGARS FOR EVERY HOME RUN MADE HERE BY THE PETES

Mr. J. L. McIntyre, representing S. Davis & Sons, Limited, high-class Cigar Manufacturers, Montreal, makers of the famous "Nobleman," arrived in town last evening, and on behalf of his firm has offered a box of their celebrated "Perfection" brand of cigars to any Peterborough player making a home run at Riverside Park. Here is a chance for some of our hard hitters to make the fans happy, boost their batting averages and at the same time win a box of good smokes. Mr. McIntyre says he hopes the boys commence making good on this proposition in their next series with the Erie "Yankees," commencing on Monday the 25th, Victoria Day, and that they will continue the good work throughout the year.

Any player winning a box of "Perfection" may secure the same by calling on Mr. A .W. Clydesdale, the well-known wholesale and retail Tobacconist, George St., who will hand the smokes over.

The Church League Opener

Double Header Will Be Played at Riverside Park To-morrow

Lovers of amateur baseball will see some real sport at Nicholls Oval at 2 and 4 p.m., Saturday, when the four teams of the Church League clash in the opening series of games. The teams have been practicing hard for several weeks and should put up some snappy ball. George Street Methodist and St. Paul's will start the ball rolling sharp at 2 p.m. Both these teams are in good shape and are old time rivals. Each has been aspirations for the splendid silver trophy presented recenty to the League by A. W. Cressman. Both teams are strong in their batteries.

The second game, at 4 p.m., will also be lively. Both teams put up a good fight in the hockey league. In baseball they are stronger. Fans will be well repaid by a visit to the Oval on Saturday. It will give a good line on all the players of the four teams competing, and is an ideal spot for the afternoon outing. There will be no admission charge. Come along and cheer for your favourite team.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Yesterday's game was a tough one for Bob Sterling to lose. So far he has yet to break into the win column, but he should have had a start yesterday. Any time a pitcher goes in and holds the opposition to one run he should pretty near cop the decision. His team-mates failed him utterly, however, not giving him a run to work on.

That there is nothing wrong with Peterborough's pitching staff has been amply demonstrated this week. Cresswell held Ottawa to two runs on Monday, Schettler chased them off the field scoreless on Tuesday, and Sterling allowed London but one measly run yesterday. A total of three runs scored off them in three games by hard hitting clubs like the Senators and Tecumsehs indicates pitching of the highest grade, and it is a crime to see that kind of twirling wasted because of the utter failure of the Petes to hit behind their pitchers.

BASEBALL CHATTER

Four runs in four games and yet people want to know what is the matter with the ball team.

Three hits! Why Troutie made that many himself on Wednesday.

The Petes can't even hit their stride.

Pretty tough when a pitcher goes in and holds the other fellows to one run and then can't win the old ball game.

In three games this week local twirlers have only allowed their opponents a total of 3 runs and yet two games were lost because the Petes could not score a run for them. Can you beat it?

Pitchers on other clubs are giving away four or five runs and yet winning games.

The Senators in Wednesday's contest scored almost three times as many runs as the Petes collected the first four days of the week.

LEAGUE WILL OPEN MAY 30TH

Sporting Editor, Examiner.

Sir,—If the fan, who by last night's paper, appeared to be a little dissatisfied, or ignorant, mostly ignorant, as to the date decided upon by representatives from the respective teams for the opening of the Mercantile Baseball League, if this same little boy had made a few inquiries it would have saved him unnecessary trouble. However, for his benefit, we might state, that afterevading the Canadian League dates and having the grounds improved, the date decided upon for the first game is 30th May, a little earlier, he will find, than the games commenced last year. The schedule has been drawn up some days ago and will be printed accordingly. Re the Exhibition grounds, eevrything is being done that is possible, and will be in readiness for the opening game. Certificates have been printed,and each team is asked to be represented to-night at the meeting to receive same and discuss other important business, in Y. M.C.A. parlours at 7.30 p.m.

Next time you go to press, Mr. "Fan," try to be sure of one fact before you make any assertions.

Baltic In a Collision

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., May 22.—The huge liner Baltic collided this morning with the small steamer Carrire, and it was rumoured for a time that many lives were lost. Later, however, both vessels loomed up out of the fog with serious damages to each.

NEW BOOKS AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

The following new books have just been placed on the shelves at the Public Library:

Monte Cristo and his Wife—Dumas.
History of France, 2 vols.—Duruy.
Tess of the D'urbervilles—Hardy.
Mayor of Casterbridge—Hardy.
Jude, the Obscure—Hardy.
Far from the Madding Crowd.—Hardy.
Return of the Native—Hardy.
Here are Ladies.—Stephens.
John Halifax, Gentlemen.—Craik.
Story of Phaedrus.—Hillis.
Terms of Surrender—Tracey.
Intriguers—Bindloss.
Salamander.—Johnson.
John Inglesant—Shorthouse.
Political and Literary Essays—Earl of Cromer.
Land of Gardens (Brittany)—Le Braz.
America As I Saw It.—Tweedie.
Life Story of a Dog.—Mitton.
Life Story of a Tiger.—Mocker-Ferryman.
Life Story of a Squirrel.—Bridges.
Life Story of a Cat.—Hunt.
Life Story of a Fowl—Hurst.
My Life With The Eskimos—Stefansson.
Where and Why Pubic Ownership Has Failed.—Guyot.
Philippines, Past and Present (2 vols.)—Worcester.
Carmen Sylva—Loti.
Highways and Byways of the Zoological Gardens—Pocock.
Once to Every Man.—Evans.
Life Story of a Fox—Tregarthen.
Quick Action.—Chambers.

many of the above books need no introduction to the reader. Thomas Hardy has stood for many years in the foremost ranks of English authors and to-day he is admittedly the premier novelist of England. His books are, many of them, classics. "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," the one by which he is best known, is a very strong piece of writing, although the subject is a sad one. It possesses a strong fascination for the older class of readers.

"John Inglesant," by Shorthouse, is a book which in its day was looked upon as one of the finest romances ever published. The author took twenty years to write this book. Nobody who has read it has had aught but praise for the work. It appeals to old and young alike.

"Political and Literary Essays," by the Earl of Cromer, is a collection of articles written at various times and, as their general title implies, they deal with literary and political subjects. Many of them are reprints of articles written for the Spectator, and all are interesting and instructive. Among the subjects handled are International Free Trade, Lord Milner and Party, The Ottoman Empire, Imperial Rome, Portuguese Slavery, Patriotic and National Songs, Government of Subject Races, Translation and Paraphrase, and the Writing of History.

The Philippines, Past and Present, is a remarable work and gives an illuminating description of the wonderful strides that have been made in the Islands under American rule. The illustrations add very largely to the value of the book as they show so clearly the advance that has been made by the Bontoc Igorots in the arts of civilization.

"America As I Saw It," by Mrs. Alec Tweedie, is a very readable volume, written in a racy manner, and is full of shrewd observation, and sometimes caustic comments.

"Carmen Sylva," by Pierre Loti, is of course, a splendidly vivid piece of writing, as is to be expected from the pen of one of France's foremost writers. It deals not only with the character of the Queen of Roumania, but with that of the late Sultan of Turkey, and gives interesting glimpses of life in the near East.

The younger members of the community will find the Life Stories of Animals good reading.

"The Land of Pardons" is a book that is very much handicapped by its title. It is really a tale of life in Brittany, and should be of great interest, especially to Catholics.

The Public Library has a really fine series of works on Arctic exploration, comprising the journeys of Shackleton, Scott, Peary and others, and it is now still further enriched by Stefanson's account of his Life with the Eskimos. The book is profusely illustrated and tells of the blond Eskimos whom Stefansson states he discovered, and who are supposed to be descendants of Norwegians who were wrecked in the Polar regions nearly a thousand years ago.

WIDOW OF FELS TO CONTINUE HIS SINGLE TAX WORK

CINCINNATI, May 21—What Joseph Fels did for the Single Taxers of the United States—for the Single Taxers, too, of England, Denmark, Germany, France, Spain and other countries—his widow, Mary Fels, proposes to continue to do. She has sent a letter to the Joseph Fels Commission here, and the commission has made this public. Mrs. Fels is now in England, carrying on her late husband's work.

Mrs. Fels in her letter to the Commission says that she will continue until July 1 the $2,000 a month her husband gave in support of the single tax movement in the United States. On that date, with the Fels estate settled, she hopes to see her way clear to renewing the Fels offer to match dollar for dollar all the money contributed by the Single Taxers of the United States up to some such limit as $25,000 per annum." She adds:

"It is my desire to comprehend personally the policy, plans and personnel, not only of the United States Commission, but of similar groups and commissions working toward the same end in other countries where Mr. Fels was giving support to our cause, his and yours and mine. It seems right to me to look over the field; then to resume the work everywhere at about the same time with a clear personal knowledge of the movement in all its part and as a unit. And I may then have a suggestion for all the commissions, for some loose sort of co-ordination and active interchange of ideas and experience."

Mrs. Fels sounds a clear call to further battle for single tax, writing:

"I do not want to give money alone but I want to give myself to this cause of justice, as my husband gave himself. It was a happiness to him to work for it; it will be a happiness to me. And if I give personal service thus it may put me in a position to plead for personal service for mothers also; and not as a duty, either, but as a happiness."

She advocates strongly the Fels Commission's appeals for a large number of small contributors to the Singe Tax cause—contributors of a dollar or less. "From my heart" she writes, "I approve that policy. It is human; it is democratic; it is good politics." With such a system propery executed, she thinks the Single Taxers will "soon have the country girdled with living chains of living people, all devoted happily to a happy cause." She says the results already achieved by contributors spontaneously "matching their own dollars as Joseph Fels did," indicate success, and that such success "will indeed be a monument to Joseph Fels for that was his spirit."

The "results already achieved" to which Mrs. Fels refers are shown in a report of the commission. It gives 117 new pledges aggregating $403.45; 398 contributions, which formerly aggregated annually but $2,124.95, increased to $4,370.75; 220 confirmations of former pledges, aggregating $3,307.97; 18 whose contributions aggregated annually $161 reduced to $50; and 126, who formerly contributed $793.25, discontinued.

Heading the names of the commission members is the name of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who has just joined it. The treasurer is A. B. du Pont.

CARLYLE ALWAYS INSPIRED PEASANT.

Thomas Carlyle, coming of a peasant race, never conformed to society garb. He was always the inspired peasant. He would sometimes go out in his old dressing gown, over which he buttoned a big coat grey with age. When he was left alone in his house, he delighted in swilling his flagstones with pails of water, and many a distinguished friend found him thus engaged, with a kind of smock on and his bushy hair tousled. He went about all the summer among the highest aristocracy in a frieze jacket which was part of an old dressing gown. Chesley way knew him. One said: "He may wear a queer hat, but what would yer give for the 'eadpiece inside of it?"

THE MAN SELECTED TO SUPERINTEND THE GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY, ENG.

H. W. Thornton Undertakes a Vast Responsibility--What he Has Achieved So Far

By Herbert Corey in Buffalo News

"Your best chance of success, said Henry W. Thornton, "comes when you are in your shirt sleeves."

Thornton is the young American railroad man we was recently picked out to take charge of the Great Eastern railroad in England. The member of the Board of Directors who did the picking tactfully added to his declaration that Thornton is the best young railroad man in America for such a position, the clause, that English railroad men have run to seed.

"They do not grow," said the director, wagging his head like a mechanical bear. "They do not expand. Their vision is limited."

However that may be—and English railroaders resolved themselves into a lodge of sorrow when they read it, and then began to gather bricks for Thornton—the American youngster has been growing and expanding ever since he got into railroading. After he had graduated in football and engineering at the University of Pennsylvania he applied for a job to John C. Sims, then secretary of the Pennsylvania railroad company. He had a letter of introduction from a man of influence.

"Hum," said Sims, when he read the letter. "This gets you a job—but it don't hold the job for you, young man. I'll carry you on the salary list for two years. But if by that time you haven't been promoted, salt won't save you. I wouldn't have that sort of a man on the right of way."

Thornton was on his third promotion at the end of two years. He has been moving upward ever since—but he has never gained a step by flattery, back-bending, or lying, if the opinion of men who have been nearest to him is to be taken at par. On the other hand, he hasn't hesitated to fuss with his superior officers—and fussing with the official family of the Pennsylvania railroad is commonly reputed to be as dangerous an occupation as biting the tip off a stroke of lightning. On one occasion a baggageman on his division had climbed on to the tender—where he had no business to be—just before the engine rolled into the ditch. The baggage man was killed, leaving a destitute family.

"Give me $1900 for the widow and kids," Thornton asked of headquarters.

"Not a nickel," said headquarters, coldly. "It was the baggageman's fault that he was killed."

"Maybe," said Thornton, with his big jaw setting. "But meanwhile a young widow and three boys are in danger of starvation. I'm going to put her on my pay roll at $45 a month—and when her name comes off mine comes with it."

She's still there, so far as any one knows. Perhaps that incident helps expain why Thornton was selected to take charge of the Great Eastern—for the position of general manager on an English railroad is equivalent to that of president of the United States.

The Great Eastern handles a greater commuting traffic than any other road in England, and its short haul business, during the summer resort season, is perhaps the greatest in the world. But—according to the commuting public of England—its directing heads assay heavily in pure bone. Ticket sales are never stopped, no matter how badly the line may be blocked. Trains are held 1 namoke-filled tunnels, rather than permit a step aside from routine procedure.

"Any one can handle engines and cars and tunnels," said a railroad man. "but Thornton is a wonder at handling men. That's why England took him."

He must not only teach the railroad using public of England to love the Great Eastern—which entails a complete reversal of all the laws of human nature—but he must also win the loyal support of the Great Eastern employees. One may faintly imagine what sort of a job that will prove to be. Thornton's former associates on the Long Island road, however, declare that he will win.

"He is kindly," they say of him. "He will get up—he has got up many times—in the middle of a blizzardy night to do a man a favour. He never blocks the door of his office to a man who has something to say.

"But he is a good disciplinarian. The man who lies to him once never gets a chance to lie twice. He has human sympathy and understanding for the weakling and the bonehead—and puts them where they can do no harm—but he has no mercy on a rebel. He is six feet four inches tall and weighs 230 pounds, all bone and muscle. He never hunts a fight, but he never hides under the bed."

In a way, American railroaders add their methods will go on trial with Thornton in England. This may not seem fair, but it is the fact. He must shake up the operating force on the Great Eastern—no easy job in a country where too many nephews of useless hold jobs—he must reform its methods, newly equip it with rolling stock and superintend the electrification of the large part of the system on which the greatest commuting traffic is handled.

And he must do all this without arousing antagonism from within while winning back the friendship of the public. It is one of the biggest jobs ever thrust at a railroader. Two months ago the public had never heard of Thornton—and he is only 42 years old.

Thornton is one of the many youngsters who got their first lessons in railroading while they were still in knee breeches and bare feet. For a time he wavered in his life ambition between running an engine and being a bishop. The glory of the engineering profession was obvious to him every time he walked through the railroad yards in Logansport, Ind., where he was born — and he walked through them every day—but whenever the bishop came to his father's house they had boodles of fried chicken with brown gravy. He has just one bit of advice to give:

"Be fair to every one," he says. "But don't worry too much whether others are fair to you."

Marvels Of The Day In Surgery Some Striking Cures Reported

Successful Surgeon Must Have Caution as Well as Daring And Special Genius

"Don't let them operate," is the tearful counsel of the neighbour or friend who knew somebody who died "under the knife."

As a matter of fact, almost nobody does die "under the knife," says the Kansis City Star. It couldn't happen, unless the hands were so unskilled as to bar their owners from the operating room of reputable hospitals.

There is no science of greater direct benefit to mankind than the science of surgery. The kindly knife has cured where nothing would have availed. In orthopedics alone — that branch of surgery which cures crippled children — surgery has earned its place as one of the great beneficent sciences, and in a hundred other branches it has to its credit the most striking cures.

Within the last decade certain branches of surgery have advanced more rapidly in America than in Europe.

New Word Leads.

European surgeons, always before the teachers in this department of science, have acknowledged themselves the taught, and that, too, by men young in years and in practice of their art. In several of the larger American cities striking feats of surgery are being daily performed by young men of genius. The last Nobel prize for surgery crossed the Atlantic and was placed in the hands of a Philadelphian.

The successful surgeon must be daring, but as cautious as he is bold. A constructive imagination, absolute knowledge of anatomy, keen intelligence, fine poise, a steady hand—all these and more are required of the successful surgeon. Moreover, he must have a special genius for his science.

Not all the most crucial operations are the big ones. Sometimes it is the man who knows just where to make a small incision, and just how to seige upon the respiratory rise or fall of the diaphragam, who saves a life in a second of time.

Light into the Body.

When a bean or kernel of corn is swallowed by accident, Nature promptly begins her own surgical methods. She makes the patient cough. Often success crowns her efforts. Sometimes the foreign object, even one as smooth and innocent as a grain of corn refuses to be coughed up.

A Kansas City surgeon recently introduced a bronchoscope into the right lung of a small boy and extracted therefrom a large kernel of corn, which the surgeon afterward planted and from which two ears of corn were produced. The little lad's lung was an ideal place for the preparation of the corn against planting time, which, as it happened, had just arrived.

It is only within recent years that surgeons have been able to introduce light into the body. Formerly all their work was done in the dark, as it were. Their instruments were guided only by their knowledge of the organ being explored.

Now the surgeons may illuminate a man's stomach and explore it at his leisure for odds and ends of lost articles, such as shirt studs, trouser buttons, etc. Or he may introduce the light tube, composed of a tiny electric bulb, into a bronchoscope or an esophagoscope or traechoscope, locate the offending object, then withdraw the light and insert the tiny forceps with which he removes the object.

Swallowed Safety Pin.

In some of the bronchoscopes the lamp is permanently attached—a self-lighting axair, somewhat resembling those carried in the pocket of policemen and others for midnight emergencies.

Safety-pin chasers have been wonderfully developed within the past few years.

The man who invented safety pins brought a boon to babies, but mothers who are subject to fits of coughing or sudden laughter should not hold open safety pins in their mouths. Recently a mother held two at one time in her mouth. A tickling in her throat made her cough and suddenly indraw her breath, with the result that one of the safety pins dropped into her lap and the other one into her esophogus, away down close to her stomach. It was wide open, of course, just ready to pin up baby.

The mere thought of removing an open safety pin from away down inside of a living human body makes one shudder. The pin is always pointed upward, for it couldn't be swallowed the other way. A few years ago attempts to remove open safety pins often resulted in death, always in dangerous and painful lacerations. Now the pin is neatly closed before any attempt is made to remove it.

Close Pin in Stomach.

There are several devices used to close a safety pin in the stomach or esophagus. All are made on the same principle — a ring at the end of a slender tube. The yielding tissue that incloses the mis-placed safety pin permits the operator to pass the ring to one side and slip it over the spring end of the pin and draw it up until the small torturer is securely closed.

The little lamp enables the dotcor to see when all is ready, and in a moment, out comes the pin, still perfectly good and capable to doing efficient service in fastening baby's most useful garments.

Misplaced pins are almost as troublesome as misplaced affections. There should be a law against holding them in the mouth. Often they are swallowed without the knowledge of the unlucky swallower.

This happened not long ago to a small lad in this city. He is only 5 years of age and the son of a fireman. He plays all day long at firing his toy engine, and it may be that he was pretending the pin was his match, and was holding it in his mouth, while he tried another "match" on his small trousers.

Pin in Tonsils.

Anyhow, the pin disappeared and another had to be hunted up. Nobody knew where it went and nobody cared. But, presently, the small fireman began to complain of his throat. The tousils appeared swollen and one, in particular, to be greatly enlarged. When no other symptoms of tonsilitis or other throat trouble developed, the family physician advised the removal of the tonsils and the little lad was taken to the surgeon whose deftness in the use of the new throat instruments had robbed this operation of half its pains.

After the removal of the little fireman's tonsils one of them was found to contain a common or garden variety of pin, which had done its best to be swallowed, but had not quite succeeded.

One ay a small patient was examined with the gastroscope—an instrument introduced into the stomach to explore it for foreign objects. A little lamp illuminated the ten-year-old interior, and, there, reposing nearly and viciously, was a black pants button. To remove it was the work of a moment. It was caught in the dipper-like end of the gastroscope and deftly pulled out, leaving not so much as an irritating scratch on the sensitive lining of the patient's diaphragm.

There are other objects that contrive to get themselves swallowed. Nails in nearly all sizes have found their way into folks' interiors and screw eyes and other hardware have slipped down unwilling throats.

Millionaire Plans For Dream Slayer

Will Start Anew the Man who Killed in a Dream the Man who had Wronged Him

TO KEEP DAUGHTER

CHICAGO, May 19.—William Marshall Keith, the "dream-slayer," is free—free to pursue his life, so strangely interrupted, to a happy conclusion.

And now, at the request of Mr. and Mrs. James Patten, his future, his business and his wife, will be discussed and settled.

Keith killed Walter Paul for his treatment of Mrs. Keith and Thelma Keith. He claimed he shot him in a dream, and a jury acquitted him.

"This is wonderful—to be free and to know that such people are believing in one!" he exclaimed, drawing a deep breath. "All through this whole affair I have thanked heaven every night that I had my daughter Thelma and that the Pattens believed in me.

"It is now the one thought of my life to repay to them every cent they have spent for my trial. It is not a question of sordid money — it is the moral aspect of the case. Think of it. In my moment of deepest despondency, when I had not a cent in the world and no one to turn to, they came forward, and solely because they wanted to see justice done, they financed my defence.

In the letter I wrote Mrs. Patten I explained to her that I did not ask one penny from them—I only wanted some help in getting an attorney to fight my case for me. I am not a beggar. I am going to work my fingers off until I can pay them back.

"As for what I shall do now—well, after a few days I am going back to my old home to visit my family until I get some of my strength back again. Then I am going to Chicago. I like this city, and why should I leave it when I have done nothing to be ashamed of. What I shall do then I do not know.

"Not for the world would I by any act destroy a bit of the faith Mrs. Patten has put in me, by allowing her name to be associated with my trial. I feel a debt I can never express."

"My wife!" he said. "I had almost forgotten her in this moment of thankfulness!"

"Will you take her back?" he was asked.

"Never!" came the answer quickly.

"No—I am not going to go to her, or let her come to me. My two younger children will live with my father. Thelma I shall keep always with me. But it would not be right to any of these children to have them associate with their mother again. That is a terrible thing to say—but it can not be helped."

One of the jurors said that at no time was there any question as to the verdict of acquittal. The discussion was as to the form the verdict should take. He said that the big factor in determining the case was the testimony of Thelma, the daughter, relating to the attempt of Paul to attack her. This incident, the jurors believed, had more to do with making Keith crazy than did the confession of his wife, Rosebud, of her associations with Paul.

While in prison, penniless and without hope, Keith wrote a letter to Mrs. Patten, wife of the millionaire grain operator, telling her of his strange somnambulistic tendencies and that he killed while in a dream.

The Pattens became interested in his case and through their interest he now faces life afresh.

URIC ACID SUFFERING

Uric acid is an accumulation of poisons which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Bishop Scores Modern Fashion

HAMILTON, May 21.—"Modesty in dress is one of the things that every young lady should heed. Many young ladies are too much taken up with fads and fancies of the present lay costumes to think of their modesty and the result is that each day the costumes of the ladies present disgraceful scenes on the streets of Hamilton. Want of modesty is a disgrace at any time, but in the matter of dress it is a bigger disgrace than in any other line." In these words, Bishop Dowling gave advice to the young ladies of Loretto Academy in response to an exceptionally brilliant welcome they extended to him on the occasion of his visit yesterday afternoon.

Bishop Dowling, in his address to the young ladies, gave a heap of good solid advice, which was so worded as to be greatly appreciated by all. He opened by telling that the month of May was always a sacred one to him, as besides being named in honour of the Virgin Mary it was also the month in which he was consecrated to the priesthood. He also told them what their ideals in life should be and explained that while it was not his wish to have them all become nuns, he thought that the sacred life which the sisters led was the ideal one and he thought that some of them should become nuns, for if they did not the good work which the sisters were doing would fall back for the want of young women to take the veil and carry the work on. After giving them other words he gave them a good plain talk on the matter of dress, laying special stress upon the extreme way in which many of the women of today were garbing themselves. He closed by suggesting that the pupils of the academy be given a holiday tomorrow and the idea met with the hearty approval of the young ladies.

THE ONLY MEDICINE FOR TEETHING BABIES

Mrs. Alcide Charland, Ste. Sophie de Levrard, Que., writes: "I am well satisfied with Baby's Own Tablets which I used for my little one during the teething period. I know of no other medicine to equal them." Mrs. Charland's testimony is that of thousands of other mothers. Once the Tablets are used a mother will give no other medicine to her little ones. The Tablets are guaranteed to be absolutely safe and are not only good during the teething period but cure constipation, colic, colds and simple fevers—in fact they cure all the minor ills of little ones. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

In the manner and customs of the legal profession of Ireland, in the latter part of the eighteenth century, there is a strong similarity between the members of the Scottish bench and their Irish brethren. In that they were heavy port drinkers and did not hesitate to indulge in it while sitting on the bench. It is reported of one Irish judge that he had a specially constructed metal tube like a pen holder, through which he sucked his favorite liquor, from what appeared to the audience to be a metal inkstand.

CHILDREN'S EYESIGHT

An astonishing number of school children suffer from the effects of imperfect vision, and many of them are unjustly blamed for being unambitious or mentally stupid. It has been shown by scientific investigation under municipal direction that from 20 to 30 per cent. of the children in public schools have defective vision and should wear Glasses.

We make a specialty of examining children's sight by the most improved scientific methods, and if your child does not need glasses we will tell you so frankly, and make no charge for the examination. We carry a special line of heavy weight Children's Spectacle Frames in Gold Filled and Aluminum.

Should your child require glasses we guarantee that the glasses we fit on the proper correction and will give best results.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By LOUIS TRACY

The close intimacy between Mrs. Marten and the stranger from Colorado attracted slight comment. No breath of scandal fluttered the dovecotes of Newport. The behaviour of the pair was exemplary, and beyond the accepted fact that, if any hostess desired the presence of one she must invite the other, gossip about them was entirely noticeable by its absence. The mutual use of Christian names from the outset established a tacit comradeship, and the only growl uttered behind their backs was an occasional complaint from some anxious mother who found her attractive daughters completely eclipsed, in the eyes of at least one eligible young man, by the millionaire's wife.

Once, and once only, before the crash came, did Nancy allude to the purloined letters. She and Power were riding along the Cliff Walk before breakfast, when she broached the subject quite unexpectedly.

"Derry, I want to ask you something," she said seriously. "Did my father and you ever quarrel without my knowledge—before I left Bison, I mean?"

"No," he said.

"Don't be stupid! I hate answers in monosyllables. When you say no like that, one suspects that it may really be a kind of yes."

"Then let me make it the most definite of negative. Remember, you fixed a period. The last time I spoke to Mr. Willard before I was—before I went to Sacramento—I had supper at the ranch."

He carried reminiscence no further. She stole a look at him; but his eyes were fixed on a faint blur of smoke rising over the azure plain of the Atlantic from an invisible steamship. On that unforgetable night of three and a half years ago, a starlight night of spring, she had walked with him to the mouth of the Gulch, and in bidding each other farewell they had exchanged their first and last kiss.

"Father was certainly not an enemy of yours then," she went on, in a singularly even tone. Indeed, she might have been debating a matter of utmost trivialty. "It seemed to me that he always welcomed you at the ranch. Why did he become so bitterly opposed to you afterward?"

He could have fenced with her, but deemed it preferable to speak freely. "I think he was annoyed by my rapid success," he said. "He had made a failure of things generally, and I candidly admit it must have been exasperating to see a youngster like me, and a steady-going fossil like Mac, step in and secure a fortune out of a place where he had met with nothing but ill-luck. Those who get rich quick often incur animosity in that way."

For a brief space there was silence. They seemed to be listening to the slumberous splash of the breakers on the rock afar below, which, with the pleasant creaking of saddlery, and the hoofbeats and deep breathing of eager horses held in restraint, were the only sounds audible in that wondrous solitude. They were passing a part of the cliff known as the Forty Steps, a euphonious name describing a series of railed staircases, cut in the solid rock, which afforded as irregular if safe passage to the beach. Ochre Point, with its millionaire residences, lay a mile, or less, in front, and on their left was the illimitable ocean. After a bath and breakfast they had promised to join a large party on a steam yacht bound for Narragansett Pier, when luncheon and a picnic at a light house would fill the afternoon. This day was precisely similar to any other day of a whole fortnight in its round of amusements. The weather was nearly perfection, and distinctly unsuited for a heart-searching discussion but Nancy seemed to be in a mood that either invited self-torture or wished to witness the writhings of her companions, because she would not leave a difficult subject alone.

"Supposing, Derry," she continued "supposing I hadn't got married when I did, do you think you would have discovered the mine just the same?"

Now he was compelled to go off at a tangent. "You resemble the majority of your sex in your desire to raise non-existent bogeys for the mere pleasure of slaying them," he began.

"Which is the bogey—my supposition or the mine?" she broke in.

"How can I imagine what would have happened in circumstances which did not take place? The discovery, or rediscovery, of the mine was one of those extraordinary bits of good luck which Fortune sometimes thrusts upon her favourites. It might have occurred if you had never have left Bison but, on the other hand, it might not."

She nodded her complete agreement. By not answering he had answered fully.

"Yes, the goddess was certainly kind to you," she said. "The cow boys did not often ride through the Gulch firing their revolvers. In fact, the only time I can recall any such riotous proceedings was on the day of my wedding. That must have been your lucky day."

She watched him closely, but his face showed no sign of emotion. Yet she was sure that his eyes narrowed somewhat as they continued to search the horizon, and his lips were set with a dourness hardly warranted by an enjoyable ride on a caretree morning.

Then she smiled, very slightly, as though she was well pleased. She was not cruel; but any woman who wants to assure herself that a man loves her will understand why Nancy Marten was putting Power on the rack, and even tightening the cords almost beyond endurance.

"I'm sorry if I have worried you, Derry," she said, with a tender caress in her voice that in no wise helped to mitigate his suffering. "One more question, and I have done. Have you told your mother that I am here?"

There was no help for it. He lied boldly.

"Yes," he said.

"What did she say?"

"I am expecting her reply any hour."

"And Mac? Did you give him my love?"

"I haven't written to Mac since I came to Newport; but I shall not omit a word of your message when I see him, or write, whichever comes first. . . . Have you any idea what time it is?"

"Time these lazy sons were stirring themselves. Come, Hector!"

She shook the reins on her horse's neck, and the big hunter jumped off in a fast canter. Power raced alongside, and the two struck into a by-road leading to Bellevue Avenue. Power was busying his brain to formulate some colourless phrase which would supply a natural-sounding comment by his mother on the fact that he had encountered an old friend in Newport. He knew well that he dared not tell her; for the tidings would distress her immeasurably. But he need not have troubled himself. Nancy never mentioned the matter again, for the very convincing reason that she did not believe him. Her allusion to Mrs. Power was one last turn of the screw. She was as certain that he could no more explain her presence to his mother than she could explain his to her father. Twice had she written his name in letters to Denver, and twice had she destroyed the letter. On the night she met Power she had dashed off a hot and impetuous note asking Willard why Derry's letters had been withheld; but, in calmer mood, this dangerous query was given to the flames. On a second occasion, about a week later, Power's name crept inadvertently into a description of some incident at the Casino, and the warm blood rushed to her face and neck when she found how near she was to committing the letter to the post without having read it.

All that day Power was puzzled by a new serenity shining in Nancy's eyes. He could not guess that, more candidly analytical than he, she had looked fearlessly into the future and had discounted its agonies. She felt now that she had been tricked into a loveless marriage; that Marten had purchased her with exactly the same cold calculation of values which he would have applied to a business undertaking. Willard had proved as potter's clay in his hands, and every turn and twist of the project was clear to her vision as though her husband, yielding to sardonic impulse, had set forth the unsavory story in black and white. But it was one thing to recognize how she had been duped, and another to strike out boldly for instant freedom. And in that respect the woman was braver than the man. Power was content to live in the golden present, to stifle the longings and plaints of silent hours; while the woman who loved him thought only the end she now held firmly in view and recked little of the means whereby that end might be achieved.

Their unhappy plight was intensified by the fact that their characters had deepened and broadened alike during the years of separation. The boy and girl attachment of those heedless days in Colorado might not have withstood the strain of being thrown together again constantly after so long an interval, if the woman's nature had not advanced step by step with the man's. Experience of life, and the educative influences of foreign travel and good society, had done for Nancy what quiet study and seclusion from his fellowmen had done for Power. By such widely different paths they had reached a common standard of earnest purpose and high resolve, and Nancy, at any rate, was passionately determined not to sacrifice the remainder of her youth because of the unhallowed compact which sold her to gilded misery and robbed her of her one true mate in all the world.

As she did not blink the consequences, there remained but to carry through her desperate scheme as speedily and quietly as was compatible with no risk of failure. Her one difficulty lay with Power himself. She had first to break down his sense of honour, a task which could be accomplished only by making him see clearly that her life's happiness was at stake. And she knew him, oh, so well—far better than he knew himself! Let Derry once find tears in her eyes, tears which he alone could dispel, and the seeming fortress of his self-control would crumble into dust. Let her once twine her arms around him, and what man-made laws would wrench them apart? For, by her reasoning, the solemn ordinances which govern frail human nature were wholly on her side. If marriage were, indeed, a divine institution, its very essence was profaned when Hugh Marten laid his sorry plan and made it effective by sheer force of money. She, the woman, would be called on to pay for her liberty in the coin minted of ill-repute, that base metal for whose currency her sex was mainly responsible. But those friends whom she valued would hear the truth, and they would rally round her, never fear! Why, in this delightful island, where pain and anguish seemed to be banished by the imperious ukase of deities presiding over the revels of the rich, people recognized as leaders of society had passed already through a furnace of scandal and seathing exposure such as she and her lover would never be called upon to face.

And that was why Power was at once bewildered and raised to the seventh heaven by her confident, contented smile when they met among the crowd of merry-makers on the yacht, or exchanged a few common place words when doing the round of Narragansett Bay and at dinner that evening in one of Newport's summer palaces.

As his dog-cart was in waiting, he had no excuse to escort her home, but, in saying good-night, she contrived again to perplex and delight him by a whispered request.

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Edmonton, Alberta, Can. —"I think it is no more than right for me to thank you for what your kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"When I wrote to you some time ago I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had organic inflammation and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend your medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills, and think they are fine. I will never be without the medicine in the house."—Mrs. FRANK EMBLEY, 903 Columbia Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta.

The Other Case.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. CHILD, Beatrice, Neb.

HOW THEY SAVED THE HOME

"I DON'T see," said Mrs. Grant, sinking down into a chair as she came in from feeding the chickens, "how we're ever going to keep the place, to say nothing of getting a living, now your father's gone."

"I don't see," answered her sixteen-year-old daughter Leta, who sat by the window sewing, "how we're going to get along without father in any way." The tears filled her eyes, and a shower was evidently imminent.

"There, there, dear, don't cry. Of course we loved father dearly, and it's a terrible blow to lose him, but we must try to bear up. You know he would tell you to be brave, Leta. And we have a real problem ahead of us, now. The place isn't all paid for, you know, and father counted on getting work right along until the orchard was in full bearing, and the mortgage lifted. Neither you nor I can make what he could even if we went out to work, and I'd rather we kept together anyhow. What we had in the bank was nearly all used up by the doctor's bill and the other expenses. Fortunately the interest was just paid before he took sick, and it's summer, so we shall have most enough to eat from the garden. We've got to think out some way before fall, though." Mrs. Grant sighed, but, rested for the moment, arose to see to her dinner on the stove.

Mrs. Grant had been a widow just a week, following her husband's brief illness. Her bereavement came so suddenly that her husband had made no plans for her or their daughter. He left no will, but as there were no other heirs, the place was theirs to do as they pleased with. The family had come to California a few years before, and had bought a small place, setting out the greater part to apples. Two acres in front contained a "mixed" orchard, various kinds of fruit planted for the family use and pleasure. Several rows of berries of different kinds, and currants, asparagus and rhubarb, proved that the family liked variety, and that Mr. Grant believed in growing all he could to save buying. A good garden of various vegetables was well started, so, as Mrs. Grant had implied, they would not starve for the present. But clothes and incidentals would need cash, to say nothing of the interest that would come due next spring. The eggs from their hundred hens bought their simple groceries, besides the necessary feed, and they had a good cow, that kept them in milk and butter most of the year. There was no horse to look after, for their old mare had died the year before, and Mr. Grant had not felt able to replace her. The immediate problem was therefore simple, but the necessity of looking ahead kept Mrs. Grant awake nights. She did not want to lose the home—they would be in a worse case than ever then.

"Leta," she said one morning, "we must use less cream, and make more butter to sell. And I'm going to buy a hundred incubator chicks, besides setting every hen that gets broody, so we'll have more eggs to sell next year."

"We might raise some ducks or turkeys," suggested Leta.

"I don't like ducks," answered her mother. "They eat too much. But we might try some turkeys. They could have the pasture lot to run in, and they bring a good price in the fall."

The next month was a busy one, but the weather was favorable, and they had good luck with their young poultry. Then one morning Leta came in with a few ripe berries in her hand.

"There are going to be loads of berries, mother," she said. "They are ripening fast, too."

"Well, that's good," said her mother. "There ought to be a good many to sell. But we have no way to deliver them."

"Perhaps we could get Mr. Lummis to carry them with his." Mr. Lummis was their nearest neighbor, a hard-worked but kindly disposed man.

"We can't bother him all the time. No, we've got to think up some other way. We'll see when the berries are ready."

A few hot days made the berries ripen fast, and mother and daughter picked every day in the early morning. They ate all they wanted, and canned all they needed, and finally Leta had her bright idea.

"Let's put out a sign, mother—'Fresh berries for sale.' Lots of people don't have berries, and such numbers of automobiles pass here with folks from town. They might like some, too."

"I suppose we might try it," said Mrs. Grant doubtfully, "but I don't count much on signs."

"Let's make it different, mother, from the dirty old signs we see generally. Let's make a nice one, and put the word 'To-day' on, and change it often."

So Mrs. Grant made a neat signboard, and nailed it to the gate-post. Leta, who had some skill in lettering, made a pasteboard sign which was tacked to the board. This read "Fresh berries to-day." No attention was paid to the sign the first day, and even Leta felt somewhat discouraged, but the day after a wagon stopped, and the driver bought two baskets of loganberries. There was scarcely a day after this while the berries lasted that they did not have one or more calls. Some people bought regularly, while one or two customers wanted a whole case for canning. Any day there were berries left over Mrs. Grant would can or preserve them the next day, so as never to sell any but fresh fruit, and never to waste any.

Soon the garden began to ripen more vegetables than they could use, and they added "vegetables" to their "for sale" sign. It appeared that vegetables fresh from the garden made as true an appeal as the berries, not only to city folks, but also to those ranchers who preferred to confine their attention to their main crop, and not "bother" with vegetables.

Several peach and cherry trees began to bear a fair crop this year, and for the early peaches and some extra fine cherries they found a ready sale. Everything they did not need to eat or did not sell, they put up in small jars, neatly labelled, and the close of the summer found them with about three hundred jars of various kinds of fruit and vegetables, besides an order they had filled for one of their automobile customers, a business woman in the city. In addition to the fruit, they had canned tomatoes and beans, and had put by root vegetables enough to last them until the next summer. Winter cabbage and some other vegetables were set out, the young pullets began to lay promptly, and the spring calf had paid for what little butcher's meat they used.

The first of December Mrs. Grant opened the sealed box into which they had been dropping change all summer, and she and Leta counted out their cash savings—thirty-one dollars and forty cents.

"Pretty good, I call it," Mrs. Grant said, as she contemplated the neat piles, "especially when we had to hire the cultivating done. Well, I'll put twenty dollars in the bank toward the interest, and we must make the rest do for what clothes we need this winter. Lucky father laid in a good supply of wood last spring. I don't think we shall need any more until next spring. But we need a good deal more money than that. And what are we going to do this winter? I could do plain sewing, but there's not much in it for so much hard work. I might bake bread. They tell me there is always a good sale for home-made bread in town, but I don't know how it would be out here. I might try."

And try she did, for Mrs. Grant was not one to let the grass grow under her feet. The sign now read "Fresh bread Tuesdays and Thursdays" and "Canned fruits." Leta had been well instructed in plain cooking, and was a great help to her mother in the kitchen as well as in the garden. Mrs. Grant could make extra good bread, and soon found that she could sell all she had time to make. As the winter passed, she added brown bread, gingerbread, cookies and doughnuts on certain days. Her bank account grew slowly but steadily during the winter. She retained old customers and made new ones, and as spring approached she found herself with a new problem on her hands. The customers who had become used to the good home cooking did not want it to stop, but two pairs of hands could not keep up the steady baking required as well as do the garden work and attend to the chickens and cow. Now chickens must be hatched, garden must be planted, and berries would soon be ripe. Should she let one branch of her business go, and if so, which?

Just then luck stepped in, as luck so often seems to do, and helped her to a solution. Some cousin of hers, a brother and sister, living in the east, wrote her that the young man had been ordered to go west and live outdoors, and he and his sister, who were alone in the world, wanted some chance to earn a living in not too strenuous a way. Could Mrs. Grant suggest anything? Mrs. Grant wrote back promptly that if they were willing to give her the help she needed, they were welcome to a home with her and her daughter as long as they cared to stay.

The offer was accepted; a tent for the young man soon appeared in the orchard, and two more willing hands made the summer's work fly. There was of course more fruit than the past year, but more customers, too, so there was left less fruit to put up. The interest had been paid promptly, and something had been put in the bank toward paying off the principal, and Mrs. Grant and her daughter looked forward to buying a horse another year if everything went well. But they were satisfied that their signboard paid, with solid work behind to back it up. With continued good health, the home would certainly be paid for in a few years, and best of all, mother and daughter were together in the home the father had begun for them.

"MY ONLY MEDICINE"

Says Mrs. Corbett, Ann "Fruit-a-tives" "They Keep Me in Perfect Health"

MRS. ANNIE M. CORBETT

Avon, Ont., May 14th, 1913

"I have used "Fruit-a-tives" for Indigestion and Constipation with most excellent results, and they continue to be my only medicine. I am highly pleased with "Fruit-a-tives" and am not ashamed to have the facts published to the world. When I first started, about six years ago, to use them, I took four for a dose, but I cured myself of the above troubles and gradually reduced the dose to one tablet at night.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives" I took salts and other pills but the treatment was too harsh. I thought I might as well suffer from the disease as from these treatments.

Finally, I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised with a letter in which someone recommended them very highly, so I tried them. The results were more than satisfactory and I have no hesitation in recommending them to any other person. They have done me a world of good. I get satisfaction from them, and that is quite a lot". Studebaker FOUR $1375

THE FULL-FLOATING REAR AXLE

Equipped Throughout with Timken Bearings

Completely Equipped Electrically Started and Lighted

The Axle Carries The Car—The Shaft Only Turns the Wheels

The Studebaker FOUR is the only car in the world at $1375 with a full floating rear axle—equipped even to the hubs with Timken bearings.

This is of vital importance because ordinary axles push downward on the shaft or journal; absolutely frictionless bearings cannot change that condition.

In our Full Floating Rear Axle the shaft turns freely in a steel housing, carrying the last ounce of power directly to the wheels.

The wheels, in turn, revolve just as freely at the ends of the housing, because they run on Timken bearings.

Be clear upon this vital fact:
Upon the efficiency of your axle depends the efficiency of your motor.
It isn't so much a question of power creation as it is of power transmission.

That is why, by scientific engineering, we have straightened and cleared the way for the flow of power from motor to wheels.

That is why we have given the question of alignment—of perfect balance—and of lubrication the care their tremendous importance warrants.

That is why we carry our laboratory tests and our accuracy of measurements to a degree heretofore unknown in any but the best shop practice.

Our sole aim is to transmit—with maximum dependability—the maximum of power to and through the rear axle.

The Studebaker FOUR attains this result as it has never been attained in the past.

You appreciate this result to the full when you learn that it is the only "Four" at $1375 with full Timken equipment—even to the hubs.

TRICKING THE PORTERS

An illustrating the unfounded complaints which are sometimes made against railway servants, W. F. Jackson, the general manager of the North British Railway Co., has been telling a good story, the facts of which, he said, were ascertained in the investigation of a complaint made by the principal actor.

An old lady turned up at one of the Glasgow stations, and going to a porter, said:

"I say, porter, can you tell me where I will get my train?"

"Where are you going, madame?" he asked.

"What have you got to do with that? Can you tell me where I will get my train?"

"But I cannot tell without——"

"Well, I'm not going to tell you where I'm going. I'll get some one else to help me."

With that the old lady toddled farther up the platform, and meeting another porter, propounded her conundrum to him.

"Where are you going, madame?" was his natural question.

"Oh," she retorted, "you are just as impertinent as your mate. I'm not going to tell you where I'm going."

She went up to a third porter and asked him if he could tell her where her train was. She got the same reply, and said, "Well, if you must know, I'm going to Paisley."

The porter directed her to the Paisley train, and just as it was leaving the platform she put her head out of the window and shouted:

"How do you feel when you've been 'had?' I'm not going to Paisley at all. I'm going to Edinburgh," which, it need hardly be added, is in quite the opposite direction.—London Tit-Bits.

When bluing clothes add just a little common salt to the water. It helps to distribute the bluing and prevents the clothes from looking streaked or patchy.

When next cooking asparagus add a little rice. The dish will be found most satisfactory.

A PAGE OF THE BEST HUMOR OF THE WEEK

"Hoots, mon! what ails ye? Can ye no' stand up?"

"Oh, aye—a can stand up, but a canna' stop up!"

Just A Creed.

"I always believe in saving something for a rainy day."

"How much have you saved?"

"Oh, I haven't saved anything, but I believe in it."

Hooking The Fish.

The young bride was exchanging her bridal dress for the going-away costume.

"Ines," she asked of the rather envious bridesmaid who was assisting her, "did I appear nervous during the ceremony?"

"Just a little at first," replied Ines, "but not after Gerald had said 'I do.'"

Mr. Who?

"John, it was very sweet of you to hold my hand all thru the moving-picture show. You haven't done that for several years."

"But I didn't hold your hand."

"Then who did?"

That Made a Difference.

She: "No, George, I cannot marry you. I want a man who possesses a noble ambition; whose heart is set on attaining some high and worthy object."

He: "Well, don't I want you?"

She: "Oh, George! I am yours!"

In Plain English.

One of the upper ten thousand who was visiting America accepted the hospitality of a gentleman in New York. When taking farewell of his host the latter asked him what he thought of the American people.

"Well," answered the nobleman, "I like them immensely, but I miss something."

"What is that?" asked the Yankee.

"I miss the aristocracy," replied the Englishman.

"What are they?" naively asked his host.

"The aristocracy!" said the nobleman in a somewhat surprised tone of voice. "Why, they are people who do nothing, you know; whose fathers did nothing, you know; whose grandfathers did nothing, you know—in fact, the aristocracy——"

Here he was interrupted by the American, who chimed in with: "Oh! we've plenty of them over here; but we don't call them aristocracy—we call them tramps."

One Notion.

"When the minister makes the happy couple one," asked little Rollo, "which one are they?"

"One too many!" promptly replied his bachelor uncle, Hector Grant.

THE WEDDING PRESENT

She: I suppose there's no fear of it falling?
He: You mean, no hope.

The wife of a wealthy manufacturer has occasion to call in the help of a new floor-polisher.

"Do you understand your business thoroly?"

"All I ask, madam, is that you shall inquire for yourself at my last situation. On the floor of the large drawing-room alone five persons broke their limbs during last winter, and a lady slipped down the grand staircase. It was I who polished the floor and the stairs."

Quite.

"Was your husband cool when you told him there was a burglar in the house?" asked Mrs. Hammer.

"Cool," replied Mrs. Gabb, "I should say he was cool. Why, his teeth chattered."

"Money talks," quoted the Sage.

"Yes, and it stops talk," added the Fool.

Comparative Values.

A German peasant had just lost his faithful cow. His wife became so grieved over the loss that her heart was broken, and she, too, died. Scarcely was she buried when one of the neighbors came and offered his daughter, another his sister, and a third his niece, for a wife, whereupon the farmer remarked:

"Well, I can easily see that it is better to lose a wife than a cow in this town. As soon as my wife is dead a choice of half a dozen wives is offered me, but when my cow died, they didn't offer me a single one."

Who's Who.

The class had just been enjoying a strenuous course in classic mythology, and as the result of the final examination the teacher expected to find some real gems of classic lore.

In answer to the question, "Who was Cyclops?" one paper read as follows:

"Cyclops was the man who wrote the encyclopedia."

While Bobbie was downtown with his Uncle Ben one afternoon several friends passed and cheerfully greeted the latter.

Some moments afterward the uncle was surprised to hear the boy inquire:

"Uncle Ben, when nearly all the hair is worn off my head will folks call me 'old top' too?"—Youngstown Telegram.

It was at a theatre in Manchester. The king, aged and infirm, was blessed with two sons. He was pacing up and down the stage, with a wearied, troubled look, exclaiming aloud: "On which of these my sons shall I bestow my crown?"

Immediately came a voice from the gallery: "Why not 'arf a crown apiece, guv'nor?"

Normandie: Can you dress within your income?

Bertram: Yes, but it's like dressing in an upper berth.

"Gentlemen, I can't lie about the horse; he is blind in one eye," said the auctioneer.

The horse was soon knocked down to a citizen, who had been greatly struck by the auctioneer's honesty, and after paying for the horse he said:—

"You were honest enough to tell me that this animal was blind in one eye. Is there any other defect?"

"Yes, sir; there is. He is also blind in the other eye," was the prompt reply.

Mrs. Hawtl had recently moved into the neighborhood.

"I thought I would come and tell you that your James has been fighting with my Edward," said one of the neighbors, calling at the door.

"Well, for my part," responded Mrs. Hawtl, haughtily, "I have no time to enter into any discussion about the children's quarrels. I consider myself above such trifling things."

"Very well," was the reply. "I'll send James over on a stretcher in an hour or two."

A scholastic journal gives this story as "strictly true."

A class had studied the first chapter of Acts, concerning the election of a new apostle.

"And how was Matthias chosen?" asked the instructor.

"They all jumped on him and kicked him," replied the bright boy of the class.

"Whatever put that idea into your head?" inquired the teacher.

"Well, sir, you told us. You read to us that 'the lot fell on Matthias'!"

Young Hibbard was exhibiting some photographs to a charming society girl, with whom he was very much in love.

"This one," he said, handing her a picture, "is my photo with my two French poodles. Can you recognise me?"

"Why, yes, I think so," replied the young woman, looking intently at the picture. "You are the one with the hat on, are you not?"

In "Stories from Bench and Bar" Mr. Arthur Engelbach tells of a judge and a barrister who were discussing the doctrine of the transmigration of the soul of men into animals.

"Now," said the judge, "suppose you and I were turned into a horse and an ass, which would you prefer to be?"

"The ass, to be sure," replied the lawyer.

"Why?" queried the judge.

"Because," was the reply, "I have heard of an ass being a judge, but of a horse never."

Pat and Mike, just after their arrival over here, went into a restaurant. On the table was a bowl of mustard and Pat took a big spoonful and put it into his mouth. The tears began to roll down his cheeks.

"Pat, what are you crying for?" asked Mike.

"I just remembered," said Pat, "that exactly a year ago today my poor uncle was hung in Ireland."

Mike, by this time, had a spoonful of mustard in his mouth, and the tears began to roll down his cheeks, too.

"What are you crying for, Mike?" asked Pat.

"Because you were not hung wid your uncle!" gasped Mike.

There was a new parlor-maid in the house, and Mrs. Hoecker was in some doubt as to her intelligence, so she asked at dusk:—

"Bridget, have you turned on the gas in the parlor, as I told you?"

"Yes, mum—every burner. Can't you smell it?"

LOW FIGURES.

Mistress (indignantly): Jane, whatever did you mean by wearing my low-necked evening dress at the 'Bus-drivers' Ball last night? Really, you ought to have been ashamed of yourself!

Jane (meekly): I was, Mum; you never 'eard such remarks as they made.

In a private sitting-room at a certain hotel sat a party of merry-makers, when there came a knock at the door, and an attendant announced, "The compliments of Mr. Blowers, the dramatic author, who is in the next room, and he says you are making so much noise that he cannot write."

"He can't write, eh?" said one of the party. "Why, tell him everybody who has seen his plays knows that!"

A few years ago a magic lantern was being shown in a country school. One picture shown was a wagon used in the time of King Pharaoh. It certainly was a curious construction, consisting of two straight pieces of wood, without either side or back. An old farmer was so amazed that he rose up and exclaimed aloud:—

"Now I now quite understand why Jo told his brethren not to fall o by the ."

A cook who had burned up a piece of veal weighing four pounds threw it away and reported to her mistress that the cat had eaten the meat. The lady placed the cat upon the scales and found it weighed exactly four pounds.

"There, Bridget," she said, "are the four pounds of meat, but where is the cat?"

A country doctor discharged his coachman on account of his unsteady habits. The coachman took service with the village butcher, and one day when driving a number of beasts to the slaughter-house he met his former employer.

"Well, Tom," said the doctor, patronizingly, "you are in a different sort of employment now?"

"Not at all, sir," said Tom, who bore his former employer a grudge. "Not at all; I'm still in the slaughtering business."

When Smith was about to start for the office one morning, the sharer of his sorrows and joys followed him to the front door and asked him to loan her five dollars.

"But you'll never pay me back," replied hubby demurringly. "I loaned you a five-spot last month, and that was my sad obsequies and tender farewell."

"I will just bet you a half a dollar," largely returned wifey, "that I will pay you back the five dollars on March 15th!"

"You're on, madam!" responded hubby, succumbing to his sporting instinct as he gave wifey the five-spot.

Came the morning of March 15th, when mother entered the breakfast-room with a doleful expression twisting up her pretty face.

Slum Child's Version.

A well-known philanthropist was giving us the other day a slum child's version of the story of the Garden of Eden.

She was sitting with one or two other children on the curb outside a public-house in Shoreditch, and her version of the story, picked up rather vaguely at some street-corner mission meeting, sounded deplorably like the recital of some public-house row.

After a few preliminary details she proceeded:

"Eve sez: 'Adam, 'ave a bite?'

"'No,' sez Adam, 'I don't want a bite.'

"'Garn!' sez Eve. 'Garn, 'ave a bite.'

"'I don't want a bite!' sez Adam."

The child repeated this dialogue once or twice, her voice gradually rising to a shrill shriek.

"An' then Adam took a bite," she finished up, dramatically. "An' the jammin' angel came along wiv 'is sword, an' 'e sez to 'em both: 'Nah, then—shiside!'"

The teacher wanted some plums in order to give an object lesson during school hours and, calling one of the small boys, she gave him ten cents and dispatched him to the fruit stand down on the corner.

"Before you buy the plums, Willie," she cautioned, "you had better pinch one or two to make sure they are ripe."

Little Willie flitted away. Soon he came back and smilingly put the bag on the teacher's desk.

"Oh, thank you, Willie," said the teacher, taking up the bag. "Did you pinch one or two as I told you to do?"

"Did I?" was the gleeful response. "I pinched the whole bagful and found 'em all ripe."

A guest in a Cincinnati hotel was shot during a quarrel. The negro porter, who heard the shooting, was a witness at the trial.

"How many shots did you hear?" asked the lawyer.

"Two shots, sah," he replied.

"How far apart were they?"

"'Bout like dis way," explained the negro, clasping his hands with an interval of about a second between claps.

"Where were you when you heard the first shot fired?"

"Shinin' a gemman's shoes in the basement of de hotel."

"Where were you when the second shot was fired?"

"Ah was passin' the Big Fo' de pass."

Be Careful When Cooking Mushrooms

The safest way to get edible mushrooms is to buy them of a reliable dealer, unless you are a mushroom expert and can gather them yourself.

Mushrooms, if they are not canned, should be cooked when fresh. Always cut them with a silver knife and cook them in porcelain, so that they will not be discolored. Sprinkle a little lemon juice over them to keep them from turning black while they are standing.

Mushroom Dainties.

Following are some recipes for mushroom cookery:

To make creamed mushrooms break or cut off the stems, wash and drain the caps, then pack them in a double layer in a shallow baking pan in which a tablespoon of butter has been melted. Crowd them closely and dust with salt and pepper. Cook in a moderate oven for half an hour and transfer them to a hot dish. Pour a cupful of cream into the pan in which they were baked, pour over the mushrooms and serve. They must be served on squares of toast, or in the city, where pastry patties can be bought ready prepared, they are served in the heated shells and garnished with a sprig of praley.

To make one quart of this appetizing cream soup, allow one-half pound of fresh mushrooms; peel and wash them and put in a porcelain-lined kettle, with one pint of boiling water, a little salt and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Boil lowly until very tender, then remove from the broth and press through a colander. Return to the liquor and add one tablespoonful of butter and one of flour rubbed smooth in a little cold milk. Stir over the hot fire until the mixture boils and is smooth, then add one pint each of milk and cream and continue stirring until the mixture reaches the boiling point. Season with salt, pepper, a dash of cayenne and a tablespoonful of mushroom ketchup. Serve very hot.

Mushrooms a la Maitre d'Hotel.

For this entree for luncheon or dinner choose large mushrooms which are perfecty fresh and white. Wash and dry them, then peel and cut off th stalks. Immerse them in melted butter or olive oil and let them stand forhalf an hour. Then sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper and arrange them on a wire broiler. Pace over a clear fire and cook slowly for about fifteen minutes, turning from side to side every little while. When tender, remove fro mthe broiler, place on rounds of buttered toast and serve with maitre d'hotel sauce.

To make the sauce, beat two tablespoonfus of butter to a cream, add slowly one tablespoonful of lemon juice, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and a tablespoonful of choped parsley. Spread over the mushroomsand stand them in the oven until the butter is melted and serve very hot.

Stuffed Mushrooms.

From one pound of mushrooms select eight of the largest, peel and set aside. Peel the remainder, chop very fine and add a tablespoonful of bread crumbs, two truffles, also chopped fine; salt and pepper to taste, and a little butter. Cut the stems of the larger mushrooms close to the cups and fill the latter with the mixture Put one tablespoonful of butter in a frying pan, and when hot, carefully lay the mushrooms in the pan and fry for twenty minutes. Then dish on rounds of toast. Add the remainder of the stuffing to the butter and cook for ten minutes. Add a cupful of rich cream; stir until the sauce boils again, then pour on the whole mushrooms and serve at once.

Mushroom Patties.

For six shells allow half a pound of mushrooms. Wash and peel them and cut into slices. Cook one tablespoonful of butter and one of flour together in a saucepan until well blended; then add half a cupful of white stock and half a cupful of cream and stir together until perfectly smooth. Add the mushrooms and stir slowly for fifteen minutes. Season with a teaspoonful of lemon juice, a grating of nutmeg and cayenne pepper to taste. Heat the patty shells in the oven, fill with the mixture, pour any that may remain around them, serve hot.

Mushrooms With Beefsteak.

While various species of mushrooms are used for serving with beefsteak, there is one in particular, commonly known as the beefsteak mushroom, which is particularly palatable with a thick, juicy steak. It grows on chestnut trees, makes its initial appearance in August and blooms until frost. After removing the upper skin and sports, the mushroom is cut into strips. Lay a pound of the mushrooms in a porcelain stew pan, cover with half a cup of stock, half a teaspoonful of finely minced herbs and a tablespoonful of butter. Stew gently for half an hour and pour over the

AN ATTRACTIVE COSTUME FOR AFTERNOON OR STREET.

Although there is quite a fad just now for contrasting bodices and skirts, for street wear, after heavy wraps have been laid aside, there will be a demand for the one-toned costume in one of the heavier silks, a light-weight serge or gabardine. One of the new figured moires is suitable to a frock of this description or a fine serge combined with satin; gabardine is new and has taken a strong hold on the fancy. This costume, 8283-8284, is developed in a dark blue gabardine with the vest in a figured tapestry in which there are touches of yellow. The bodice is cut kimono, and the skirt is a three-piece design with an applied circular tunic. No. 8283 requires to make in size 36, 1⅞ yards of 36 inch material; the skirt (8284) may be made in size 24 with 4 yards of 36 inch material.

The attractive feature of No. 8319 is the draped sash; in front it is arranged in three wide pleats, held in place by the panel, and it tapers down in back to form two ends, which may be knotted or tied in a bow. As shown here, the dress is made up in dark blue silk poplin with contrasting sash, collar and cuffs.

For a child of 8 the design requires 1⅞ yards of 36 inch material.

No. 8283—sizes 34 to 42.
No. 8284—sizes 22 to 30.
No. 8319—sizes 4 to 10.

THE LUXURY OF TRAVEL

Far from being a hardship to go from place to place, travel has become one of the luxuries of life. The modern traveller carries with him all the appurtenances necessary to comfort, fitted into the smallest possible compass.

The heavy dress suit case and bag of leather has given place to several kinds of rattan, wicker and woven straw cases that are light as the proverbial feather, neat and attractive to look at, and of varying prices, so that the poorest traveller may have something as light and comfortable as the rich one, if less ornate in finish.

The expensive straw cases are finished off with leather and brass or silver. Some are covered with waterproof cloth and all are made both with locks, clasps or straps around the bags that pass through handles at the top. Small dressing bags are made in the same manner and are fitted up with every accessory to the toilette, mounted in silver, ebony or less expensive materials, and made in sizes smaller than those employed in articles for the dressing table.

The woman's tiny folding apparatus for curling her hair may be tucked into a small place in the wicker bag, with a little flask of alcohol, if one is going to a place where alcohol is not easily procurable. A narrow box covered with brocaded silk contains a manicure set, fitted into a wonderfully small compass and quite as convenient as though in the more elaborate receptacles used at home. Into pockets that are sewed to the silken lining of a well-fitted case are tucked a flat "housewife," with all the implements for sewing; a silk-covered rubber hot water bag; an air cushion, also covered with flowered silk; a small rubber lined bag containing a washrag or sponge; one that fits over the nail and tooth brushes. These little rubber-lined bags are made of embroidered silk or linen, as one would make an envelope, with a loop and button to fasten the flaps down.

The entire sides of the case are taken up with silk pockets into which are tucked away slippers, a case containing a fountain pen and pencil, with postal cards, stationery and stamps, and a set of flat leaves of coloured flannel, tied between silken flaps, which hold different sizes of safety and other pins, with bodkin and card of baby ribbon attached to the top in a small ribbon pocket. The centre of the bag is comparatively free for garments, since the side pockets are so completely fitted up that no space is wasted.

Not the least of a traveller's comforts are the little straw cushions in pretty plaid effects, which can be had for a few cents and which make such cool head rests and cushions for porch and camp.

WORTH KNOWING.

Before using a new comb wash it in soapy water, and when dry rub with a little olive oil. It will then last twice as long.

To make jam or marmalade look clear without skimming it add a piece of butter the size of an egg before removing the fruit from the fire.

To remove rust from a knife, plunge the blade into an onion and leave it for an hour. Then polish in the usual way.

For perspiration stains sponge the stain with white vinegar. If colour is removed, touch with ammonia to restore it.

Salt added to the water in which dessert, candies or puddings are cooled will hasten the cooling process.

Meat May Be Injurious and Is Expensive!

Some people may eat lots of meat without injury to their health, but it's hard on their pockets. Others should avoid meat almost entirely, yet they eat it daily—these pay in both health and purse.

Either class will benefit by eating less meat and more Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes.

It gives much more nourishment than its cost in meat, is infinitely more easy to digest—consequently better for you.

GOOD FURNITURE FOR THE COMFORTABLE VERANDAH

The porch or verandah is each year furnished with more and more attractive and comfortable furniture, and the fact that much of it can be used in the house in the winter, when the house, because it is occupied, needs much more than than it is in summer, need s more furniture, makes the buying of even expensive pieces of porch furniture worth while.

WICKER BIRD CAGES.

In keeping with the out-of-doors are the wicker or willow bird cages. They can be left in their natural colour or else stained to match the rest of the furniture. Perhaps it is safer for this occupants if they are left uncoloured. Wicker, exposed to the air for a long time, takes on a mellow tone, anyway. By the way, birds, when they are hung out-of-doors, should always be hung out of the reach of cats. It is really cruel to hang a bird where he may be within reach of his natural enemy. He is caged and absolutely helpless, you must remember.

RAG RUGS AND GRASS RUGS.

Grass rugs hold precedence of all other sorts for the verandah floor. If the floor is tiled, it is frequently left uncovered, as the soft tones of the tiles are very decorative. But a rug saves wear on any floor, whether it is tiled or not. And if the floor of the verandah is old it improves its looks greatly. Moreover, it makes the floor warmer and less noisy. So the grass rug has come to enjoy a high place in the estimation of porch furnishers. This year rag rugs are also a good deal used for verandah floors. They can be had in almost any colour. If a special colour is desired, the rags can be dyed and woven to order. Grey or tan rugs with borders at each end of coloured stripes are very good, and so are the hit-or-miss patterns. The grass rugs are shown in new weaves this spring, and in many good colours. Those in various shades of green are still the most attractive for verandah use, unless the brown ones fit in better with the colour scheme chosen.

TWO CHAIRS AND A TABLE.

A charming piece of wickerware is a combination of a table and two chairs. The two chairs are fastened to a long wall of wickerware. Between them is a little stand or table, a drop leaf that hinges against the wicker wall and that can be propped up at will for a tea table or for a card table on which the persons sitting on the two chairs can play.

WITH A POCKET FOR MAGAZINES.

No porch is completely furnished without at least one chair that is furnished with a pocket for books and magazines and needlework. These chairs are no longer a novelty. And like everything that has passed the stage of novelty, they can be had for a reasonable price.

FOR FLOWER HOLDERS.

No verandah is complete that is not decorated with flowers. Flowering vines growing about the posts of the verandah are most attractive. Climbing roses and other vines can be trained over lattices that can be ordered to fit any space. Jardinieres of heavy pottery in browns or blues or greens can be kept filled with field flowers—daisies, buttercups, wild asters, or golden rod, each in its appointed time. Other bowls and jars and vases, of plain glass or of heavy pottery, can be filled with garden flowers for the verandah. Hanging baskets of Japanese, mahogany-stained split reeds or willow are very good on the verandah. They can be hung from the eaves or from brass or wooden spikes driven into the house wall for the purpose of holding them.

ECZEMA STARTED IN A RASH

Suffered Terribly. From Eyebrows Spread to Neck, Chest and Arms. Completely Cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

Briercrest, Sask. — "When my baby boy was about four months old he suffered terribly from eczema. The trouble started in a rash and was very itchy. It made him very cross and fretful. I noticed the rash first in his eye-brows. From there it spread to his neck, chest and arms. When he would scratch, it would make sores.

"I got medicine but it did no good. I tried different remedies without result. At last I got a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using them for two days I noticed a change. I then purchased a full-sized cake of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I would give him a hot bath with the Cuticura Soap every night afterward applying the Cuticura Ointment. Before I had used half of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment he was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. H. L. Stromberg, May 20, 1913.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

RONUK FLOOR POLISH

sinks right into the pores of the wood, leaving a perfectly dry surface. Ronuk produces a finish, silky and restful in appearance and so smooth and hard that all dust and dirt can be wiped from it with a dry cloth. It never need be scrubbed or oiled and is an effective antiseptic.

Ronuk is economical too,—a little of it covers a large surface.

It is also an excellent dressing and preservative for linoleum.

AN HOUR AMONG REPORTERS.

Oftentimes our courts attempt to force newspapermen to reveal their sources of information and just about as often the court finds that newspapermen, like Masons, won't tell.

One of the first of a long list of newspaper ethics that a reporter learns is not to divulge sources of information. The reporter who, when threatened or menaced, or even coaxed to betray such a trust, is not a newspaperman in the strict sense of the word. He is merely a newspaper employee.

Persons who make such demands of newspapermen should realise that when a man gives a reporter a news item, he does the reporter a favour. Is it right for the reporter, therefore, to betray the trust of a friend and make him liable to a long and tiresome explanation to the individual whom the item has possibly offended?

A newspaper item that is correct in every detail is just as liable to offend as one bristling with errors. It all depends upon who is hit. We have known persons to demand retractions for "stories" that were authentic in every detail. In fine, they ask the newspaper to apologise for telling the truth, to tell its readers that a truth is a lie and lose the respect of its readers in the bargain.

So can you wonder that newspapermen have paid fines and served prison terms rather than betray an honourable trust? And, as we said before, the newspaper man who would do otherwise is not worthy of the excellent traditions of the profession.

ELECTRICAL PROGRESS.

Possibility of Transmitting Heat and Power by Wireless.

Although electrical energy has become so commonplace that its use is regarded as an incident, it is within the memory of the most of us when its simplest applications were all curiosities. The engineer of the electric lighting plant, modern thirty years ago, if he entered the power plant to-day would find it difficult to understand the use and operation of the numerous electrical devices found therein, says the editor of Power.

The strides that have been made in this branch of engineering have surpassed the wildest dreams of thirty years ago. On one occasion a professor of electricity solemnly stated to his class that the trolley car would always require a trolley wire as a means of electrical transmission. To-day street cars are successfully operated by means of storage batteries. The professor spoke according to the light of his time and could not see the developments destined for the future.

One of the greatest overhead charges against the electric lighting plant is the cost and maintenance of the transmission lines. Although doubtless much thought has been devoted to the question of transmission line elimination, the problem has remained unsolved. Possibly the invention of wireless telegraphy has given inventors the key which will enable them to perfect a method of wireless electrical transmission.

The advance along this line is promising, for, according to reports, apparatus has been devised whereby electric lamps have been lighted at a distance from the generating apparatus without the aid of transmission lines.

What the success of this invention will mean is impossible to predict. With the first step taken in wireless transmission of electrical energy it would seem plausible to predict that not only will our buildings be lighted by wireless electrical energy, but that they will be heated as well. In the same manner commercial electrical energy could be transmitted for motor service.

It may be early to forecast what the forthcoming results of this new invention will be, but who would care to dispute that energy will soon be transmitted from point to point without the aid of transmission lines?

Try Salt To Relieve Catarrh.

Dozens of remedies are said to be cures for catarrh, and many do excellent work in that disease, but every household contains the best known remedy, and it is actually so simple that most persons disregard its merits.

Dissolve a pinch of ordinary table salt in one-fourth of a pint of warm weather, and pour a little in the palm of the hand and place the nostrils in it and snuff it up the nose, taking care that some reaches the tissues of the tubes reaching to the mouth.

Repeat several times, and then wait for ten or twelve hours and repeat the treatment. Keep this up for a week or two, and catarrh will disappear.

Strong salt water will cause pain in the head, but weak, warm salt water is perfectly harmless and will cleanse the tissue more effectually than any other remedy.

This treatment is a great breath purifier and will clear up the throat.

A little stronger salt water used as a gargle will relieve sore throat and aid in preventing diphtheria.

Tiny Goust.

The republic of Goust is a square mile in the Pyrenees which for the last three centuries has been recognised by Spain and France as independent. It has a population of about 150 weavers. They are ruled by a council of elders and pay no taxes or duties of any sort. This civic unit is so tiny that it has to go abroad for its care of souls and body, for it has neither physician nor priest, for these needs it has to go to Laruns, the nearest French town. Even the dead must leave Goust to find consecrated ground in which to lie, the coffins being slid downhill and thus out of the smallest republic in the world.

Making It Hot.

A young man was lately leaving his aunt's house after a visit when, finding it was beginning to rain, he caught up an umbrella that was snugly placed in a corner and was proceeding to open it when the old lady, who for the first time observed his movements, sprang toward him, exclaiming: "No, no; that you never shall! I've had that umbrella twenty-three years, and it has never been wet yet, and I am sure it shan't be wetted now!"—London Express.

The Sleepless Seven.

"There were seven of the twelve," said one of the discharged jurors in speaking of the matter next morning. "who didn't want to sleep themselves and wouldn't let the rest of us sleep. Whenever we dropped in a doze they came around and shook us till we were wide awake again."

"And you had to submit, I suppose, for they constituted the majority?"

"Yes. They were a rousing majority," said the hollow-eyed juror, with a pensive attempt to be facetious.

Seeing That He Insisted.

"But," she said, "don't want to promise to be your wife until I can be sure that I love you."

"I forgot to mention," he explained, "that my salary has just been raised $10 a week."

"Oh, well, if you insist on having your answer now I suppose I shall have to say yes!"

The Difference.

"How can I ever learn to understand that girl?"

"You can marry her, but when you have done that it will be too late for your understanding of her to be of any benefit to you."

"Safety First"

Some men, sometimes, can board the flying street car or "monkey with the buzz-saw" in a mill or factory, and get away with it. But that's how accidents happen. —— Some men, sometimes, can shave with an open blade razor and avoid cutting themselves. But thousands agree that the chances are against it.

THE Gillette Safety Razor

was the practical forerunner of to-day's "Safety First" movement. What engineers are doing now to safeguard tools and transportation, King C. Gillette did ten years ago for that much used tool, the razor. And while he made the razor safe, he also made it keener, harder and handier than the old open blade.

That thin, electrically tempered blade, gripped rigid in the adjustable holder, gives the cleanest, smoothest and quickest, as well as the safest shave man has ever enjoyed.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A MODERN MIRACLE

"The fact is, Briarley, old boy, I'm going to get married."

"Wherefore the gloom?" asked Briarley. "Nobody compels you."

"I have to marry in self-defence," proceeded his lordship. "It is sickening to feel that you are being run after by all the girls and all their matchmaking mammas. But the worst of it is that I've fixed on two girls, and I can't for the life of me decide which to have."

"And who are the favoured couple?"

"One is Daisy Molyneux. Of course she is very jolly and awfully fond of me—"

"Yes, and the other?"

"Sibyl Castlemaine, your—er—second cousin, isn't she?"

"Do you think Sibyl cares for you?"

"I am afraid there is not much doubt of it, old man," said his lordship mournfully. "I used to fancy you were rather fond of her at one time, but of course it is impossible."

"Utterly!"

"Well, look here, old chap; I shouldn't ask everybody, but which of the two girls do you advise me to have? They're both nice, loving little girls, and it's an awful bore to have to choose. Which would you ask?"

"Well," said Briarley slowly, "I should advise you to have Daisy Molyneux."

"Thanks awfully, old chap. I'll propose to Daisy to-night. She is going to be at Lady Vivyan's dance, and so is Sibyl, so I can get it settled either way. Will you be there?"

"Yes, I expect so."

Lady Vivyan's rooms presented a gay and brilliant scene that evening. Lord Densham arrived early. It was considerably later when Cecil Briarley arrived.

"It is quite a long time since I've had the chance of talking to you, Cecil," said his cousin Sibyl, as they sat in a corner. "They are waltzing very nicely," he said, drawing her attention to one of the couples floating near them.

"Lord Densham and Daisy Molyneux?"

"Yes, Densham's a nice fellow, isn't he?"

"Ye-es. I suppose one would hardly call him shy or modest, would one?"

"When a fellow like that can choose any girl he likes — when he knows they are all like pretty apples asking to be plucked—it is enough to make him conceited."

"And other fellows jealous?" added Sibyl mischievously. "And I suppose none of the pretty apples can be strong enough to refuse to fall into his hand?"

"It would be a modern miracle if they did."

A little later Briarley was in the smoking room when Lord Densham came up to him.

"I say, old chap, a funny thing has happened. Daisy Molyneux has refused me."

"Well, I'm awfully sorry, Densham; really I am."

"It doesn't matter so very much, Miss Castlemaine is here, isn't she?"

When Lord Densham suggested to Sibyl Castlemaine that they should sit the dance out in the conservatory she saw that he meant to propose to her.

"It is rather serious to be standing on the edge of a new year," he said. "Dear Miss Castlemaine, I want to be a better man in the future than in the past, and you, only you, can help me. What is needed to make my happiness complete, to crown all my hopes and perfect my manhood, is a woman's love. Sibyl—let me call you Sibyl, my love — will you be the woman? Will you marry me?"

"I am very sorry you should have asked me this, Lord Densham," said Sibyl gravely. "I am conscious of the vastness of the compliment, and I am not blind to the advantages of your offer, but I do not love you."

"You don't love me?" repeated his lordship in a tone of disappointment, that had a suspicion of incredulity in it. "You don't love me? But surely that is only a matter of time. When you have seen more of me, when you know me better, Sibyl—"

"My decision would not alter, Lord Densham. Will you please take me back? I am engaged for the next dance."

As they entered the ballroom they almost ran into Cecil Briarley. He was about to walk past them, when Sibyl said:

"Oh, Cecil, here you are! You're just in time."

They were about to join the dancers when it was announced that the mysterious midnight moment had arrived, and those who cared to do so were to go to the open windows and on to the doorsteps and balconies to listen and wait for the solemn peal that was to mark the annual recommencement. Briarley got a wrap to throw over his cousin's shoulders, and then they went to the farther corner of the long balcony.

"Are you thinking of the new year?" asked Cecil.

"No; I was thinking of Tantalus."

"I hope you pity him."

"I don't think I do," responded his cousin softly, feeling glad that the shadows hid her blushing cheek. "Perhaps his prize was not so far out of his reach as he imagined."

"Sibyl didn't Densham ask you anything?" he whispered.

"Yes, Cecil, and—and I performed a modern miracle."

"My darling!" and then there was silence.

"Sibyl, you know I am not a rich man, and I am not a lord."

"And you are not horribly conceited and selfish, either, dear."

When Kelvin Slipped.

Great scientist though he was, the late Lord Kelvin sometimes failed to do simple addition or subtraction quite correctly. Once on a blackboard at Glasgow university he made two and two five and, hearing the delighted laughter of the class, hastily altered the five to a three. On another occasion he said "seven times nine, Mr Macfarlane, are a hundred and what?" (Pause.) "But, no," continued the scientist; "seven times nine cannot be a hundred and anything, for the square root of a hundred is ten."

Every Meal Brought Agony

Dutiffince Taking "Little Digesters" He Can Eat Heartily

From Osgoode Station, Ont., comes a story of five years of suffering from Indigestion and Dyspepsia—five years of doctoring in vain—then "Little Digesters" and a complete cure. Mr. R. H. Ralph tells the story—his own story—thus:

"I have been a sufferer from Indigestion and Stomach Trouble for five years. I had treatment from several doctors. I did not find a cure until I began using "Little Digesters".

I can hardly describe how much I suffered at times. Every meal brought with it more or less agony and I seemed to have a complete distaste for food. I had almost begun to think my case incurable when I came across an advertisement in the papers about "Little Digesters". I decided to give them a trial. I am very thankful that I did so for I had not been taking them long when I found them helping me. I can now eat heartily and no longer feel pain and discomfort after eating."

Does Indigestion or Dyspepsia make your life miserable? Take "Little Digesters"—they will cure you or your money will be refunded.

He Was Detained.

Little Bobby heard his father say one evening:

"Pshaw, I wish young Sparks would go. It's nearly midnight, and I'd like to lock up the house and get to bed. What on earth can Sparks and Mabel find to talk about all those hours?"

Bobby tiptoed to the parlor door, peeped through the keyhole and then, tiptoeing back to his father, said:

"It isn't Mr. Sparks' fault, pa. He can't go. Mabel's sittin' on him."

St. Peter's In Rome.

St. Peter's is certainly the most amazing church in the world. It is not beautiful—I am satisfied that no true artist would grant that—but after you have been all over Europe and have seen the various edifices of importance it still sticks in your mind as astounding—perhaps the most astounding of all.—From Theodore Dreiser's "A Traveler at Forty."

HERE IS A SHORT SHARP STATEMENT

It Shows That Dodd's Kidney Pills are no Faith Cure.

Patrice Cote had Kidney Disease—He Sent for Dodd's Kidney Pills Just to Try Them — They Made Him Well.

Petite Vallee, Gaspe Co., Que., May have proved for themselves that no known here, makes the following statement:

"For five months I suffered from Kidney Disease. I sent for two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills to try them. They made me well."

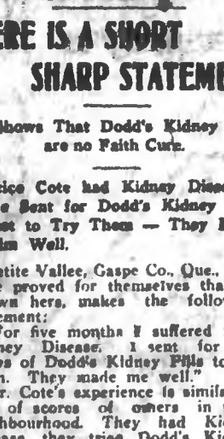
Mr. Cote's experience is similar to that of scores of others in their neighbourhood. They had Kidney Disease, they tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and they found health. They have proven for themselves that no matter how far advanced the Kidney Disease is, the cure is the same — Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are no faith cure; neither are they any cure-all. Thousands of sufferers have tried them who had little faith in them. They found the cure just the same.

Dodd's Kidney Pills simply cure the Kidneys. To be sure you hear of them curing Rheumatism, Dropsy, Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Gravel and other diseases, but that is because these are all diseases of the Kidneys or caused by sick Kidneys. The natural way to cure them is to cure the Kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

DAILY FASHION HINT.



No. 6,595, Lady's Skirt.

For the many separate skirts which are now worn this three-gored model will make an excellent design. It may have the high or the regulation waist line and a side front closing. There is a small plait at the lower edge of the side seam, which gives easy of movement but does not seem to add to the width. Serge, cheviot, taffetas, satin and also linen and other cotton materials are used for these skirts.

The skirt pattern, No. 6,595, is cut in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 3½ yards of 44-inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

DAVID AND GOLIATH

The brightest boy ould Jesse had
Was David's youngest son;
He was a bould and active lad
Well liked by ivery one.

Althe' he had to moind the sheep,
To kape he was so sharp,
When other boys were fast asleep
He'd practice on the harp.

'Twould make the birds of heav'n stand
On their heads to hear him sing;
He'd murther half the country side
Wid pebble and a-sling.

And then the matherin ways he had
To capture young and ould,
The female sex—Gob, whillielu!
'Twas that wor his best bould!

When David was some eighteen year
Of age, or thereabout,
Bethune the haythen and Judear
A bloody war broke out.

His brothers listed for the war
Begorra! they wor daisies;
His father tuk a contrack for
To sell the army chases.

"David," the ould man said one day,
"You'd like a little thramp;
Just load some chases on the dhray,
And take 'em down to camp."

He throve to camp and sought straightway
The commissary's tint;
He got a voucher for his pay,
Thin to his brothers wint.

He found thim lookin' mighty blue,
And in a dreadful plicht;
Retrate is what they wished to do,
But divil a bit to fight.

A big black bully tin foot tall,
Was bluffin' all the Jews,
An' throops, an' staff, and Gineral Saul,
Wor quakin' in their shoes.

Goliah was the craythur's name,
A howlin' Philistine.
His sword was loike the loightning's flame,
His spear was loike a pine.

He wore upon his neck and breast
Tin thousand pounds of brass.
The shine of him completely dhressed
Would smash a lookin' glass.

And ivery day the baste would strut
Inflamed with dhrink and pride;
And kept all Israel closely shut
In lines well fortified.

"Come out," he'd bawl, "come out of there,
Beyant your dirthy warks,
Come ave ye dare, an' foight me fair,
Yes bloody Haybrew Turks."

But every faithful Israelite
Said: "Lave the blaggard be.
Av course no dacent Jew can foight
Wid such low trash as he."

This sort of thing was well and good
Till David joined the throop,
Whin he the matther understood
Bedad he raised a whoop.

"It is a burnin' ain and shame,"
He said "upon me word,
To hear this hathen hound defame
The chosen of the Lord.

"And since no other man has felt
A wish to tan his hide,
I'll foight him for the champion's belt
An' fifty pounds a side."

The corp'ril of the guard he tould
The off'sur of the day,
What David said, an' he made bould
To mention it at tay.

The cduge-du-hong was in the mess,
An' heard the whole discourse,
So he—he couldn't do no less—
Told Gineral Saul av course.

The chafe of staff tould the high priest
To sind peremptuous ordhers
For David to report in haste
To Gineral Saul's headquarters.

But when the son of Jesse came,
And Saul beheld the lad,
So young, so tindher loike and shlim,
It made him tearing mad.

"Oh, howly Moses, look at that,"
Said Saul, "the boy's consate;
"How can it be that such a brat
Can match that heavyweight?

"Wid such blood-suckin' giant thafe
This baby cannot sthrive;
The Philistines, it's my belafe,
Would ate him up aloive."

Then David said, "Me Lord, it's thrue
This seems a rash intint:

Yet while I weigh but nine stun two,
I'm full of divilment.

"A lion and a bear cim down
The ragged mountain sides,
I slew the baste and wint to town
And thraded off their hides.

"An 'sinee for roarin' baste loike thim
I've found I'm man enough,
I'm quite convinced that I can thrim
The blaggard haythen sneagh."

"Avie," says Saul, "Ye're full of pluck,
And wag your little chin,
Loike one who raly thrusts his luck
An' means to thry and win.

"I'll give ye my best coat of mail
A new spring suit just made,
Turn it a thrifle in the tail
And pad the shoulder blade."

But David did not understand
The use of such a thing.
And only wanted in his hand
His staff and thrusty sling.

When Goliath saw little David approachin', after havin' heerd proclamation that a great champeen was comin' out to fight him, mushe he laughed fit to split his sides; and by raison of what passed bohune them in the way of talk, I dhrop out of poethry for a bit bekase whoile poethry is meighty foine for a sintimintal dialogue, it's no good at all for a rale, sthrong, first-class breezy, blaggardin' match.

"Oh, thunder!" says Goliath, wid the wather bilin' out of his eyes for laughin', "what sort of a thing is that? May the divil admire me," he says, "if I don't belave it's a monkey escaped from an organ grinder."

"You'll find me a very bad thing to monkey wid," says David. "Ye big thafe, wid a pot on your head loike a cupola on a stampire engine, and your dirthy mouth loike the hole of a coal cellar."

"Ye little skinned pole-cat," says Goliath beginnin' to grow mad when he discovered that David's rhetoric was superior to his, "do ye think I'm a dog, that ye've got a thick to bate me wid?"

"Bedad," says David, "bad scran to ye, wouldna be afther doin' a dacent dog such injustice; but it's dog mate I'm goin' to make of ye."

"Hear that, now," says Goliath. 'Arrah, thin, tache yer grandmother to fade ducks."

"Dhry up," says David. "Ye havn't the sinse of a cat-fish. By the light that shines, your bad grammar gives me a cramp in the stummick." Ooh. David had a tongue in his head like a Jew's-harp.

"Tare an 'houns," says Goliath, "I'll not lave enough of yer hide in one piece to patch a shoe."

"Tare an' ages," says David, "I'll give the buzzards a picnic with your carcass, and shure it'll make 'em sick to ate it."

"You're liar," says Goliath.

"You're another," says David "and an opthalmic and Cyclops to boot."

Wid that, Goliath lost his timper intirely. He pawed up the ground and him at David wid his eyes shut a bellowin' and that brings me back to poethry:

Goliath poised his mighty spear,
'Twas fifty fut in lingth,
And unto David drawin' near
He pusched wid all his stringth.

But David was surprisin' quick.
An 'spry upon his pins;
So dodgin' nately wid his shtick,
He whacked Goliath's shins.

Wid pain the giant howled and grinned
And dhropped both shield and lance
To rub the legs that lick had skinned.
Then David saw his chance.

Taking a brick from out his scrip,
He put it in his sling.
And whirlin' it round his head and hip,
He let it dhrive full swing.

Right to the mark the dornick flies,
As straight as to a bee;
It smote the wretch betune the eyes
And stretched him on the sea.

Thin David for to prove him dead,
In sight of all beholders,
Chopped off his unbelievin' head
From his blasphemous shoulders.

When the Phenaynian sailors sought,
Long since, could Erin's sthrain,
A prince of David's blood they thought,
Who settled in the lead.

From him the Irish race had birth,
And that's why we delight in,
Bepeat all ither tribes on airth,
The harp's swate strains and fightin'.

That this surmise is no wise thin
Can easily be shown.
For sthick and harp have iver been
As Erin's imblems known.

JOLLYING THE TIMES.

London Makes Merry Over "Thunderer's" Reduction in Price.

Nothing farmier has happened in Britain in the memory of the oldest inhabitant than the becoming that has accompanied the drop in the price of The London Times, probably the most famous newspaper in the world, from twopence (or four cents) to a penny (or two cents). For many years, or until a comparatively few months ago, the price of "The Thunderer," as it is affectionately called, was threepence, but in competition with the cheaper and infinitely livelier London newspapers (most of which are now sold for a halfpenny, or one cent), The Times last cut to such an extent that Lord Northcliffe, who owns The Daily Mail, Answers, and no end of other periodicals, including one called Comic Cuts, which is popular among errand boys, as well as The Times, dropped the price to twopence. This is now followed by a still more revolutionary drop, which has led to the natural question: "Will The Times eventually be sold at a halfpenny?"

It would have been more sensible to have faced the situation squarely. Instead, however, the following portentous announcement (drafted, apparently, by someone wholly without a sense of humor) appeared in the newspaper: "In view of the grave importance of the present political situation, the price of The Times will be reduced on Monday next to one penny."

This remarkable pronouncement has been received with the mirth which might have been expected, and has been everywhere parodied, by no one more amusingly than Ivan Heald, the funny man of The Daily Express, who produced a calendar of future alterations in the price of The Times as follows:

"March 25.—Mr. Asquith plays golf with Mr. Redmond. Price of Times reduced to a halfpenny.

"Easter—Parliament not sitting. Price raised to threepence.

"April 25.—Narrow escape of the Government. Times sold next day at three for twopence.

"June 11.—Home rule bill comes up for third reading. Copy of The Times given away with The Daily Mail and Comic Cuts."

HELD BACK BY DEADLY ANAEMIA

Thousand of Growing Girls Yearly Fall into a Hopeless Decline

Anaemia — the doctor's name for bloodlessness—holds back many girls from the path to bright, healthy womanhood. At that all-important time when their veins should be full of rich, red blood, anaemia, creeping on them stealthily, robs them of sparkling eyes and a clear skin. They become languid and exhausted at the least exertion, their backs ache, their hearts palpitate violently, appetite fails, and their complexion changes to a pasty yellow, or they become deathly white. No medicine ever offered the public has bestowed such important benefits upon anaemic girls as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They build up the body anew by making the rich, red blood that gives splendid health, bright eyes, a clear complexion and womanly brightness. Here is an instance out of many recorded thousands. Miss Delina Arsenault, Urbainville, P.E.I., says: "I suffered from an attack of anaemia which my friends feared at one time would prove fatal. I grew thinner every day, had dark circles around my eyes, could not sleep well at night and got up in the morning feeling tired and depressed. I suffered severely from headaches and pains in the back and limbs. I had to leave school, and was unable to do any work around the house. I had no appetite and frequently vomited what I did eat. I was under a doctor's care for eight months, but was growing worse and worse, and was almost in despair, when a friend advised me to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. Anxious to get well, I decided to do so. After taking a few boxes I found a good improvement, and I continued taking the Pills until I had used nine boxes, when I was again enjoying perfect health, and I found on weighing myself that I had gained seventeen pounds. I have since enjoyed perfect health, for which I have to thank Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and strongly advise all other ailing girls to give this medicine a fair trial."

Every girl afflicted with anaemia, every woman who sugers from backaches and sideaches, and the other miseries that afflict her sex can secure new health and strength through a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HEART WAS SO BAD Could Not Do Her Housework

Many women get run down and can scarcely look after their household duties owing to the heart action becoming impaired or the nervous system suffering. To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Thomas McIlvain, Chateauguay, Sask., writes:—"I thought it my duty to write and tell you how much your Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. My heart was so bad I could not sleep, nor could walk about the house. I could not do my housework at all, and what my husband could not do had to go undone. I had been using Dodd's Kidney Pills on his besides three boxes of yours for, and it worried me to not be able to do anything. My husband had taken some of your pills some years ago, and insisted on me trying them, so I started, and before I had taken them two weeks I was considerably better, and before I had taken two boxes I was doing my own work again. Any one suffering from heart or nerve trouble should just give your pills a trial. If anyone cares to write me I will gladly give them all the information I know concerning your wonderful medicine."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ALBANIA'S ROYALTIES.

Squalor and Decay of Their New Residence.

Recently Prince William of Wied, the new ruler of Albania, landed at Durazzo and received an enthusiastic welcome from crowds of his new subjects. Although probably doubtful of his reception, he could not fail to be impressed with his first view of his future capital and residence, whatever may be his later sensations.

Durazzo seen from the Adriatic makes an imposing appearance. The town lies on an island connected with the mainland by two narrow strips of roadway across marshes and swamps. An old castle crowns the highest point of the island's ridge of rocks, while clustering around this ancient building covering the descent are closely packed plaster and stone walled houses with heavy tiled roofs which glisten in the southern sun and the clear, bright air of the Adriatic coast.

A nearer approach will not prove so prepossessing, for the old castle that is to be turned into a royal palace is very old and is fast crumbling into ruins. It has been used partly as a barracks and partly as a court of justice and no repairs ever seem to have been made on it since the day it was turned over to the Turks by the original builders. The townspeople have been at work for weeks trying to prepare the place for the reception of their future ruler, but they have directed their attention chiefly to an attempt to clear the old pile of the infesting swarms of rats and other vermin.

The prince and his consort will have to face the task of making the place habitable according to western ideas. To work on they will have great halls and rooms into which the sunlight pours and a big court which can be easily transformed with the Albanian flora into a beautiful garden. From the windows of their palace they will have on one side a wonderful view over the Albanian highlands and on the other of the picturesque coast and blue waters of the Adriatic.

There are perhaps a thousand houses lining the narrow dark streets of Durazzo which have been permitted, like the old castle, to fall into a sad state of decay and grow dirty and grimy from centuries of use by man and beast with practically no cleaning or repairing. The more pretentious shops and warehouses serve the needs of the merchants and shippers who handle the trade of central Albania, bringing to the town the wares of the outside world and carrying away the products of the interior.

An old khan, the shelter of generations of caravan traders, with low, projecting walls and a great open court for beasts of burden, is one of the largest of the buildings in the public square. This square has a central fountain and rows of small buildings which serve for the most part as offices for the transaction of public business. The one building in the town with a big smokestack which gives the impression of a manufacturing plant is the Government works for reducing to salt the waters of the low, swampy land behind the town.

The Turks have endeavored at intervals to do something for the town in the way of improvement, but their efforts have been typically Turkish. They built a road around the point of the harbor and repaired some of the worst breaks in the harbor walls. To do this they drew upon and practically exhausted the wealth of ancient Greek and Roman remains with which the town and neighborhood abounded.

Jerome's Mistake.

One of the early vicissitudes of Jerome K. Jerome as an actor was to be offered his choice of playing the part of either a soldier or a donkey in a pantomime, a real donkey with four legs. After careful consideration he thought the red coat the more becoming disguise and chose the part of the soldier. Apparently he made a mistake, from the point of view of success, at all events, for a few days afterward the manager came to him and said: "You made a great mistake, in not taking the party of the donkey. It would just suit you, and there's five shillings a week more in it."

Using Leather Shoes.

Leather has generally supplanted cloth shoes for Chinese women among the well-to-do classes in Hong Kong, and even the working classes are using leather shoes as far as possible. Even for bound foot women leather shoes are common, made somewhat in foreign style and with foreign machinery.

INSECTS' SENSE OF SMELL.

Most Acute of All the Creatures in the Animal World.

The most valuable faculty possessed by insects is their sense of smell. Most insects hear very poorly, and ants in particular are absolutely deaf. With all their batteries of eyes bulging in every direction these creatures do not seem to enjoy very good eyesight. Some of the flying insects can't see well enough to avoid obstacles which to them should look as big as a barn.

But when it comes to the sense of smell the insect world is far ahead of any animal. Fabre, the great French entomologist, confined some female butterflies in a steel cage far from the natural haunts of the insects. To his surprise males of the species came from miles away and lit on the screen.

He then confined the females in hermetically sealed jars and placed them near places frequented by the males. Not one paid any attention though the females were visible through the glass.

To make sure that the sense of smell was the guiding force, Prof. Fabre brought out some bits of paper and twigs on which the females had rested. Males soon appeared and, ignoring the females in their glass jars, circled about the twigs and paper.

If a strange ant of the same species is placed in an ant hill he is violently ejected. Every insect he meets recognizes him instantly as an intruder and helps in the ejection. If every Londoner could recognize on sight each stranger in town it would not be so remarkable, as out of town people might be identified by their clothes, cut of their hair, speech, etc. The ants all wear the same shiny uniform and are deaf and dumb.

If a small mouse dies in a field certain undertaker insects known as sylphs and necrophers will journey from distances of more than a mile to lay eggs in the body.

The house fly acts solely on the sense of smell. In his flying about he is perpetually trying to head in the direction of each breath of food odor he meets and dodges and turns with each eddy of air until he locates the source of the smell.

Mosquitoes find you in the dark rather more easily than in the day. They smell their victims outside the house. Their sense of smell leads them to windows, doors or chimneys from which the man odor proceeds. In they go and soon you hear their song about your ears.

The flea and the night prowling carnivorous insect which inhabits beds also locate their prey by their olfactory sense.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE SAVES THE HAIR

And Keeps You Looking Young.

Don't look older than you are. It is just as easy to look younger. While lack of hair or poor hair is not always an indication of age, it is frequently accepted as such.

A person well advanced in years possessing a good head of hair is always spoken of as "well preserved."

Everyone can retain beautiful, luxuriant hair if they make the effort. In almost every instance poor hair or the loss of hair may be traced to the activity of the dandruff germ. Newbro's Herpicide prevents the scale-like accumulation and puts the scalp in a perfectly healthy condition. With the elimination of the dandruff the hair no longer drops out. The itching of the scalp stops almost at once.

Newbro's Herpicide is the remedy for which there are many substitutes, preparations claimed to be "just as good." You dont have to accept a substitute. Insist upon having genuine Herpicide.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c. and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications obtained at good barber shops. Send 10c. in postage to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich., for sample and book.

ARRANGEMENTS ARE PRACTICALLY COMPLETE

Reception Committee Discuss Details in Connection With the Visit to Peterborough of the Duke of Connaught

CHILDREN WILL SING

The Reception committee appointed to make arrangements for the approaching visit of the Governor General, will meet next Thursday evening for the first time, prior to the big day on May 1st. Those minute details, which are essential for such a reception as such a party, have been dealt with by this committee for the past several weeks, and are near completion. There is no doubt from the programme that has been mapped out, that the visit of the Duek of Connought will long be remembered by the citizens of Peterborough.

Those present at last night's meeting were Ald. Stratton, chairman, Mayor Buller, Ald. Saunders, Johnston, Dobbin and Langford, and Col. T. W. H. Young, Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, and Major D. Walker and Inspector Mowatt.

According to reports sent in, the prominent citizens, or at least most of them, have handed their automobiles over to the Reception committee on June 1st, from 9.30 a.m. until the departure of the Royal visitors at one o'clock. Mayor Buller, and Ald Stratton, reported that the owners were most willing to lend their motor cars. Those owners who have kindly put their cars at the disposal of the committee will be sent an invitation to take part in the reception. A letter was read from Mr. G. Killally, acting superintendent of the canal offices, stating that he had been notified by the department that the Bessie Butler would be placed at the disposal of the party, and asking that he be instructed as to when and where the boat would be required.

Col. Hughes.

A communication from Col. Hughes notified the committee that he would be pleased to accept the invitation to be present. The Mayor of Lindsay has not been heard from yet, as to whether or not he will be present. Just like Lindsay. Mr. J. H. Bexsmith, member for East Peterborough, also signified his intention of coming for the reception. Mayor Buller said that in conversation with the Federal member, he had stated that it was quite possible that he would attend.

On the Square.

Col. Clegg reported that he, in company with Capt. McLean, commander of the Guard of Honour, had visited the C.P.R. station to ascertain where would be the best location for the Guard. The only available place, he said, was on the square at the back of the station. There was not nearly sufficient room on the paltform. He suggested that His Royal Highness, on leaving the car, should pass through the geenral waiting room and out on to the centre of the platform outside. It was thought that the best plan would be to have him go around the west end of the platform, but this matter was left in the hands of Col. Clegg.

Plant Trees.

The Directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Co. have made the request that His Royal Highness plant a tree in the Cemetery as he passes through.

A similar request was also received from the committee in charge of the civic driveway. Wishing to commemorate the commencement of the beautification of Peterborough, they asked that time be allowed for His Royal Highness to plant a tree in Central Park.

These matters were taken up, and it was thought best to leave the programme as submitted and approved by His Royal Highness.

Mayor Buller said that while talking to the Federal member, he had mentioned that His Royal Highness had never seen a canoe in the building, and suggested that he be taken through the Peterborough Canoe Factory. On motion it was decided to leave the programme as arranged.

The School Children.

Major Walker reported that the school children had had a practice yesterday afternoon in the Armouries and would be quite ready. It was decided that the children should sing the National Anthem immediately after the arrival of the Royal party, and "O Canada" directly after His Royal Highness had replied to his address. A place will be alloted to the children on Central Park, and it has been arranged that four men of the 25th Battery, C.F.A., be in attendance to see the children into their proper places, and to look after them generally, while they are in the Park.

The Veterans.

Col. Young suggested that the veterans be invited to be present in a body. His suggestion was carried, and Mr. J. T. Collins will accordingly be notified.

Cadets and Scouts.

The P.C.I. Cadets and Boy Scouts will be inspected in Central Park, before His Royal Highness goes on to the platform.

Some Technicalities.

Ald. Stratton asked whether the presentation at the Park would be a formal affair, and the names of those being presented be announced, as is usual, or if cards would be used. If the latter, then the aides would announce the names, but if the former, the task would fall to Mayor Buller.

At the Station.

The reception work at the station will be cut short. The list will consist of the Mayor, Chairman of the Reception committee, senior officer of the Peterborough Garrison (Lt.-Col. Clegg), and members of Parliament.

At the Armouries.

The Royal party will be taken to the Armouries for a period of ten minutes directly after the reception. The Duke of Connaught is the only Field Marshall in Canada, and it was thought but right that he should be ceived by the Garrison officers.

The committee then adjourned till Thursday evening next.

HORSES WERE KILLED AND WAGON SMASHED

C.P.R. Local Struck Farmers' [illegible] Crossing---Farmer Hurled Into Field, But Was Unhurt

DIDN'T HEAR WHISTLE

A farmer living near Tweed, who refused to give his name, is lucky to be alive. The C.P.R. local crashed into him at Dumphreys Crossing near Tweed this morning, killing his horses and reducing his wagon to splinters. How the farmer escaped is a wonder. He was hurled through the air over a fence ito a ploughed field.

The engineer brought his train to such a sudden stop that the passengers thought he had struck the side of a house. The train crew rushed over and were surprised to see the farmer climbing over the fence. The man was mad clean through. "Why didn't you blow your whistle?" he shouted. "How much do I get out of this," he remarked to the startled train crew. The man had not a mark on him. The engineer said that he had his whistle wide open all the time.

WONDERFUL SONG BOOK FOR READERS OF THIS PAPER

The Presentation of "Heart Songs" a New Idea for a Newspaper--The Work Has 500 Large Pages

That remarkable offering by the Examiner of the now famous song book, entitled "Heart Songs," announcement of which appears to-day elsewhere in this paper, should be a source of sincere congratulation to both publisher and reader.

Already more than a hundred thousand copies of this unique volume have gone into the homes of the young people of the United States at the publisher's retail price of two dollars and a half per volume. The merits of the book are such that the sales are steadily on the increase and in the ordinary course of business the book would attain an enormous circulation.

Upon our first approaching the publishers with a proposition to allow us in effect to make a gift of it to our readers, we met with a cold reception. But subsequently a plan was developed whereby, a syndicate of the largest and most influential newspapers in the country entered into an arrangement with the makers of this book, so that several hundred thousand copies might be allotted to the readers of the respective papers for practicaly the bare cost of distribution.

From day to day, beginning with this issue, this paper will publish new features connected with "Heart Songs," until all its marvellous attractions are set forth to our readers.

It is of universal interest and there is no member of the family but will find something of fascination and genuine interest between its covers.

As we state elsewhere, we believe the distribution of this book will accomplish a work of education of the very highest character, and our offering may fairly be called a testimonial to the thousands of men and women who read our columns daily.

The work has five hundred large pages, and comprises four hundred selections, words and music. It is to be had by this paper's readers on presentation of one coupon clipped from this paper, and the bare cost of distribution. Books are on display at this office, and the choice is yours.

"DISPOSING OF THE DOGS OF WAR"—By J. FRISE

MANY EVENTS FOR HOLIDAY TO SPEND IT PLEASANTLY

Ball Game at Home and Soldiers' Parade and Concert—River and Lakes Will Attract Many

A FEW SUGGESTIONS

Should the Weather Man smile on Monday the citizens will have an opportunity to enjoy the first holiday of the summer. If there were a public statue of Victoria the Good in the city, flowers might be placed upon it in memory of her personality and her glorious reign. But without this facility of invigorating public remembrance of the late Queen and of centralizing attention on the Empire it is suggested that the object of and the memories associated with he 24th tof May should not be entirely overlooked.

As to the spending of the holiday the presence of the Belleville Regiment as guests of the 57th and a double-header ball game should keep the great majority of the citizens at home. The soldiers will add a dash of colour and will enliven things while they are here, and the ball game should attract two large crowds.

Many of the city's Stony Lake cottage owners will likely spend Sunday and Monday at their resorts, and the ordinary man whose summer home is a Spanish castle, will have to content himself with the special boat trips which are announced to the upper lakes and to Rice Lake.

There will also be the many who will be quite satisfied to grub around the garden, or perhaps paint the verandah or pass the holiday in some similarly exciting manner. It is passing strange the number of two or three-year married men who will be quite satisfied with such a programme who in their coltish days donned their classy togs and stepped high. The crucible of responsibility has a wonderfully transforming effect in many cases.

Families are reminded of beauty spots along the river and at Jackson's Park, where a family may spend the afternoon bringing with them their tea and giving the children a day together out of doors. There may be a little extra bother attached to such an outing, but there is very little expense.

There is also every facility for securing boats for the day down the river. In fact with inviting weather the citizens have every chance to enjoy themselves.

THE ADVANCE PARTY OF 15TH REGT. HERE

Tents Are Being Erected in Central Park for the Accommodation of Visiting Soldiers

ARRIVE TO-NIGHT

Capt. Doyle, Quartermaster, and Lt. Fennell of the 15th "Argyle Light Infantry," Belleville Regiment, and 15 men were busily engaged all morning pitching camp for the remainder of the regiment, which arrives in the City to-night. Accommodation for 350 men will have to be provided. The camp is laidout in companies from the north, and stretching from west to east.

The ground conditions are not all that could be desired, but with the use of the water proof, there is not much fear of the men taking cold. It was stated by an officer of the corps that the officers and men both, of the Belleville Regiment, had been looking forward with eager expectation to the trip to this City. Several of the officers were in the City last night, making detailed arrangements for billeting the men.

Use will be made of the local hotels and restaurants for this purpose. Three hundred and fifty men will arrive in the City this evening and will make a bee line for the camp, wearied somewhat, no doubt, from the journey.

The Park now has a resemblance to the appearance it had four years ago when the St. Catharines and Brantford regiments visited the City on July 1st. The operations were being watched with curiosity by a large number of citizens and to-morrow a still larger crowd is expected to watch the Church parade, and to listen to the concerts given by the bands.

DANGEROUS TRACK IS TO BE MOVED

The Grand Trunk Railway are making ready to move their track on Bethune Street, near Simcoe Street, so that it will be farther away from the sidewalk on the west side of the street. The little house that is occupied by the ferguson has been moved, and it is expected that work will be commenced on the track in the next few days.

It will be remembered that it was at this point that a local man named Ferguson was seriously injured some time ago. Shortly after this the City Council wrote the Railway, asking them to move their tracks farther out. They agreed to do so, but after some time the change still remained undone. Last week the City Clerk was instructed to write them again regarding the matter and, as a result, the track will be moved in a few days.

T. E. KIMBLE, A BLACKLISTER WAS RUN OVER

Last Night Near Downer's Corners—Sequel in Court This Morning

OTHER CASES

Theodore Edward Kimble presented a sorry looking appearance in the Police Court this morning. His left eye was swollen considerably and was supplemented by cuts on the temple, nose, and on the face generally. Gimble is a blacklister, having been on the list since July last. He was charged with being drunk while on the list, to which charge he pleaded guilty.

His Worship Magistrate Dumble asked him if he had been through a threshing machine, but the prisoner did not think he had. However, it transpired later that a local man, driving home late last evening from the country, ran over an object on the road. He stopped to look, and found Kimble, stretched straight across the road, sleeping, using his cap for a head rest. The police were telephoned for and the gathered in their charge. Kimble, however, was not much hurt. He was placed in the witness box this morning to tell where he got his liquor, and stated that he had obtained it from a farmer with whom he had driven a short way into the country, over the lift lock. The farmer, too, was intoxicated, and was carrying a goodly supply of whiskey.

Accoeding to Kimble's story the farmer handed this liquor over to him, to dispose of in the best way possible. He must have made short work of it, for he could not tell the court how he came to be at Downer's Corers, after having left the man from whom he got the liquor on the other side of the Lift Lock. Kimble is a carter and is married. He was assessed the customary fine of $10, to be paid in ten days, and in default of payment, 30 days at Castle Neabitt, at the expense of the City.

The first sidewalk cyclist to be assessed the fine of $2 with $2.00 costs attached, was Chas. Casavagge, who was discovered using the sidewalk as a roadway yesterday. Others who appear on the same charge will also be fined $4.00 in future.

James Tierney, James Jordan and Thomas Quinlan were each assessed $2, to be paid in ten days, for being found drunk in a public place. They pleaded guilty.

All members of St. John's Men's Bible Class will please note that the session will be held at 9:45 a.m. in the Guild Room on Sunday next and during the summer season.

MORE EVIDENCE OF NEED OF ATTENTION TO MARKET

LARGE SUPPLIES OF NEW FRUITS

With Vegetables These For The Most Part Come From The South

PRICES ARE MODERATE

The city fruit dealers are showing large quantities of new fruit and vegetables to-day. Imported tomatoes are selling at 20c a pound and strawberries at 25c a box. New potatoes retail at 60c a peck; wax beans at 20 cents a pound; California cherries at 30c a pound; new carrots at 5c a pound, and a large supply of new beets, lettuce, onions, radishes, etc., at the regular prices. Rhubarb is selling freely and is the hoose-grown variety. Spinach is 50c a peck, and with asparagus and other vegetables is freely demanded. Pineapples are plentiful and fairly cheap. The importations come from Arkansas, Florida, Porto Rico and other sections of the south.

"Missionary" was Told to Get Out Of the County

A German appearing before Magistrate Edminson claims He is a Missionary

A man who did not want work, but a missionary spreading the Gospel, was what Adolph Goippe described himself to be to Magistrate Edmison when he appeared before His Worship to answer to a charge of vagrancy. A constable in the township of Dummer arrested him on suspicion of being concerned in a murder which took place in Montreal. A farmer's wife thought she recognized him as such, but her fears were unfounded. It is the opinion of the Magistrate that the man is not quite sane. He says he is not looking for work, but goes to farm houses and asks for his breakfast or dinner as the case may be, and when only the weaker sex are at home they are frightened into giving him meals.

Goippe is a German and has been in this country for two or three years. On the evidence presented, Magistrate Edmison found him guilty of vagrancy, but allowed him to go on suspended sentence, on promising that he would get out of the County before sunset. The demented man said he was travelling west, but did not know where he was going to. He also claimed that prior to coming to this country he was a missionary in South Africa. His story was discredited.

New Men In Action On The Holiday

The Petes will present a changed line-up in Monday's games with Erie. It is expected that First Baseman Swartling and Outfielder Welsh will both be in action. Both are said to be good hitters and will add to the offensive strength of the club. Sterling, Cresswell and Schettler are the most likely pitching choices, depending on who works this afternoon at London. The morning game is at 10 o'clock and the afternoon battle at 3 o'clock.

BECKER TO APPEAL

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, May 23. — Becker conferred with his attorneys this morning and another appeal will be commenced Monday from yesterday's verdict. They are hopeful of success. Becker himself appears most optimistic.

A Padded Cell For Suffragette

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., May 23.— Freda Graham, militant suffragette, who attacked the National Gallery pictures yesterday in revenge for the arrest of Emeline Pankhurst, could not be tried to-day owing to her violent behaviour. She will be placed in a padded cell till the physicians have opportunity to examine her mentally.

New Regulation Lacks Force and Little or no Protection is Afforded to Farmers

SHOULD BE BIG MARKET

There were more potatoes offered on the market to-day than on any other Saturday within a year. Nearly every farmer on the outside market had potatoes of which a large quantity was intended for seed. The price opened at $1.30 a bag, but in a comparatively short time it was down around $1.20 and $1.25. The large offering is explained by the fact that farmers have planted all they required and are now selling the surplus they do not need. At the same time the price has been running high of late and may have been an extra inducement. The supply this morning was very heavy and towards the end of the market potatoes went at a lower price than they will be sold at until the bulk of the new crop is received.

Butter ranged from 29c. to 27c. and eggs were plentiful at 23c. and 25c.

He Asked the Name.

Last Saturday a purchaser bought five dozen of eggs, three for himself and two for a neighbour. Those which he kept were quite satisfactory, but the first two his neighbour broke were superlatively tainted. The result was that this morning when buying new supplies he asked the country lady her name and took care to remember it.

What Are You Going to do With It.

If there were some one in authority over the market one would feel encouraged to raise a few questions that naturally arise. But there is no one with any immediate control. However, here is a question for the Council anyway. Suppose a purchaser claims that half of the eggs he bought on the market were bad, and suppose he knows the name of the party who sold them to him, what is he going to do about it? How is he going to approach the farmer, or at least what demand shall he make? How can he prove his purchase? The farmer's wife, just supposing a case, could easily deny that she sold the eggs. Or she could claim the citizen to be wrong in identity, or she could even deny that the eggs she sold were bad, especially if she knew that they had been freshly collected. In short, the purchaser may take the name of the person who sells produce, but what good is the name to him? As stated above, if there were an authorized market head these questions might be submitted but there they are anyway.

Unfair to the Farmer.

And again, the general body of citizens desire to be absolutely fair to the farmers. But if the purchaser takes the name of a farmer from whom he buys produce and then returns the next week to raise a howl about the quality, what protection has the farmer? He does not remember the faces of the people who buys from him. And the unscrupulous townspeople could make complaints to farmers without even having purchased goods, with the object of securing something for nothing on the expectation that the farmers would make good, as they would believe, in order to avoid a scene.

Unsatisfactory Conditions.

To those who care a continental, whatever that is, about the market, the conditions are absolutely loose and disjointed. And yet prominent men in the affairs of the City willask, "What's the matter with the market?" Those who have really studied the market observe the harvesting of too much cockle in the past. Any person with a knowledge of what retailing is founded upon, will soon find suggestions for the improvement of the market. But the word improvement is misused in this connection. The market must be redeemed, rejuvenated, brought back to the position of importance which it should occupy.

From Bad to Worse.

Mr. John Riddell of Homewood Avenue, may not have desired to be quoted, but there can be no harm in mentioning that he said in commenting upon the display in the Market Hall: 'That is the poorest market I have seen at this time of the year in a long time. I think it is really the worst I have seen for this season."

The merchants have signified their intention of dealing with the question, but there is the danger that they will simply give the question a once-over treatment and catch the superficial deficiencies.

The farmers must be fully protected, and they must be assured of protection. Last Saturday one woman lost five pounds of butter. Buyers must be fully protected. These are the first two demands. Buying a pig in a poke method will not satisfy the citizens. However, the Examiner has harped upon this subject too long. When repeated directions fall upon a thoughtless public, and thoughtless supervisors, one almost despairs of bringing Peterborough to a position as a market centre which it should occupy.

Mayor Buller will bring Adam Beck to the City to give an address on a radial scheme, but why not put our house in order before talking of radials to bring in farmers? It has taken about ten years to reduce the market to its present position and it may take much longer to bring it back to the strength it should possess.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

As the Examiner remarked in its comments on the city beautification banquet at the Oriental Hotel, its chief significance was the spirit of cooperation exhibited on, and developed by, the occasion. The meeting was merely a starting point, a declaration of principle, based upon the proposal of a city drive. There was not much opportunity for considering the merits of the route laid out. It may be the best for the purpose in mind, and it might, as many think, be improved upon. Assuming, however, that the route is all that is claimed for it, it bears a very small relation to the work that should accompany it, as a complementary condition to a general scheme of civic beautification. The selection of, and agreement upon, the route, is a very small matter. A site for a fine building is easy to get, but that got, has a very slight relation to the work of building, which involves a definite plan.

It is upon the plan adopted that the success of the proposed drive depends. It necessarily must be a plan that, in its general features, should be capable of extension till it includes the whole city area. Obviously the first step to doing anything definite will be the devising and adoption of a definite plan. Such a plan may take years to carry out, but it should be of such character that it will, from the first, be productive of visible improvement.

There seems to be some misconception or misunderstanding in regard to the purpose and object of the proposed drive. The feeling has been expressed that it is designed primarily as a speed-way for autoists and owners of horse-drawn pleasure vehicles. It may be all that; but it will be more than that: It will be a city asset—something to the advantage of every citizen. A man cannot plant a shade tree or ornamental shrub, or lay down a few yards of boulevard in a street without benefitting every citizen. A street in its highest sense, under proper treatment is an extension of a park and the citizen who does what is suggested, has provided a section of a public park from which the general public and all those who pass by, get as much benefit, apart from the pride of ownership and consciousness of a public-spirited action done, as the man who adds his little unit to the general sum of city beauty. So with the proposed drive. Of course, autoists and owners of horses will use it, but they can't monopolize it.

As to the veiled suggestion that the city is not warranted in using the general funds to help carry out such a drive programme, there seems to be no danger of the city doing too much. The drive proposal is to be largely carried on by the help of private funds subscribed for the purpose and to be expended over a series of years. Here is where the duty of the city comes in. The civic authorities should cooperate, and more than cooperate; it should lead in a campaign for city beautification. Heretofore the city has been greatly remiss in its duty in this respect; and one of the most important results of the banquet mentioned is the way in which it roped in the City Council and converted them to a sense of their responsibility in the matter of taking interest in making the city beautiful. If private citizens, whether as individuals, or organized bodies, attempt to beautify the public places of the city, it is the duty of the Council to cooperate and lend substantial help This is, of course, assuming that the interest of the City Council does not stop with the carrying out of one initial feautre, like the proposed drive.

These is a great deal to be done before the city authorities and the citizens generally by their influence, help and cooperation, get the right swing of a campaign of city beautification. In the first place, centralization of authority under one efficient and intelligent head, such as a park or bouevard, or city improvement commission must be provided. Without some such efficient guiding hand, devising head and instructed executive capacity nothing general, nothing uniform and nothing ultimately satisfactory can be done.

Then it is obvious that the city must take absolute control of our streets in the matter of tree planting. As things are, every tree in the streets of the city have been planted by private citizens who had, technically, no right to trespass upon the streets, no right to usurp the authority of the City Council—or such a body as it may constitute and place in charge of street ornamentation in the matter of planting. Our street trees just now present a brave front with the maiden freshness of their lush garniture of leaves. But a large proportion of them are defective and doomed to early decay. They generally stand too close together, to have a fair chance of doing their best; and as Mr. Morton of the Forestry Department, suggested: a census should be taken of our street trees and dying ones replaced, and others planted in vacancies.

We shall never have the best results from street trees till the City Council, by self, or authorized proxy, takes charge of the work. The city, while it is in the business, should inaugurate this work on the proposed drive system, and prepare to extend it to every part of the city.

The work of planting street trees is not costly; indeed, as far as results in the matter of city beautification and the comfort of citizens go, it is, or can be made the cheapest part of the work of improving our public places, as it is the most important. If the City Council stays converted, it will have a great deal of tree planting to do, and for many years. It would not be a bad plan for the city to go into the nursery business. The city owns considerable vacant property, which might be planted to seedling elms, maples and other trees suitable for street planting. There would be room on an acre for the growing of about 3,000 trees, without crowding. These, properly cared for—pruned to secure good tops, and transplanted occasionally to produce good root systems, would, in a very few years, provide first-class trees for street planting, and the expense would be trifling.

We got the city fathers interested at the banquet and we want to keep up their interest. We want them, and we must have them, take full charge of street beautification in the city, either by themselves or some constituted commission. Then we shall have results to be proud of.

Before concluding these few suggestions which touch but a fringe of the subject, it might be suggested that it would be a good idea to get the ladies—the housewives—interested in a specific way as they are always interested in a general way in cleanliness, tidiness and beauty. As a rule, women have a better taste than men, and more persistence, especially in a good cause. When they set their minds upon any scheme of ornamentation, whether of their person or their homes, or surroundings, something has to be done. Women have better ideas, better taste, and more impulse to beautification than men. It seems to be a matter of conscience with them. No doubt Eve was badly conscience-smitten by the consequences of the indulgence of her maiden curiosity; and the daughters of Eve, by way of compensation, have throughout all generations, been filling the world with the graces of their personality and the fruits of their good taste and love of the beautiful, the graceful, the ornamental, and the cleanly and tidy. By all means get the ladies interested; then, with a well-formulated, general plan of campaign, definite objects to be reached, and with general cooperation, we shall make the city of Peterborough in its comeliness an analogue of the royal Psalmist's Mount Zion—"beautiful for situation the joy of the whole"—land.

THE HEART SONGS OF 90,000,000 PEOPLE

Many of these songs cannot be found in any other collection. They came in yellow, time-worn, tear-stained sheets—that had been sacredly treasured from childhood—others were written out from memory—some were given by titles only—or remembered verses, involving a long search to obtain the whole.

Of the thousands received it is safe to say that the several hundred finally selected—as having the largest number of votes and the highest endorsement—represent to-day the taste of the American people in its choice of music.

We believe the distribution of this unrivalled song collection will bring more happiness into the home of our readers, will do more to make them attractive to young and old; do more to inculcate a love for music; to soften, elevate, and refine the home life; to cultivate the nobler and higher virtues of the fireside—than any other we could adopt.

More Than 400 Songs

EVERY SONG chosen for some personal association; some tender memory; some life-lasting effect; for the haunting beauty of its words; for the lilting music of its melody. The familiar songs of the long-ago, that are treasured in the heart forever.

Over 500 Pages

FOUR YEARS of song gathering to obtain the correct words and music of this unrivalled collection—many of them Folk songs only here published for the first time. Others never before found in a home volume. The real heart songs of 90,000,000 people.

Arranged in Lower Key

THE only songbook written and arranged in low key so that every member of the family can join in the singing. Many pieces harmonized and adapted for the first time to mixed voices. A veritable treasury of words wedded to music that is not for a day but for all time. For the family—for parties—for social gatherings.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS WERE PRESENTED

Congregational Meeting of the Murray St. Baptist Church

The congregational meeting of the Mark Street Methodist Church on Thursday night was a pronounced success. The reports for the past year were most encouraging, and a spirit of hopefulness and enthusiasm prevailed. The attendance at Sunday school was reported to have been the largest in the history of the Church, with the total receipts $295. Last year the Mark Street Mission Band was the banner band of the conference, and the report indicated that from the standpoint of interest and finances, this year will be even better.

The Women's Missionary Society reported a year of activity and increased interest in missionary work, and an increase in membership and finances.

The report from the Ladies' Aid as presented by Mrs. Speer, the president, was received with an enthusiasm that indicates that the coming year will be one of the best the society has ever experienced.

The secretary of the Trustee Board reported the funds of the Church to be in a very healthy condition. There had been an average increase for the past five months (since the canvass) of $7.45 a Sunday and for the year an average increase of $3.01 on Sunday.

The interest of the meeting gathering around the purchase of the new lot at the north-west corner of Mark and Hunter Streets, and judging from the spirit shown, every one was delighted at the wisdom and foresight of the Trustee Board in making the purchase. It will not be long before every cent of the money required for this purpose will have been paid.

The total receipts for the year were $3,369.

Boy Shot Girl In Mistake For A Woodchuck

Mistaking the head of a 13-year-old girl for a woodchuck, a lad named Jude, who lives near Beaverton, took deliberate aim and lodged a bullet from a 22-calibre rifle in the brain of the unfortunate victim.

The distressing accident occurred on the banks of the Beaver River, about four or five miles from Beaverton, and near the farm of Mr. Duncan McLean. Mr. McLean's 13-year-old daughter was out fishing, and was sitting with her back to a log, while Jude, a neighbour lad, about 14 years old, was shooting woodchucks. Some distance away he spied what he thought was a woodchuck behind a log, bobbing its head up and down at intervals. This in reality was the head of Miss McLean, whose hair is of an auburn hue, and as she kept jerking her fishing line out of the water the young humsman some distance away mistook her for a groundhog, and carefully sitting on a rail fence he took deliberate aim and fired.

Almost instantly he realized what he had done, and with all haste summoned the girl's father and informed him of what had taken place. With all haste the girl was removed to the farm house and Dr. Grant, of Beaverton, summoned. Dr. McCulloch, of Lindsay, was also called in, the latter sentleman making a fast run to the scene of the tragedy in his auto.

The unfortunate young girl was found to be in a precarious condition, although conscious to what was taking place. The bullet entered directly in the top of the head and lost itself in the brain. This being the case, it was deemed unsafe to probe further in the delicate brain, but Dr. McCulloch skilfully raised the fractured skull from pressing on the brain and a nervous twitching which was previously experienced in the left hand and arm, disappeared. At present the victim is quite sensible, but in a serious condition.—Lindsay Warder.

Try Skin Absorption Instead of Cosmetics

The constant use of cream and powder invites a coarsened, roughened condition of the skin, eruptions, enlarged pores and wrinkles. If you've learned this from experience, suppose you quit cosmetics and try the following:

Ask your druggist for an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax and begin using this at night. Apply like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Keep this up for a week or two. The way will literally absorb the coarse, colourless or blemished top skin, but so gradually as not to discommode you at all. Just as gradually the clear, velvety, naturally-tinted underskin comes to the surface. And mercolized wax becomes your everlasting friend.

For those wrinkles and large pores, make a face bath by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This has remarkable astringent and tonic properties, and beautifies immediately.

Church Was Filled For Choir Concert Last Night

Choir of St. Andrew's Church Presented an Exceedingly Excellent Entertainment Before Large Audience.

ARTISTS WERE DINED

A splendid example of how the congregation of St. Andrew's Church will rally behind any department of the church when occasion is offered, was given last night, when nearly five hundred attended the choir concert. It requires more than "esprit de corps" to attract such an unusually large and appreciative audience not only from St. Andrew's, but from many outside churches, and the reputation of the choir and others taking part was responsible to some degree for the large attendance. Not one of the large audience was disappointed, the concert as a whole being an exceedingly excellent one and the individual numbers each contributing a good deal of pleasure to the evening's entertainment.

The work of the choir was of a high order, and displayed not only a good deal of patient and efficient training, but a fund of musical ability that did credit to the very difficult and beautiful compositions they rendered during the evening. The first selection was the "Bells of St. Michael's Tower," by Stewart, and this famous chorus was splendidly interpreted by the choir. It is a selection that requires absolute balance of the different sections of the songsters, and extreme precision throughout, but its rendition was extremely good last night. The occasional unaccompanied portions were unusually beautiful, and showed to splendid advantage the ability of the choir, and in the first selection too, the accompaniment was particularly noteworthy. It was played by Mr. H. C. Treneer, Organist and Choirmaster, who played the accompaniments throughout in a very masterly manner.

The bass soloist of the evening was Mr. Frank Oldfield, of Toronto, who won has way into the hearts of Peterborough music-lovers in a leading role of "Judas Maccebaeus," which was presented here last month. His magnificent voice won rounds of applause, its power and resonance being the most noticeable qualities, and his ascents into the baritone range were appreciated. His offerings included "Arm, Arm Ye Brave," the solo from "Judas Maccabaeus" in which he scored such a triumph in the production of that oratorio.

Miss Olive Howell, soprano soloist, displayed a versatility which is above the ordinary, in her solos last night. Particularly in the Italian Aria "Il Bacio," by Luigi Arditi, was the range perb training, made evident.

Mr. E. Jones rendered a tenor solo and was forced to respond to an encore. He possesses an accurate full tenor voice that has a faculty of reaching the notes above the staff with a clearness and tone that cannot but be appreciated. The quartette in which Mr. Jones also sang was an exceedingly enjoyable one, the four voices harmonizing in a manner that made the beautiful setting of "Lead Kindly Light," a splendid vehicle for the four gentlemen who sang. They were Messrs. Jones, Anderson, Pilling and Thorpe, and their four voices blend in a way that makes their quartette singing a treat.

Mr. Herbert C. Treneer presided at the organ, and besides several splendid accompaniments, gave two organ solos which were greatly appreciated. The organ in St. Andrew's Church is a magnificent one, and its music giving qualities were brought to the foreground in a wonderful way last night by Mr. Treneer.

The Programme.

Organ Solo—Mr. Herbert C. Treneer. Lustpiele Overture, Keller Bella.

Chorus—"The Bells of St. Michael's Tower," Stewart.

Bass Solo—Mr. Frank Oldfield. "Nearer My God to Thee," Carey.

Male Quartette—Messrs. Jones, Anderson, Piling and Thorpe. "Lead Kindly Light," Dudley Buck.

Soprano Solo (in Italian)—Miss Olive Howell. "Il Bacio" (Dream of Home), Luigi Arditi.

Chorus—"Boat Song," Lohr.

Bass Solos—Mr. Frank Oldfield. (a) "Somewhere a Voice is Calling," Tate; (b) "Hail! King George," Quentin.

Chorus—"Tell Her I Love Her So" DeFaye (arr. by F. Mullen).

Tenor Solo—Mr. E. Jones. "My Hope is in the Everlasting," Stainer.

Organ Solo—Mr. Herbert C. Treneer.

Bass Solo (By Request) — Mr. Frank Oldfield. "Arm, Arm, ye Brave," Handel.

Chorus—"The Village Blacksmith," Weiss.

Bass Solo—Mr. Frank Oldfield. "The Skipper of St. Ives," Jos. Rockel.

Chorus — "Hallelujah" (Messiah), Handel

The chorus was composed of the following:

Soprano—Miss Olive Howell, Miss G. Evans, Miss J. Evans, Miss Eaton, Miss A. Givern, Miss Grant, Miss Henry, Miss Hamilton, Miss M. Laing, Mrs. B. Read, Miss G. Stevens, Miss A. Telford, Miss E. Telford, Mrs. F. Weir, Mrs. W. H. Waram.

Contralto — Mrs. Atkinson, Mrs. Boud, Miss J. Givern, Miss Ada Lee, Miss M. Rae.

Tenor—Mr. J. Anderson, Mr. Gilbert, Mr. E. Jones, Mr. R. Logan and Mr. B. Head.

Bass—Mr. G. Brookes, Mr. S. Calladine, Mr. R. Dickson, Mr. B. Minns, Mr. A. Pilling and Mr. C. Thorpe.

After the concert the choir and visiting artist were entertained at a supper in a very acceptable manner by the Ladies' Aid of the church.

Have You a Cold? Try FOSSAL BALM!

There is nothing slow or roundabout in the way Fossal Balm gets after a cold in the head, nasal catarrh or irritation in the nasal passages.

The action of its antiseptic, healing ingredients is made more certain and effective by the handy way of applying it. The collapsible tube containing the Fossal Balm ends in a little nozzle about half an inch long, which fits into the nostrils and applies the ointment well up in the passages.

Here it works almost like magic, killing the disease germs, checking the inflammation, relieving that burning irritation, clearing the passages for easy breathing, and restoring normal, healthy conditions.

Use Fossal Balm at the first sign of a cold in the head—it will not only save you from all the miserable discomfort of it, but in doing so will protect you from the more serious diseases which follow neglected colds. Get a 50c. tube from your Druggist, or if he cannot supply you, we will mail a tube prepaid on receipt of the 50c. National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited. 3

GLORIOUS HAIR

Always Attracts—Use Parisian Sage. Thin or Faded Hair Becomes Abundant and Radiant With Life.

Girls and women of all ages want to be charming, beautiful and attractive—it's their birthright—but unsightly, thin and characterless hair destroys half the beauty of a pretty face.

If your hair is not attractive, is falling out, streaky, full of dandruff, too dry, or if the scalp itches and burns, dont delay—use Parisian Sage. Apply with a sponge or cloth, taking a small strand of hair at a time. Rub it well into the scalp. It will go right to the hair roots, nourish them and stimulate the hair to grow strong and luxuriant. Parisian Sage removes dandruff with one application and cleanses the hair of dirt, dust and excessive oil. It will cool and invigorate the scalp and make the hair doubly beautiful.

Parisian Sage is a scientifically made preparation that gives the hair just what is needed to make it soft, fluffy, thick and gloriously radiant. It is delicately perfumed—not sticky or greasy. Sold in fifty cent bottles only at all drug and toilet counters. Look for the trade mark—"The Girl with the Auburn Hair." Accept no substitute.

Delighted users pronounce Parisian Sage the best hair tonic. Get a bottle from the Warne Drug Co. to-day. This firm will return the money if you are not satisfied.

TERRIBLE DESTRUCTION WROUGHT BY FIRE IN NORTH COUNTRY

Already bush fires are causing thousands of dollars loss in timber in Haliburton County, and if rain does not soon come, the outlook is serious for many places. Fires have been started at Harburn, at Lochlin, on the Burnt River and elsewhere, for various reasons, and one at least, the Harburn fire, is past all control, sweeping along miles wide. The law, and the enforcement of it, should be strict enough to make those too careless to look after their own, let alone others' interest, responsible for the damage caused. In a district depending so much on the product of the forest, it is mast ridiculous to see such reckless abuse by fire", especially when the summer is scarcely begun.

Other Fires.

Mr. Thos. Graham of Wilberforce, came to town by train this morning, and gives a thrilling report of the terrible destruction wrought by fire between Bancroft and Kinmount. The distance between those places is about sixty miles, and all along this route the flames are rapidly licking up vegetation—trees, shrubs, fences, and everything in its path. Destruction follows its wake and the vigilance of the settlers is taxed to its uthermost in their wild endeavour to battle with their much dreaded enemy, which swoops down upon them almost annually, considering neither age, condition, or financial standing of its victims. It is a most horrible presentment and a sad state of affairs to hear the crackling flames and see the fire speeding along with the velocity of a race-horse. At times it is following a moss-covered rock for a short distance, then leaping forward to follow a crevice or fissure in which brambles and stunted shrubbery grows. In this manner it is carried along from place to place.

Along Lines of I. B. & O.

The awfulness of the country along the line of the I. B. & O. at night is too thrilling to consider and looks like a gigantic display of fireworks, or the Hadesian world, as the tongues of fire shoot heavenward to be lost in the dark etheral surroundings. Such is a picture of the north country to-day along the Burnt River district.

A Close Cal.

The New York Graphite mills were closely guarded by men last night, and it was only through hard and diligent work that the structure was saved. It is surrounded by acres of burning timber and grasses.

Hotel Burned.

The Watson Hotel, at Kinmount Junction, was burned to ashes last night by the fires which surrounded it. Nothing short of a good week's rain will do any good and extinguish the flames. Some farm buildings are reported to have been destroyed.

The Railway Company is keeping a close watch along the tracks that no accident can possibly occur from fire. The rain of to-day may have a slight effet upon the burning region, but a week's rain would be more salutary.—Lindsay Warder.

Cheering Prospects For Real Estate

Peterboro' is Going to be a Large and Beautiful City

The real estate dealers of Peterborough are decidedly sanguine as to the bright prospects in store for the city. No more cheery announcement has been made than the half column of hopeful thought reproduced in the real estate page of The Examiner today by Messrs. T. Walker & Co., the aggressive firm who "Own the Earth and Sell it."

This firm have on their list attractive building lots from $2.50 a foot up to $50. And, on the strength of these inducements, they seek to rouse the attention of the public to the opportunity of buying now and getting in on the "ground floor" for speculation or building. Read their announcement on page ten.

FIRST OPEN-AIR SONG SERVICE IN THE CENTRAL PARK

The first open-air Gospel song service under the auspices of the Gospel Hall, will be held in Central Park on Sunday night, after the evening Church services—8 o'clock. There will be plenty of good, hearty singing and brief, pointed addresses. An urgent invitation to attend is extended.

Scribes Departing

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., May 23. Impatient and dissatisfied with the slowness and secrecy of the peace conference, many newspaper men who have flitted about here for a week or more, are leaving for home today. The mediators themselves, who are impressed with the dignity and necessity for deliberation, resent any suggestion that matters should be hurried. In the meantime the life insurance convention and other meetings are going on also at the Clifton House, and at present are productive of as much news as the much-heralded world interesting peace conference.

CONDITIONS IMPROVING

Mr. H. P. Kennedy of Toronto, and formerly of Peterborough, was in town to-day. He has just returned from a two-months' business trip to Winnipeg and Edmonton. To the Examiner, Mr. Kennedy stated that business conditions are showing an improvements. There are of course, many men out of work in the cities, but the outlook is brightening. An increased acreage is under crop, in Alberta, and a splendid class of immigrants are coming in, a large number coming from Dakota and other points across the line. Mr. Kennedy met one Dakota man who, with his family of seven sons, was going to settle outside of Edmonton. This new comer informed Mr. Kennedy that thirty families from his section were coming into Canada, with bank rolls running from $6,000 to $40,000. Mr. Kennedy naturally paid considerable attention to the live stock situation. The shipments east, he says, are heavy, and the packers are working over time. There has been a remarkable increase in the live hog industry, the shipments of 1913 over 1912 being 350 per cent., while for the first three months this year the shipments were greater than for the whole of 1913.

Merchants To Hold Picnic

Final arrangements have been completed for the holding of another big picnic under the auspices of the local Branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada. It will be held at the same place as last year, namely the T. A. S. Park, on Thursday, July 16th.

Arrangements are being made for the chartering of steam boats to carry the expected crowds to and from the Park and better transportation will be afforded this year, so as to avoid the crowded conditions that prevailed last summer. A meeting will be called shortly to appoint a large committee to take charge of the picnic, which is expected to be the largest ever held in Pterborough.

A general meeting of all the different sections of trade, including all the merchants will be held in the near future.

CONSISTENCY?

Editor Examiner,—In your issue of last evening, May 21st, we read quite an interesting account of the building of a Christian Science Church in Toronto, Ont., and their methods of so doing. We note that they never solicit money, which is very commendable.

We noticed in your issue of Tuesday of this week that a person bearing the title of C. S. D., which means a leading light or teacher of Christian Science, from Toronto, was visiting friends in this City and neighbourhood. This same person can tell, we are preparing to build a $100,000 Christian Science Church in Toronto, Ont., the funds for which must all be in the hands of the treasurer before a brick is laid. All this money is raised by love offerings from those who have been benefitted by Christian Science. Certainly we never solicit subscriptions; in fact, to do so would brand one an untrue Christian Scientist.

Those with whom this person was visiting have been helped by Christian Science, and are well able to contribute to the building fund.

To an intelligent business mind what does such a visit or conversation suggest? "Consistency, thou art a jewel."

Observer.

SICKNESS AMONG BABIES

There appears to be an epidemic of sickness among young babies during the past week. Numbers of them in all sections of the city have been reported ill. While the illness is severe it has not proved fatal in any cases reported as yet.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS FROM OUR WASH GOODS DEPARTMENT REGARDING DRESS LENGTHS THAT ARE QUITE EXCLUSIVE

Biscuit Fancy Ratine in a very modish tile effect; there is something a little different about this fabric which will appeal to milady of exacting taste; it will make up equally as well for suit or dress, in fact it is one of the most serviceable materials you could possibly find. The colour is perfectly fast and the length quite exclusive; very moderately priced $9.00.

Persian Silk and Cotton Crepe, an extremely handsome fabric that will lend itself admirably to the graceful limp style that Dame Fashion now decrees. The colour is an unusual shade of Cinnamon with a very dainty floral effect which blends perfectly. This exclusive length will make a dress of more than ordinary charm, and what is more the colours are perfectly fast, very specially priced at $4.50.

Take Advantage of the
SPECIAL PRICES
Prevailing in Every Department on TUESDAY
the Last Day of the Three Days' Holiday Sale.

Silk and Cotton Crepe is the material of which another of these lengths is made, the colour is positively handsome, for it is a most bewitching Tango shade. Only an expert could discern the difference in this fabric from an all silk, for it has that soft shimmery appearance found in materials that are twice as expensive. For the making of a real swagger dress you will find it difficult to equal; priced very reasonable at $5.90.

Honeycomb Ratine in pleasing shades of tan cream; a wash fabric of rare quality, possessing that wiry surface which denotes a tendency to outwear materials of a similar character. This is also an exclusive length and thoroughly adapted to the making of a really stylish suit at a cost which would prove quite moderate, for the price is only $6.90

A BRIEF REVIEW OF MUSICAL SEASON

A casual review of the musical events of the past season without any attempt to mention all of them or to classify them in their order of importance affords considerable satisfaction to those who are interested in the development of musical culture in Peterborough.

There is no denying the fact that the churches have contributed very largely to the acceptable music which has been heard since last September. Practically all of them are now equipped with good organs and for the most part the choirs are under the direction of capable directors and organists. Sunday after Sunday special music has been offered with Christmas and Easter calling forth extra special endeavours. Remembering that the services of choir members are almost entirely offered freely and liberally the congregations should recognize and encourage the efforts of those who compose their choirs. The music has all been of a devotional nature, but it possesses its own peculiar beauty and is a good influence upon the musical taste of the Church-going public. There are doubtless many who would decry the suggestion that Church music should be considered from its effect on the musical tendencies of the congregations, but still the fact remains, and given a good organ and good choir it is the duty of those in authority to secure the very best results, let the immediate object be what it may. There has been observed a healthy rivalry between the choirs of the City which confined to certain limits will continue to have a beneficial effect on the individual organizations calling upon them to wring from their talent their full powers.

There have been a number of concerts of a religious nature which have tended to enlarge the musical experiences of those who participated in them and those who heard them. The George Street Methodist Church choir produced the cantata, 'Ruth' in a very commendable manner. St. John's and All Saints' choirs sang the "Crucifixion" very acceptably, and the choirs of St. Paul's, St. Andrew's and Knox Churches arranged special programmes that introduced to the music lovers of the City many welcome numbers. In short, the public owes a debt of gratitude to the Churches through their choirs and organists for their works during the past season.

The renewed success of St. George's Choral Society gives a decided impulse to choral music in Peterborough, and strengthens the hope that under the Peterborough Choral Society its basis possesses an element of permanency which assures greater accomplishments in the future. To those who have occupied but humble positions in the chorus during the past two years under the direction of Mr. Devey the only reward for their time and their talents is the satisfaction of work well done. And this with the love of music impelling them must be the impelling motives of the members of the Peterborough Choral Society. There is even the attitude that this is pioneer work in the City, and it may be the foundation of an organization that will plant the musical seed widely and deeply among the entire citizenship.

The musical work in the schools is an unknown quantity to the general public, and the results of the Musical Society formed by a number of the ladies of the City is in the same class, although it may seem somewhat impertinent to say so. The Conservatory of Music has given the citizens the pleasure of hearing the Conservatory orchestra, which has more than held its own during the past ason. There have also been numerous recitals which have brought about many welcome musical things. The Conservatory responds with a full share in the general contribution to the City's musical development. There are also the music teachers throughout Peterborough who have been moulding their pupils and in some instances excellent talent has been uncovered.

This latter work has been in the form of attention to individuals, and there seems to be a wide scope for more general education of the public. A few years ago the 57th Regimental Band gave a series of winter concerts which were delightful. On this subject the only band concert of note since the 1st of September was that given by the Irish Guards and the recollection of the size of the audience is one of the most painful of the season. A mere handful heard a beautiful concert, and one refrains from drawing the very evident conclusion. In Berlin crowds were turned away from an auditorium that accommodated about three thousand persons or more. However, as this was the only opportunity to hear a band concert, there is no necessity to dwell upon this topic.

In conclusion the chief consolation and satisfaction of the winter months is found in the assistance of the Churches and in the splendid work of the St. George's Choral Society, assisted by the Conservatory orchestra. As stated above there is hope for better things in the near future. In the meantime there must perforce be a resting upon the laurels that have been won.

TRADES AND LABOUR NOTES

Notes by the Official Scribe

A goodly number of delegates were present at this week's meeting. President J. J. Hartley occupied the chair.

The following letter was received from London, England, and is self-explanatory:

Labour Party,
House of Commons,
May 4th, 1914.

Dear Sir,—I have to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 21st April to Mr. MacDonald, and to say that numerous communications in a similar strain have been received from different parts of Canada, and have been inserted in the "Daily Citizen." A question was also recetly put in the House of Commons as to the misrepresentations of emigration agents, and the reply showed that the Board of Trade were doing what they could to bring to the people here the exact situation in Canada.

Yours truly,
H. S. LINDSAY.
Parly. Asst.

Mr. Wm. Stevens,
Peterborough Trades Council.

THE CITY IMPROVEMENT WORKS.

Much discussion of a critical nature took place over the way Peterborough residents and taxpayers are treated when they apply for work to the foremen on the George street improvement scheme, and other public works. Foreigners are being put on, while the men who are entitled to the preference are turned down. Also that ex-Mayor Bradburn't promised to the Council that the contracts would call for a nine-hour day while 10 to 10 1-2 hours is the actual length of a day's work demanded by the Paving Company from its employees. The Municipal Committee will wait upon the Board of Works at its next meeting and ask an explanation.

A GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

The Secretary was instructed to write the proper authorities about establishing a Government Employment Bureau in this city. It was felt an imposition that a man without a job should be assessed a dollar (plus fifty cents interest till he earned his first money) by an employment agency run by a private company. A man when down and out or nearly so, should not be made the victim of any personal greed, and in a city this size a Government Employment Bureau was considered a necessity.

LABOUR EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ONTARIO.

Representative Harry Gainey, of the Barbers, was elected a delegate to the convention of the above named Association on the 25th at St. Thomas. Representative Wm. Cotton, of the Electric Works, was appointed an alternate.

THE S.A. BAND'S TRIP.

The handsome souvenir of Peterborough which was printed for the S. A. Band, who wants to swell its funds by their sale, came in for some criticism. It was felt that on seeing this fair city so ably illustrated, that many would come to a place where already there are not enough jobs to go around. After threshing out the subject, it was moved and seconded that the secretary write the "John Bull" Magazine and give local conditions unvarnished as a counter attraction.

Strawberries Will Bring High Prices

Very Few Peaches This Year But Good Harvest of Pears

ST. CATHARINES, May 22. — Peach crop stories offer many unusual features. A. W. Eckmeier, of Clinton Township, who exports four thousand baskets, is considered remarkably fortunate. On the farm of W. Goldring, of the same section, the eight rows bordering on Lake Ontario are in bloom, and all the other trees of his orchard are entirely devoid of blossom. The trees are not of the same kind either, as the varieties run north and south. This shows that peculiar atmospheric conditions prevailed just over these eight rows at the time the damage was sustained.

Prof. J. E. Howitt, of the Ontario Agricultural College took a trip through the Niagara district, and he says the alarming stories about the failure of the peach crop are not one whit exaggerated. Everywhere the supply has been cut down.

Professor Howitt says the pear crop looks like being a good one. Plums in the fancy varieties look fairly promising. Strawberries may be a good crop, but will fetch high prices. Canners are offering $2 a crate already.

A LITTLE JOKE ON THE OFFICER

Yesterday afternoon three young ladies from the Business College called at the Police Station for a drink of water. It was raining at the time and they carried an umbrella which they left in the corridor. A local scribe took the umbrella and deposited behind the Sergeant's desk. The young ladies, after having tasted freely of the aqua pura, were about to depart when they noticed their umbrella was missing and announced that fact. One of the police officers saw an umbrella behind the mentioned desk and considered it to be the property of the Chief.

"Is this it?" he said to the young ladies.

"Yes," said one, and taking it from his hand, wended their way to the Business College.

The P. C. was rather upset at this action and said he must recover the property. Therewith he donned his helmet and proceeded to the Business College to recover the Chief's umbrella. He found out his mistake.

Participating versus Non-Participating Life Policies Again

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO a Publisher of this City at age 43 took out a Ten Pay 15 year Endowment Policy of $2000, No 81226 in The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada paying therefore an annual premium of $187.20.

The Non-Participating Premium would have been $170.40.

The extra paid for profits per year (for 10 years only was $16.80.

On the 1st of May 1914 the above Policy matured and he received in cash $2620.25.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Policy he would have saved $168.00 extra in premiums paid for profits during the ten years but he would have lost $620.25 at maturity of Policy as he would have received only $2000.00 instead of $2620.25 as he did.

Where is there a man that would not like to invest money at such a rate and that too in the Largest and Strongest Life Insurance Company in the British Empire?

You are invited to call and investigate.

BECKER IS GUILTY

Jury Finds Him Guilty of Conspiracy to Kill Gambler.

After Second Trial In Which Police Lieutenant Hoped to Upset Finding of First Trial Court, Accused Leader In Murder of Herman Rosenthal Is Unanimously Declared Guilty by Jurymen.

NEW YORK, May 23. — Twelve men decided yesterday for the second time that Charles Becker was the arch-conspirator responsible for the Rosenthal murder, which nearly two years ago awoke New York to a realization of corruption in the police department and opened a new era of police reform.

Becker, once a police lieutenant, was found guilty of murder in the first degree. Only a pardon or interference again by the Court of Appeals can save him from following to the electric chair the four gunmen who shot Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, early on the morning of July 16, 1912. The jury yesterday decided that the gunmen were Becker's agents.

One ballot decided Becker's fate. It was taken almost immediately after the jurors returned from luncheon at an uptown hotel, where they went as soon as Supreme Court Justice Samuel Seabury finished his charge. It was unanimous for conviction. Tears streamed down the foreman's face as he announced the decision, and tears stood in the eyes of several other jurymen, but sympathy did not warp their judgment.

Becker's counsel announced that he would appeal, and gained a week's stay for the preparation of his future campaign. The defendant was granted a short meeting with his wife and his brothers and then taken back to his cell in the Tombs.

The whole proceedings from the time Becker was pronounced guilty until a recess was declared, occupied scarcely four minutes.

Mrs. Becker, learning the verdict, threw her arms around his neck and buried her face on his shoulder.

"Oh," she cried, "Charlie, I'm so sorry, so sorry. I didn't expect it."

She could say no more.

Becker stood, looking down at her as she wept.

POSSE IN PURSUIT.

Robbers Kill Cement Company's Cashier and Make For Woods.

CALGARY, May 23.—John Wilson, cashier of the Canada Cement Co. at Exshaw, had his head blown off by thugs yesterday morning at 10 o'clock as he was about to enter the works with the sum of $2,314 in cash to pay the hands.

The robbers opened fire without warning, and the bullets entered the unfortunate man's head. They then grabbed the bag and escaped across the Bow river on a raft, making for the bush, where it is reported they are surrounded by a force of 100 men, who started on their trail within a short time. Mounted police and C.P.R. detectives left here for the scene on track motors just before noon.

The robbers cannot get away without coming into the open country, and it is believed that their capture is only a matter of hours.

Was Old Time Ball Player.

BRANTFORD, May 23. — Dennis Hogan, turnkey at the local jail, died yesterday morning. In the early days of baseball in Canada, when the players wore no mitts or pads, Hogan was with the Guelph Maple Leafs.

Infernal Machine Explodes In Edinburgh Edifice But Little Damage Is Done — National Gallery and Royal Academy Are Visited by "Wild Women" and Much Mischief Is Done.

LONDON, May 23.—The "wild women" of the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant suffragette organization, yesterday continued their terrorizing tactics by making two separate attacks on the National art treasures. Early yesterday morning a woman armed with a loaded cane slashed five masterpieces in the National Gallery, which, it is announced, has been closed to the public until further notice.

Both women were arrested.

The pictures damaged at the National Gallery were a "Madonna and Child With Infant Saints," a "Portrait of Giovanno Malatini," "Saints John and Christopher and the Doge," "The Death of Saint Peter," and "Christ's Agony in the Garden." Apparently they were not irreparably injured. The painting slashed at the Royal Academy was entitled "Primavera," by George Clausen, a Royal Academician. The Academy was filled with a fashionable throng when a woman drew a butcher's cleaver which she had concealed in her clothing, and dashed at the picture, in which she hacked several gashes.

Attendants at once seized her, and it was only the presence of the police which prevented her from being roughly handled by the irate spectators. Both the women refused to give their names after their arrest.

The National Gallery vandal left a trail of blood behind her from cuts she had sustained by the falling broken glass from the pictures. The National Gallery was immediatey closed and all the students turned out.

Put Bomb In Church.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, May 23.—Militant suffragettes in the course of Thursday night placed an explosive machine in the Rosehall United Free Church in an attempt to blow it up. The bomb exploded, but did only slight damage.

Insisted on Seeing Prelate.

LONDON, May 23. — Miss Annie Kenney, one of the chief organizers of the Women's Social and Political Union yesterday afternoon made herself the self-invited guest of the Archbishop of Canterbury at Lambeth Palace. Together with a party of militant suffragette friends she proceeded in a motor car to the palace and succeeded in obtaining entrance afterward refusing to budge until she had seen the archbishop. Miss Kenney said she had made all preparations for spending the night at the palace.

HE WILL NOT CONFER.

Reports of Entry Into Mediation Denied by Carranza's Agent.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Jose Vasconcelos, the special agent of Carranza, who, it had been reported, had been chosen as a Constitutionalist representative to the Niagara conference, emphatically denied in a statement last night that he was to receive such an appointment or that Carranza would ever consider mediation as a solution of Mexico's internal affairs.

"As long as the Huertistas are at Niagara we shall not be represented there," said Mr. Vasconcelos. "The only way my party meets Huerta is on the battlefield. I will accept any mission that the chief of the Constitutionalist party may confer upon me. But I have no idea I will be named as delegate to the A. B. C. conference.

"Personally as a Mexican I thank the A. B. C. powers for their efforts to settle a conflict that has been brought in my country by some of its bad citizens. But the A. B. C. powers have no more right than the United States to interfere or advise in our internal questions."

RUTTAN FREE AGAIN

Visits Wife a Second Time and Breaks Through Cordon.

HE SEEKS ANOTHER VICTIM

Wife of Mooney Rapids Murderer Says Her Husband Is Waiting to Kill Alfred Contermanche—Midnight Visit For Food Is Followed By a Scramble In Dark—Shots Were Fired.

GRAVENHURST, Ont., May 23.—William Ruttan, the fugitive murderer, owes his liberty yesterday to the prompt action of his ten-year-old daughter at a time Thursday night when Provincial Detective Greer with six men had the house surrounded with the murderer inside. Warned by his daughter, he dashed into the very midst of the searchers, and in spite of the nine shots fired at him again reached the safety of the bush. One of the shots, it is thought, struck Ruttan. He has now taken to the bush southeast of his home, and was believed to be awaiting a chance to shoot down Alfred Contermanche at the funeral yesterday at Barkway. Contermanche stayed at home.

Neighboring barns which it was thought Ruttan might attempt to fire were all watched during the night, and at Ruttan's own home elaborate preparations for the capture of the man were made. Inspector Greer placed three armed men who know Ruttan by sight on the east side of the house where he must enter. So far as the police could learn the man had eaten but one meal since the murder, and they believed hunger would drive him home. It was arranged that the three men on the east side were to give a certain signal after Ruttan had safely entered the house, upon which Greer and his two men were to surround the house and effect his capture.

At 11 o'clock at night the three watchers on the east side came back. William Fryen, a brother-in-law of George Contermanche, one of Ruttan's victims, and Constable Cooper heard a noise in the bush on the top of a small knoll about fifty yards distant, and in a few moments Ruttan was seen advancing towards his home and taking advantage of every available growth to screen himself from the view of possible watchers. The three watchers lay still in the shelter of some brush and allowed him to enter his home.

The few minutes they waited before giving the signal proved fatal to the enterprise. Once inside the house, Ruttan, who is very deaf, stationed his young children in the house so that they could hear any noise from outside. Ten minues passed and still no signal was given, and Ruttan remained undisturbed in his home.

Detective Greer, on the other side of the house, was not aware the murderer had entered. Suddenly the little girl motioned to her father that she heard a noise outside and only stopping long enough to seize some pancakes his wife had prepared for him, the outlaw leaped through the door at which he had entered and dashed for the shelter, a huge rock. As he ran, Fryon fired three times in quick succession at him, while Bush took two shots at the fleeing man. In the darkness, only lighted by a bush fire some distance to the south, both marksmen missed him, and Ruttan broke away for the shelter of a pile of tins in a southeasterly direction from the house. Four more shots were fired at him on this stretch, and after one ride report, Ruttan seemed to stumble, fall, then get up and run again. When the police lost sight of him, he was heading for a heavy bush which extends two and a half miles to Bush Lake.

Ruttans' wife, when interviewed, admitted her husband had come home to get the pancakes which he knew she would have ready for him. She told the police of his placing the children where they could hear the slightest noise, and of his desperate break for liberty. He has a rifle, she said, and plenty of ammunition purchased in Barkway, the day before the murder, and claims he will never be taken alive. Ruttan told her again not to worry if he did not come back, because he might decide to make an end of himself in the bush. Mrs. Ruttan believes that her husband's hope is to kill Alfred, his son-in-law, before he is captured. She stated that he told her if he could get one shot at him he didn't care what happened. According to her he will succeed or surrender as soon as he kills Contermanche. A threat made by Ruttan to the effect that he would appear at the funeral ceremonies yesterday at Barkway and shoot down Alfred Contermanche and all the latter's friends put the neighborhood in a state of terror. When the funeral of the two victims did pass it was closely followed by a dozen armed men who kept close watch on the bush at each side of the road. Contermanche, hearing of Ruttan's threat, was afraid to venture out and remained in Tryon's home with two men while his wife was being buried two miles away.

Officers Pleaded Guilty.

LONDON, May 23.—A plea of guilty was handed in by seven of the nine British army officers and all the eight civilians charged in January last with receiving and giving illicit commissions in order to influence the allotment of contracts for supplying army canteens. All the officers except Lt.-Col. Whittaker were connected with the quartermaster's department of the army and had risen from the ranks. The civilians accused were employes of the firm of Lipton's, Limited. The bribery had been going on for years. Sentence was deferred by the judge until May 25.

Earthen Pots Passing.

It is still customary for the poorer classes in India to carry home water on the head. Earthenware vessels have hitherto been in use, but as aluminium vessels are becoming cheaper they are replacing them because of greater lightness.

PROUD OF BONAR LAW.

Carson Commends Leader's Reply to Speaker's Cross-examination.

LONDON, May 23. — Sir Edward Carson, speaking to a vast audience at Ipswich last night, referred to Thursday's scene, introducing it by saying that with the Archery that was going on in the House it was hard to keep his temper. "I never was more proud than I was yesterday afternoon of my leader, Mr. Bonar Law," he said. "That was the first time any leader of Opposition of Government had been cross-examined by the Speaker, and every man of the Opposition shook his hand and told him they were proud of him. Bonar Law had felt that the moment had come to make a protest against it."

Referring to the Ulster question, Sir Edward said: "We are going to finish it now one way or other. We are prepared. I hate the idea of civil strife, but I agree with Winston Churchill that there are worse things than bloodshed, although he said it in a different context."

THREE PETES CHASED OUT OF GAME AND FOUR OTHERS DRAW DOWN FINES

Umpire Walsh Turned Yesterday's Game at London Into a Burlesque in the Third Innings--Fox, Byrne and Wilcox Were All Banished.

UMPS' WORK AWFUL

LONDON, Ont., May 23.—Outfielder Welsh, secured from Fort Wayne Club, is expected here to-day. Yesterday's game developed into a burlesque in the third innings when Umpire Welsh put Fox, Byrne and Wilcox out of the game and also fined Tracey, King, Kelly and Belting. He claimed they used abusive language but the players deny they said anything offensive. The Umpire's work was very unsatisfactory in both games.

A London despatch says:

LONDON, May 2.—Southpaw Heck held Peterborough to one lone hit, and won 7 to 0 this afternoon, it coming in the ninth when King singled with oneman out, and it was the only ball hit that looked like a safe one. The locals pounded Tracey for nine, bunching four of them with three walks and two errors for six runs in the third. The warning by President Fitzgerald to Peterborough for umpire baiting did not stop the visitors, as six players were fined and three of them were ordered out of the game by Umpire Walsh.

FOOTBALL

On Monday (Victoria Day), St. John's Football Club will run a trip to Warsaw to meet that Village in a friendly game of football, this being the first away-game this season. The game will be played in the evening, and promises to be a good one, as Warsaw is considered to be one of the best Canadian football clubs around this district. This is an invitation to all football players, club members and others. The team will be selected on the grounds and all players should remember to bring their clothes. The cost of the trip will not be more than 40 cents and the Warsaw boys are standing a feed. Now all you footballers come and have a good time. The busses will leave the Post Office at 2 o'clock.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Without any desire to be harsh in criticism or hasty in judgment, it may be stated that a shake-up in the Peterborough Ball Club is needed and needed at once. There is no use in ignoring the fact that a team that can only score four runs in five games is out-classed in the League race; neither is there any advantage in remaining blind to the fact that the fans are disheartened, where they are not disgusted.

Peterborough is one of the best ball towns for its population on the continent. It proved it last year when it showed the third best attendance in the Canadian League. It furnished more evidence this year with the third biggest opening day attendance. More people have been present at a game here than ever saw a game at Hamilton. The people are baseball mad and a team that was making any kind of a fight would be patronized.

This is the critical stage. A few more weeks of the present "Runless Wonders' will give professional baseball here a body blow from which it may take years to recover. The fans are not clamouring for a pennant-winner. A team that will be up there fighting is all that they want, and such a team will get support.

Something must be done at once to strengthen the team. The weak spots are apparent—there is no need of going into details. For one thing no ball club can get very far with an outfield that has a collective batting average of well under the .200 mark. There is no desire to knock the players, they are doubtless doing the best they can, but so far their best has been far from being good enough.

THE ERIE YANKEES HERE FOR THE HOLIDAY

The Erie Yankees will be with us on Monday, and two games will be taged on the holiday, the morning game at 10 o'clock and the afternoon fixture at 3 o'clock. With the visitors are a number of players familiar to local fans, including McNeal, last year's Peterborough catcher; Dorbeck, Schaeffer, Wiltse, Behan, and other Guelph players. The new players include Manager Heine Smith, Gygli and Dawson, stars of the Inter-State League series last year, and Pitchers Brown and Morse, who are the property of the Buffalo Internationals.

The Petes will be reinforced by several new players. First-baseman Swartling is due in here to-day, while a new outfielder is expected to report at London to-day. The new gardener is Welsh, secured from the Fort Wayne Club. He fielded .922 in 90 games last year, while his batting figures were as follows:

G	AB	R	H	2b	3b	HR	Pc.
90	309	58	99	14	5	4	.276

Big holiday crowds will undoubtedly see the two clashes between the Petes and Yankees.

Batting Averages Of The Petes

The Figures Are Complete Up to Thursday Night, But Do Not Include Yesterday's Game

It seems cruel to publish the batting averages of the Peterborough Ball Club, but the fans want the information, so here are the figures, big and small—not many big:

	G	AB	R	H	Pc.
Byrne	11	39	4	13	.333
Kelly	5	18	1	4	.308
King	11	41	4	10	.244
Schettler	6	13	0	3	.231
Wilcox	9	24	2	5	.208
Belting	2	5	0	1	.200
Fox	11	41	4	8	.195
Swartz	8	27	1	5	.185
Gorman	11	33	5	5	.152
Sterling	3	7	1	1	.143
Blount	11	41	1	5	.125
Miller	6	12	0	1	.083

Tracey	3	7	0	0	.000

BASEBALL CHATTER

One hit.

Good-night!

Four runs in five games.

"Some kind of going out there." Some of the hitless hitters will have to hit the trail.

What d' ye mean? Can't hit? Haven't we hit the bottom.

Pitching for the Peterborough Ball Club is just about as easy as skinning Rockefeller out of a million.

The question of the hour in Peterborough last night was who made that hit.

Glimpse our record for the week—

G	R	H	E
5	4	20	14

There is something wrong with the batting order when the lead-off man can only score one run in twelve games.

That loud noise you hear is Davey Rowan chuckling down in Dubuque.

"If we only had Hilliard back," said a fan last night "Yes and Ty Cobb'd look pretty good out there, too, wouldn't he?" replied another.

This new first baseman will have to hit around .750 on ordinary occasions, and .960 in the pinched.

The Petes will soon have forgotten the way around the bases.

G.T.R. HAS NOT WITHDRAWN ITS APPLICATIONS

Special Wire to The Examiner;

OTTAWA, May 23.—When the House opened this morning Sir Wilfrid Laurier asked the Prime Minister whether a rumour that the Grand Trunk Pacific had withdrawn its application to the government for a further guarantee of bonds for the completion of the mountain section were true. Premier Borden replied, there had been negotiations but no withdrawal of applications.

You Are Invited To Be There

The Gurney Oxford Gas Range is the Last Word In Cooking Convenience.

At the TURNBULL STORE, during the week of June 1st, there will be a series of short talks, on the subject of Kitchen Engineering.

Admission will be by Tickets, which will be sent to our customers and any other Ladies interested, upon request.

The Lecturer will tell how to prepare a meal, a simple meal or an elaborate one, on a Gurney Oxford Gas Range, so that everything will come out right: i.e. each course, from soup to dessert, ready in the proper order and done "to a turn."

The Gurney Foundry have gone into the matter of Kitchen Engineering very thoroughly and the information you will get at these talks will take all the uncertainty and much of the labour out of cooking.

Cooking by Gas is a wonderful help to modern house-keeping. It eliminates waste, time, the carrying of coal and ashes.

So every housewife should attend these talks.

They will not be long but they will be interesting.

At Afternoon Lectures, Tea will be served to visitors.

All the Ladies of Peterboro' and Vicinity are invited. The information that you will get will be valuable three times a day.

Remember the Dates and the Place:--

FUNERAL OF MRS. DWYER

Woman Who Committed Suicide Yesterday Morning Will Be Buried To-morrow

The funeral of the late Mrs. Daniel Dwyer, who committed suicide in St. Peter's cemetery yesterday morning, will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2.3 o'clock. The funeral will leave the residence of Mr. John Dwyer, a brother-in-law of the deceased, 622 Aylmer street, at 2:30 o'clock, and will be held to St. Peter's Church and cemetery. The body was removed last night from Lane and Enno's Undertaking Rooms, where it was taken yesterday morning, to the home of Mr. Dwyer, last night.

WILL PROCLAIM PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT

Special Wire to The Examiner:

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., May 23.—That Sir Edward Carson will proclaim provisional government in Ulster immediately the Home Rule Bill is passed by the Commons next week, is the opinion of some here who have been watching the progress of the crisis for a year. Meanwhile Carson is uncommunicative as to his probable action, although his attitude continues uncompromising. Speaking at Ipswich yesterday he said he agreed with Winston Churchill that there were worse things possible than bloodshed in Ulster, although he agreed with him from a different standpoint. The Government has given notice that it will not allow the bill to be held up by rowdyism in the Commons. The developments in Ulster next week will depend on just how far Carson will go. If he attempts to seize the Customs and Post Offices as some of his friends say he will, then there will be bloodshed enough. If England ever needed to pray for divine guidance and peace it is to-day.

Attorney-Gen. Has Status

That the Attorney-General has the right to intervene before the trial in the Reid-Aull case, and to move to dismiss the action, has been decided by Mr. Justice Middleton. He overrules the preliminary objection taken by George H. Watson, K.C., that the Attorney-General had no status to make such a motion, and sets May 30 for the resumption of the argument.

Mr. Watson argued that the Attorney-General's right to intervene was restricted to examining witnesses and adducing evidence at the trial. His Lordship says as to this—

"There is nothing to restrict in any way the meaning to be attributed to the word 'intervene.' Mr. Watson contends that this litigation is the mere private concern of the parties litigant. The Legislature has thought otherwise. The public are concerned, and the Attorney-General, as representing the public, is authorized to intervene, that is, according to the meaning given that word in the Oxford Dictionary, 'Come in as something extraneous . . come between, interfere so as to prevent or modify a result.' This makes it the duty of the Attorney-General to intervene so as to modify the result, which would otherwise be obtained in this private litigation if he thinks the public interest demands it."

His Lordship points out that it has been stated that an open trial might seriously affect the life or reason of Mrs. Robert Aull, Jr. (nee Reid), and adds that on the case made out on behalf of the young lady it is easy to conceive that it is not one to be paraded in the open court if there is any real doubt as to jurisdiction. No judge, he thinks, should be asked to pronounce an opinion upon it unless it is clear that he has jurisdiction, as it is a matter which must affect the whole life of the unfortunate young woman.

The action is one brought to annul the marriage in Cobourg on July 25, 1911, of Doris Reid to Robt. Aull, Jr.

Mrs. R. L. Sarginson and son, Norman, are spending the holiday in Port Perry.

Mr. Roy Thompson of the Bank of Ottawa, Ottawa, is in Town for the holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Wilson, Stewart street, will spend the holiday in Toronto visiting with relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Christoph Reidel, 193 Rubidge street, left to-day for Picton, where they will spend the next month or two.

Miss Mary Dickson, with her friend, Miss West, of Campbellford, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Smith, Rogers street.

The games in the Public School Baseball League, scheduled for Monday, May 25th, will be played on Tuesday, May 28th, instead.

Miss Eleanor Seward, of Clifton Springs, U.S.A., who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Oscar Brecken, of Havelock, is in the city to-day.

The many friends of Mr. G. L. Hay, Hunter Street east, who has been seriously ill for the past three days, will be glad to know that he is much improved.

Mr. Wilson Taylor, B.A., of the Collegiate staff, who has been seriously ill for some weeks past, is making steady improvement towards recovery.

Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Morrison left this morning for Winnipeg, where Dr. Morrison will attend the Dominion Dental Convention held there next week. They will visit friends in Brandon and Souris before returning home in about ten days.

In the examinations at the Ontario College of Art, held last week, the O. A. C. scholarship, in the life class, was awarded to Miss Kate Livingstone Taylor, daughter of Mr. Wilson Taylor, B. A., of the Collegiate Institue staff, this city.

Miss Irene Douglas, a former student of the local Collegiate, has completed her three-year-course at the General Hospital, Brockville, graduating from that institution, with high honours, her percentage on examinations being ninety. Miss Douglas is at present in the City.

A very pleasant time was spent at the Belmont Club rooms last evening when a large number of young people availed themselves of the invitations of the Club to enjoy a dance. Splendid music was provided by Mr. Asa Huycke, and during an intermission in the programme, dainty refreshments were served.

Mr. John E. Nelson, of Pollokshield, Scotland, who has been ill in Nicholls Hospital for some time with pleurisy, has so far recovered as to be able to make the trip home, and he will sail on June 6th, via New York. Mrs. Nelson, who has been here during the illness of her husband, has made many friends in Peterborough, who will regret to learn of her departure.

Two Constables Leave The Force

A meeting of the Police Commissioners was held last evening, there being present Judge Huycke (chairman), Mayor Buller and Police Magistrate Dumble.

A letter was read from F. W. Burnham resigning his position as constable and asking to be relieved of his duties at once. On the motion of Mayor Buller and Magistrate Dumble the resignation was accepted.

It was moved by Mayor Buller, and seconded by Magistrate Dumble that Constable Phimister be relieved from duty on May 27th in accordance with his request, and that he be then paid up to May 31st; also that H. D. Lawrences' appointment date from May 23rd. Carried.

Chief Thompson recommended Ross Green be appointed a constable in place of F. W. Burnham, who had resigned. The chief's recomendation was acted upon, and the Commission decided to appoint Ross Green on probation at a salary of $650 a year. The appointment will date from May 23rd.

Chief Thompson reported that Constable Sills was ill in the hospital. Chief Thompson was authorized to put on a special constable in his place. The temporary man will be paid on the Chief's certificate.

Empire Day At Knox Church

Empire Day will be recognised in Knox Church to-morrow evening. The choir will render music suitable for the occasion. Rev. Mr. Keith will preach. His theme will be "Pious Patriotism." The Sons of England will attend the service.

DELEGATES TO CONVENTIONS

Mr. L. Myland, President of the Peterborough Typographical Union, leaves this evening for St. Thomas, for the purpose of attending the Labour Education Association Convention, on Monday, and the Provincial Conference of Typographical Unions, on Tuesday. Mr. Hugh Robertson, President of the Labour Education Association, wil also attend. It is expected that over 200 delegates will be present.

You will like the rich strength and full flavor.

A WARNING TO YOUNG MEN WHO VISIT THE WOODS AROUND CITY

A word of warning is directed to the boys and young men who journey to the woods outside the City. A week ago unintentionally or otherwise someone set fire to what is known as the "wintergreen" a few miles west on the C. P. R., and considerable damage resulted. It will not be surprising if farmers who own the woods through which citizens are permitted to roam will withdraw the privilege if vandalism of this nature is continued. There are those who appreciate the privilege of sauntering through the many woods on all sides of the City, but too many youths forget themselves when they pass the City's boundaries.

Stock Markets

NEW YORK, May 23.—Latest reports indicate irregularity in the stock market, but it will be good policy to buy on recessions.

The outlook is bullish, with good crops in sight, money easy and the prospect excellent for a very large July investment demand, influential interests usually range themselves on the constructive side of the market more aggressively and the prices reflect such change. Realizing may occur on the rate decision announcement, regardless of its character, but at such times no material set back is expected and good buying will be found according to responsible channels of information.

Specialties most favoured include T.C., I.C.E., B.S., A.C.O., W.X., and P.R.S.

Room trading element is inclined to sell the active stocks including U.P., R.G., R.C.P., and U.S.

S.P., Atch., St.P., are taken up as good speculations from the bull viewpoint.

Cardinals Created

Secret Consistory is Held in Rome by Pope Pius X

MAKES APPEAL FOR PEACE

ROME, May 26.—At a secret consistory held at the Vatican yesterday morning Pope Pius created 13 new cardinals. A number of bishops from various countries also were confirmed in their sees.

At the same time official announcement was made of the creation of Mgr. Belo, Patriarch of Lisbon, as cardinal. His name had been reserved "in pectore" at the consistory of 1911.

The ceremony, which was accompanied by the brilliance usual on such occasions at the Vatican, was preceded by a short allocution, after which the names of the new cardinals were announced as follows: Mgr. Louis Nassaire Begin, Archbishop of Quebec, Canada; Mgr. V. Guisasola Y. Menendez, Archbishop of Toledo, Spain; Mgr. Domenico Serafini, Assessor of the Congregation of the Holy Office; Mgr. Della Chiesa, Archbishop of Bologna, Italy; Mgr. John Csernock, Archbishop of Esztergom, Hungary; Mgr. Hector Irnee Sevin, Archbishop of Lyons, France; Mgr. Francis Von Bettinger, Archbishop of Munich, Batavia; Mgr. Felix Von Hartmann, Archbishop of Cologne, Germany; Mgr. F. G. Piffl, Archbishop of Vienna, Austria; Mgr. Philipp Giustini, Secretary of the Congregation of the Sacraments; Mgr. Michael Lega, Dean of the Tribunal of the Rota; Mgr. Scipio Tecbi, Assessor of the Consistorial Congregation; Rt. Rev. Francis Aidan Gasquet, President of the English Benedictines.

The Pontiff was surrounded by all the members of the Sacred College living in Rome and by those who are now here, including Cardinals Gibbons, Farley and O'Connell.

The Pope appointed Cardinal Francis Della Volpe to the office of chamberlain, in which position he will direct the affairs of the church during the conclave.

Cardinal Diomede Falconio, formerly apostolic delegate in Canada and the United States, also was raised to the rank of chamberlain.

The allocution of the Pope was a strong appeal for political and social peace through the restoration of religion and the influence of the church.

Home Rule Passes

End of Long Struggle Comes Suddenly in British House

MASTERMAN IS DEFEATED

LONDON, May 26.—By a vote of 351 to 274, a majority of 77, the House of Commons yesterday afternoon read a third time the Irish Home Rule Bill and passed the hard-fought measure on to the House of Lords, where another effort will be made by means of an amending bill to bring the act into shape, which will secure it the good will of all classes of Irishmen.

The end of the struggle came quite suddenly, the Unionists refusing to debate the bill without further information as to the Government's intentions in regard to the proposed amending measure.

Premier Asquith lifted a corner of the veil, but though Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, admitted that the Premier's words were as conciliatory as usual, he hastened to add that Mr. Asquith had not told them anything. To discuss the third reading under the circumstances would, he said, be futile and ridiculous. He added:

"Let the curtain ring down on this contemptible farce. It is only the end of an act and not of the play. The Government can carry the bill through Parliament, but the concluding act of the drama will be in the country, where an appeal to the people will not end in a farce."

Mr. Law then remarked that when the Government was unable to obtain a seat in Parliament for a member of the Cabinet, meaning Mr. Masterman, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, an appeal to the people was not far off.

After a brief speech by Premier Asquith, in which he defended the Government against the charge of ignoring the rights of the minority and redressing the balance of power between the parties by means of the Parliament act he explained that he was introducing an amending bill not because he thought that the Irish Home Rule measure was bad or imperfect, but because he was anxious for peace.

The vote was then taken and the announcement of the figures showing a majority of 77 for the bill brought out a great demonstration by the Nationalists and the Liberals. As one man they rose from their seats cheering and waving hats and handkerchiefs.

The division was taken strictly on party lines. The followers of William O'Brien abstained from voting, Mr. O'Brien expressing the view that the Premier's action was not straight dealing, either with England or Ireland.

Under the provisions of the Parliament act the bill becomes law after this stage, as it had already twice passed through all its stages in the House of Commons in two separate sessions, and the vote of the House of Lords therefore has no further effect.

The House was seething with excitement from the moment the Speaker took the chair. Members of the various parties indulged in loud outbursts of cheering when their respective champions entered the chamber, while at the same time mocking banter was shouted from the opposite benches.

Mr. Ganzoni, the Unionist who on Saturday defeated C. F. G. Masterman, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, in the bye-election at Ipswich, met with such an uproarious welcome on his introduction that he appeared glad to escape from the limelight.

The Rt. Hon. James Lowther, the Speaker, took an early opportunity of applying balm to the sores left by the violent incidents of Thursday last. He frankly admitted that he should not have used the expression he did when he asked Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, whether he approved of the disorderly demonstration by the Unionist members. The Speaker appealed to the Premier to give the House some information regarding the bill to be introduced after the passage of the Irish Home Rule Bill for the amendment of that measure, so as to meet some of the objections of the people of Ulster.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The steamer Royal Edward, of the C.N.R. line, struck an iceberg, while in the Gulf of St. Lawrence Saturday, but did herself no harm.

A picture of King George V., by John Lavery, in the Royal Scottish Academy at Edinburgh, was hacked by a suffragette Saturday.

A great explosion occurred Sunday night in the gun cotton factory of the German Explosives Co. Six men were killed and two are missing.

Wm. Warner, an aeronaut, fell 1,000 feet into Lake Erie, Sunday at Cleveland, and was drowned. His bride witnessed the tragedy.

Wreckage of the steamer W. H. Gilbert, which went down after being struck by the steamer Calvere last Friday, is menacing vessel traffic in Lake Huron.

Davis Orr, Chatham, was drowned in a ditch near Chatham Sunday night, when his auto upset in the ditch and he was pinned beneath it in two feet of water.

Conductor Arthur Duckworth, aged 45 years, 999 Perth avenue, fell from the running board of a westbound Dundas street car in Toronto on Sunday and died fifteen minutes later.

The death occurred yesterday in London of Sir Francis Belsey, who was a prominent politician outside of Parliament and who was the president of the World's First Sunday School Convention in London in 1889.

RAMEL STILL MISSING.

Steady Search Kept Up For Airman Who Disappeared.

LONDON, May 26.—Hope for the safety of Gustave Hamel, the daring British aviator, has almost been abandoned, and it is feared he was drowned in crossing the channel.

Hamel left Le Crotoye, France, for Hendon, shortly after eight o'clock Saturday morning, and no word of h' has since been received from any quarter. His course lay across the English Channel, and the distance of the flight was about 100 miles.

Torpedo boats and hydroplanes spent all day Sunday searching the channel for signs of Hamel's aeroplane, but failed to locate it or any sign of the aviator. During the search two naval hydroplanes were wrecked at Dover by the rough sea, but a rescue was effected by pilots.

Joe Martin To Contest Seat.

LONDON, May 26.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—An interesting bye-election is expected in London early next month. Joe Martin, member for East St. Pancras, called a meeting of his association on Friday, when it was decided he should resign his seat and offer himself for re-election as an Independent Liberal and Labor candidate.

His resignation has followed the adoption of R. L. Reiss as the official Liberal candidate because Martin voted against the Government in the Marconi division in the House of Commons.

Inoculates Rabbits at Large.

MARSEILLES, May 26.—Rabbits which had been in oculated with the virus of rabies, tuberculosis, typhoid and other deadly diseases, were stolen Sunday night from the laboratory of a bacteriologist in the suburbs of Marseilles. The bacteriologist had been experimenting in the production of vaccines. The police are making every effort to recover the animals before they are sold or eaten, but so far without success.

Germans Watching Mediation.

BERLIN, May 26. — The German Foreign Office, while watching with great interest the progress of the Mexican mediation conference at Niagara Falls, and hoping that it will be successful in averting war, declares it has no positive information which would enable it to foreshadow the result of the meetings.

An impression, it was stated, had been created in German official circles by the latest news from Mexico that the Government of Provisional President Huerta would hardly be able to maintain its existence much longer.

Made Attempt To Wreck Train.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., May 26.—Wreckers are suspected to have loosened the rails on the C.P.R. track 19 miles west of here yesterday morning, causing a wreck which for hours blockaded the tracks. Robbery is supposed to have been the motive of the wreck. An official inquiry is under way.

Entire Garrison Executed.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Mexico City despatches to diplomatic sources here Saturda reported that when Constitutionalist troops captured Tepica several days ago they put to death the entire Federal garrison of 300 offices and men. These despatches also confirmed reports that Gen. Obregon's forces were hastening on to Guadalajara and there was great apprehension among foreigners in that city. Bandits from the mountains were reported to be menacing the city.

THIN PEOPLE CAN INCREASE WEIGHT

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten, into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat-producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive.

Druggists sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

DUKE AT WOODBINE

His Royal Highness and Party Witness King's Plate

BEEHIVE WINS FEATURE

TORONTO, May 26.—The opening of the race meet of the Ontario Jockey Club at the Woodbine on Saturday was marked by several events which made it the most notable affair in recent years in Toronto. The guests of honor were the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia and their suite, and the historic King's Plate was presented to the winner by the Governor-General. Earl Grey, who was to have been present, was forced by illness to stay away. The reappearance in public of Sir James Whitney, after his illness, added another interesting feature to the function.

Harry Giddings won his third King's Plate under ideal conditions and before the biggest throng ever assembled at Woodbine Park. The easy victory of Bee Hive was his second in succession, and followers of the Oakville stable fondly look to see Harry Bassett II. make it three straight next May.

The eight starters that lined up made it look a respectable field, but the long straggling finish showed what a negative chance had Porcupine and the others that were nearly a sixteenth behind.

First race, six furlongs, purse $700, Trial Plate, for three-year-olds and up, handicap—1st, Dorothy Dean; 2nd, Calgary; 3rd, Privet Petal. Time, 1.13 1-5.

Second race, five furlongs, Doncaster Plate, purse $700, for two-year-olds, selling — 1st, Stalwart Helen; 2nd, Casaba; 3rd, Felderol. Time, 1.02.

Third race, 1 1-16 miles, purse $1,500, for three-year-olds and upward, selling—1st, Tactics; 2nd, Edna; 3rd, Barnegat. Time, 1.47 2-5.

Fourth race, King's Plate, 1 1-4 miles, purse $5,000, for three-year-olds and up, foaled in Canada—1st, Bee Hive; 2nd, Dark Rosaleen; 3rd, Sea Lord. Time, 2.10 3-5.

Fifth race, two miles, Aintree Steeplechase, purse $1,000, for four-year-old and up, handicap — 1st, Exten; 2nd, Tom Horse; 3rd, Juverance. Time, 4.13 2-5.

Sixth race, William Mulock Cup, purse, $1,000, 1 1-16 miles, for three-years-olds and up foaled in Canada—1st, Hearts of Oak; 2nd, Cayuga; 3rd, Rustling. Time, 1.50.

Seventh race, six furlongs, purse $600, for three-year-olds and up, selling—1st, Gold Cap; 2nd, Laura; 3rd, Rey. Time, 1.14.

All previous attendance records were broken on the holiday and the feature of the day was the capture of the Woodstock Plate by J. W. Schorr's David Craig.

First race, six furlongs, purse $600, for three-year-olds and up—1st, Galaxy; 2nd, Yorkville; 3rd, Luther. Time, 1.14 1-5.

Second race, four furlongs, purse $700, for two-year-olds foaled in Canada—1st, Limin; 2nd, Hy Bassett II.; 3rd, Mona G. Time, .49 4-5.

Third race, Juvenile Stakes, 4 1-2 furlongs, purse $1,500, for two-year-olds—1st, Ed. Crump; 2nd, Sir Edgar; 3rd, Ida Claire. Time, .55.

Fourth race, Woodstock Plate, purse, $3,000 added, 1 1-8 miles, for three-year-olds — 1st, David Craig; 2nd, Waterboss; 3rd, Sandbar. Time, 1.54 3-5.

Fifth race, two miles, steeplechase, selling, purse $1,000 added, for four-year-olds and up—1st, Idle Michael; 2nd, King Cash; 3rd, Jiu Jitsu. Time, 6.09 3-5.

Sixth race, one mile and 70 yards, Queen's Hotel Handicap, purse for three-year-olds and up — 1st, Edda; 2nd, Pardner; 3rd, Just Red. Time, 1.45 3-5.

Seventh race, six furlongs, purse $600, for three-year-olds and up—1st, Botala; 2nd, Duquesne; 3rd, J. H. Houghton. Time, 1.15.

FRANCES KOSSUTH DEAD.

Son of Great Hungarian Patriot Was 78 Years Old.

BUDAPEST, May 26. — Francis Kossuth, son of the great Hungarian patriot, died here yesterday, aged 78. He had been an invalid for many months, and his death did not come as a surprise.

In January last, during a crisis in his illness Kossuth was married on his sick bed to Countess Benyovsky, widow of his life-long friend. Such had been the wish of Count Benyovsky, made on his deathbed, and Kossuth and the countess, who intended to marry in March, hastened the nuptials when Kossuth's illness took a turn for the worse.

Francis Kossuth took his father's place as leader of the Hungarians soon after Louis Kossuth died in 1894. Up to the time of his illness Francis Kossuth led his countrymen, in their political struggles, with vigor and much success.

RUTTAN GIVES UP.

Mowey Rapids Murderer Wearies of Privations of the Bush.

GRAVENHURST, May 26. — Contrary to police expectations and to his threat that he would never be taken alive, William Ruttan, the Muskoka bushman and trapper, who, on Wednesday morning, shot and killed his daughter, Mrs. Alfred Coutermanche, and Geo. Coutermanche, at their home at Mowey's Rapids, quietly surrendered to Inspector Greer, of the provincial police, and Constable Fielding, of Bracebridge, at his home at nine o'clock Saturday morning.

Half famished, his clothes in tatters, and his face and hands torn by the heavy bush of the district, the murderer presented a pitiable appearance when taken in hand by the police. Through Friday's heavy rainstorm, Ruttan lay concealed in the bush, and he told his wife Saturday morning, that once, when his pursuers were within twenty-five yards of him, he was forced to swim the Black river to escape detection. Though he was soaked to the skin, and the raw air brought on a heavy frost Friday night, Ruttan was forced by the presence of three watchers on his house, to lie in the bush but a few hundred yards from his home, all night. At five o'clock the watchers were themselves forced by the cold air to seek shelter in Henry Cook's residence and the murderer crept into the shelter of his barn, within a stone's throw of his home. After half an hour in the barn Ruttan risked everything and crawled through the cellar window into his home, where he ate ravenously. While he was warming himself at the stove, Provincial Detective Greer, Constable Fielding and three other armed men returned to resume their vigil on the house and the murderer's escape was cut off.

His wife said that it was primarily the message of their minister, the Rev. Findlay Crowther, which persuaded her husband to surrender. "Mr. Crowther told me to tell my husband it would be far better for him to surrender to the law, and I did."

Ruttan says his only regret is that he did not succeed in killing his son-in-law, Alfred Coutremanche, and Henry Cooke, a neighbor.

CHILDREN'S EYESIGHT

An astonishing number of school children suffer from the effects of imperfect vision, and many of them are unjustly blamed for being unambitious or mentally stupid. It has been shown by authentic investigation under municipal direction that from 20 to 30 per cent. of the children in public schools have defective vision and should wear Glasses.

We make a specialty of examining children's sights by the most improved scientific methods, and if your child does not need glasses we will tell you so frankly, and make no charge for the examination. We carry a special line of heavy weight Children's Spectacle Frames in Gold Filled and Aluminum.

Should your child require glasses we guarantee that the glasses we fit are the proper corrections and will give best results.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By LOUIS TRACY

"Derry," she murmured, "make no outside engagement for to-morrow evening. If you are already booked up, cry off. I want to dine with you in some quiet place—I suppose there is some hotel or cafe in Newport where none of our friends go. Find out, and send me a note, telling me the time and place. I shall come in a hired carriage, and quietly dressed—not in dinner clothes, I mean—and you must do the same. I must have a long talk with you, wholly independent of our servants, you understand."

"I shall obey, at any rate," he said, with a smile that failed to conceal the unbounded surprise in his eyes. "May I put a question?"

"No, not now. Full details later, as people say in telegrams."

They parted, and he was so plagued by foreboding that he would have driven past the Ocean House had not the horse turned in at the gateway of its own accord. If Nancy's manner during the day had shown the least trace of worry or annoyance, he would have attributed her strange request to a desire to take him into her confidence. It was possible, for instance, that some busybody had warned her that a too marked preference for the society of one man among the many in Newport would probably reach her husband's ears; but, in that event, her outraged pride could never have been veiled by such a mask of unsullied cheerfulness. If any more drastic explanation of the next day's meeting suggested itself to his troubled mind, he crushed it resolutely. In his present mood, the slightest hint of scandal associated with Nancy's winsome personality due to their friendship was anathema. He would have endured any loss, fortune, even life itself, to save her name from besmirchment.

When he alighted from the dog-cart he knew it was useless to try and sleep; so he lit a cigar, and sat in a remote corner of the verandah. Then he began seriously to analyse her words. They were to meet in clandestine fashion; not actually in the garments of disguise, but at a rendezvous so remote from the frequenters of the Casino as to run small risk of being identified. She would drive thither in a "hired carriage," and he was to leave his dog-cart and groom at home. Moreover, she inferred that he would not see her until the evening, since the locality of this diner a deux was to be written; though they had hardly been separated by longer intervals than a couple of hours between seven o'clock in the morning and nearly midnight during each day of a fortnight. What did it all portend? Was this to be their last meeting? At that thought a fierce pain gripped him, and he was sorely tempted to call the gods to witness that he would not return to a lifetime of wandering in the wilderness. Yet, said a still, small voice within, was it not better so? She was another man's wife. He must remember that, remember it even when his pent-up passions stormed the citadel of his conscience, remember it when the sheer fragrance of her maddened his senses, remember it when the taste of Dead Sea fruit was bitterest in his mouth. Of what worth was he if, for her dear sake, he was not strong in knightly resolve? And how could he ever again dare to receive his mother's kiss if he betrayed the trust which she, at least, reposed in him?

A mournful and depressing reverie was disturbed by the arrival of a carriage at the porch. Four young people alighted — two honeymoon couples they were supposed to be — and their lively voices seemed to ring the knell of his wrecked existence. He listened, only half hearing, while they chattered like magpies.

They had been to a dance at the Casino, and their broken comments told of a jolly evening, a capital band, the best floor that ever was laid, some wonderful dresses, and an unexcelled supper. Similar young people were telling each other exactly the same inane commonplaces all over the eastern part of America at that hour, and similar cackle would girdle the earth till the crack of doom. Probably the men were wise as he, and the women might be deemed by their swains pretty as Nancy; yet some malign despot among the powers which control poor humanity had decreed that he alone should never know these frivolous moments, never be granted these breathing-spaces of mild abandonment. And so, wroth with himself, and vexed with the sorry scheme of things, he went to his rooms.

Next morning, to make sure, he rode to Nancy's house. No; Mrs. Marten had not ordered her horse; in fact, she had not appeared as yet, and the pleasant-spoken butler, showing the requisite confidence in the discretion of a recognized friend, added that his mistress would not be "at home" to anyone before luncheon.

Then, the weather being glorious and the air like champagne, Power whistled care to the devil, and cantered into the town to review the ground for the night's fixture.

Newport to-day boasts of almost uncountable hotels and boarding-houses, nor was the area of choice limited in that respect nearly a generation ago. After careful scrutiny of various buildings in the business quarter, Power selected a cafe run by a certain Giovanni Pestalossi as the most promising. It looked clean and bright, and an Italian might be trusted to be discreet.

Getting a man to hold his horse, he interviewed Giovanni, and was assured that Delmonico's itself could not produce a better meal if the signor invited comparison. The signor wanted nothing elaborate, however. He admitted he was not well versed in either menus or wines, but demanded the best, and, after inspecting a well-furnished room overlooking the street, lodged a ten-dollar bill as earnest money, with a promise of ample largess if he were pleased. Then he rode away to the Ocean House, sent a note to Nancy, and received a reply which deepened his mystified dismay.

For she wrote:

"Dear Derry,—I shall be there at seven-thirty. Meanwhile, go to the Casino, and tell everybody that you are summoned to New York on business, and mean to leave either to-night by the Fall River steamer or by first train to-morrow. You are travelling by the train to oblige me; so I am not asking you to indulge in polite fiction.

"Yours ever,
"NANCY."

He carried out instructions to the letter, and was chaffed mildly for deserting the place just as his friends were getting to like him. It was easy to promise a speedy return, if possible, though he felt, somehow, that he would never see Newport again. The conclusion of his horse-dealing transactions took up a good deal of the afternoon, and, to his regret, Dacre was out with a yachting party; so he left a hurriedly written message about his pending departure.

Then he strolled out, went downtown by street car, and met Nancy when she alighted from a rickety cab at the door of Pestalozzi's cafe. She wore a cream-tinted dress, and her piquant features were daintily framed in a big Leghorn hat. It pleased him to find that she had not even deigned to veil her face, and her cheerful cry of recognition showed no conscience-stricken sense of guilt because of a meeting which, if known, must have excited the suspicions of her intimates.

"Ah, there you are, Derry!" she said. "Was there ever a more punctual person? Am I late? I had such a load of things to do that I left dressing till the last moment. Is this where we dine? What a jolly little cafe! It is just like hundreds of such establishments in Rome and Naples. I suppose these Italian restaurateurs employ their fellow-countrymen as builders and decorators; so they carry their architecture and fittings with them."

"They change their skies, but not their soups," said Power, falling in with her mood, and the driver of Nancy's cab recognized the adaptation of Horace's tag, and was pleased to grin, being himself a broken-down graduate of Harvard.

Ushered to the dining-room, they tackled the hors d'œuvres at once, any Nancy chatted about current events with the tranquil self-possession she would have displayed at Mrs. Van Ralten's dinner-table. The meal, excellently cooked and deftly served, marched to its end without a word from her as to its particular purpose. She delighted Pestalozzi by taking minute instructions for the preparation of an exquisite spaghetti, and even noted the brands of Italian wines which should be tabled with each course. At half-past eight, when coffee appeared, she rose.

"Pay the bill now, Derry," she said. "We must be off in five minutes, and I am sure you want to smoke at least one cigarette in peace. Perhaps Signor Pestalozzi will be good enough to order a cab?"

Signor Pestalozzi was charmed, and decidedly puzzled. He believed for many a year that those two had dined at his cafe for a wager. If any doubter scoffed, he would say, with appropriate gesture:

"Sango la Madonna! I tella you he no squeeze-a de gell, not-ta one time; so, if dey no make-a de bet, what-a for he give 'er dat pranzo superbo?"

Really, from Giovanni's point of view, there was no answer.

"Tell the man to drive us to the Easton's Beach end of the Cliff Walk," she said nonchalantly, when the cab was in evidence, and away they went.

"There is no moon; but these summer nights are never quite dark," she began, by way of polite conversation. "It ought to be restful to-night down there by the Atlantic. It is a horrid thing to confess, but the memories of Venice which are most vivid in my mind are not connected with St. Mark's or the Doge's Palace, but centre round just such a night as this on the Lido. Coming back in the gondola, I almost wanted to slip over the side into the still waters, and drift away to the unknown."

"Do we swim to-night, then?" he asked.

It was a relief to hear his own voice in some such apparently light-hearted quip. The cab was narrow, and hung on indifferent springs, and its lurching across the roadway to avoid other vehicles often threw him against Nancy's supple body. He could never touch her without feeling the thrill of contact, and, fight as he would against it, the desire to clasp her in his arms and stifle her protests with hot kisses would come on him at such moments with an almost overwhelming ecstasy.

"If I led, would you follow, Derry?" she whispered.

Heaven help him, it seemed as though she was nestling close deliberately; yet he refused to believe, and strove to answer with a jest.

"I have a picture of you and me striking out across the bay for Narragansett, like a pair of dolphins," he said.

"I thought of you that night on the Lido," she went on, unheeding. "I imagined then that when you skipped off to Sacramento you had forgotten the little girl of the Dolores ranch. At any rate, such was my every-day common-sense sort of belief; but tucked away in some cute little nerve centre of intuition was another notion, which told me that we had been driven apart by wicked and deceitful contriving. And now, thank my stars, I know that my subconscious feeling was right! Oh, Derry! How you must have despised me. What if we had not met for many a year, and you had schooled yourself into real forgetfulness, and some other girl had crept into a corner of your heart, thrusting out poor little me for ever?"

The gathering gloom without had now made the cab's interior so dark that she could not see the rigid lines in his face, nor could she make out by any convulsive movement that his hands were clenched, and that beads of perspiration stood on his forehead. But she knew, yes, she knew, and timid fingers caught his arm.

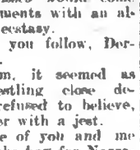
Weak Heart



Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, the heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is which contains no dangerous narcotics or alcohol.

It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anæmic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing.

MORNING COMES! AWAKE! ARISE!

Majority of Humanity Are Not Awake.

STATE OF MENTAL INACTIVITY

Some Asleep In Death — Others Asleep In Ignorance and Superstition—Still Others Asleep In Worldliness — Some Christians Half Asleep—The Awakening of the Soul—Mental Eyes Opening to See Things In a New Light—The Light of the World—The Sun of Righteousness Rising With Healing In His Beams Will Dispel Darkness.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

On the Atlantic, May 24.—Pastor Russell, whose Photo-Drama of Creation is awakening new zeal in the study of the Word of God everywhere it is being presented, preached to-day from the text, "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light."—Ephesians 5:14.

The Pastor introduced his theme with the observation that the majority of humanity are not awake; that they seem to be passing through life in a dreamy state; that as a rule they are not thinking about the important matters of life, but about the trivialities—what to eat and drink, what to wear, where to go, etc. The world, he declared, spends its time thinking about these things rather than about the things that pertain to God, to His will and His ways, and to the everlasting life of the future.

Then the Pastor reminded his audience how this state of mental inactivity has been brought about. While the world in general may be said to be asleep, in one sense of the word it is dead. Thus the Apostle declares of the Church, "You . . . were dead in trespasses and sins." The whole world is under the sentence of death passed upon Father Adam because of his disobedience to the Divine command. Our first parents sinned, and their posterity, all mankind, shared with them the penalty, "Dying, thou shalt die."—Genesis 2:17, margin.

But this death sentence that was passed upon all has been changed, the speaker asserted, to be a sentence of sleep, from which there is to be an awakening. God foreknew the fall of man, and purposed to redeem the human family from death. In the Divine Program Jesus was the Lamb of God slain from before the foundation of the world. Therefore, because God had purposed the redemption and restitution of humanity by an awakening from death, He always speaks of death as a sleep, when communicating with those who believe.

Proceeding to his text, the Pastor discussed his theme in three divisions: the awakening of some of the world in the present time, the awakening of the Christian, and the future awakening of the world during the Messianic Reign. To all who come to the Lord, he declared, there came a time when they began to think of subjects unthought of before—the higher things, those pertaining to God and the world to come. Up to that time some had been steeped in sin and degradation; others had lived merely for the present and seemed never to think about anything except the trivial affairs of everyday life. But somehow they began to realize that they were sinners and that there was a sentence against them. Perhaps they got the right view, that this sentence was one of death; but more likely they got the wrong view, that it was a sentence of eternal torment.

Then the Pastor showed that the majority of children reach this important crisis between the ages of twelve and fifteen years. At that period there is a great change in human nature; and therefore it is a most advantageous time for the forces of spiritual growth to spring up in those who have reached the age of responsibility. The speaker here dwelt upon the duties of parents and teachers who have control of the young at this important stage of development. While he fully believes in the importance of training a child in the nurture and admonition of the Lord from the very beginning of its existence, yet he holds that both parents and teachers should be especially alert with children at this most favorable time for opening their mental eyes to see things in a new light, for their learning to look beyond the trivialities of the present life to the higher things pertaining to the life to come.

The Pastor next pointed out the fallacy of the belief that the "young must sow their wild oats," and expressed regret that even Christian parents seem to be imbued with this false idea. Those who sow wild oats, he maintained, will reap wild oats; for "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," according to the Scriptures. His thought is that from the beginning of its existence the child mind should be kept near the Divine standard. The parents should be able to express to the child in sympathetic terms those thoughts which it is so ready to receive from any one in whom it has confidence.

One great difficulty, the Pastor declared, seems to be that children lose confidence in those whom they find to be deceitful. Even if the person has never deceived the child, it soon finds out whether he deceives other people or practices falsehood in any way; and as a result of that knowledge the child mind is perverted. It loses faith in others, and imbibes that same dishonesty of purpose and thought. The speaker also deplored the fact that some parents seem to think it wise and proper to teach children to take advantage of somebody else, and even to fib a little, in order to further present interests. This, he declared, is a serious mistake.

Those who awaken to a sense of responsibility to their Creator should arise from the dead condition as far as possible, the Pastor holds. He reminded his hearers that when one first awakens in the morning, there is a mental freshness which is invariably lost if one turns over and falls asleep. So the moment of the soul's awakening is a favorable moment of which to take advantage. But if the soul has no encouragement at that critical moment it may drop off to asleep again. All who are awake should do all in their power to encourage those who have just awakened, that these may rise from the dead world and be separate from conditions around them.

The speaker declared that merely to awake to a realization of one's condition, merely to arise from the dead condition of the human race as respects higher things, is not to be a Christian. While Christ gave the light which enabled us to see, first of all, that the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through the Redeemer, yet the newly awakened must accept Christ as their Ransom-sacrifice, must lay hold upon Him, before they may be considered Christians.

Pastor Russell went on to show the steps to be taken in order to have one's eyes of understanding opened. The first step is to recognize that we are all sinners and to accept Christ as our Redeemer from the curse of sin and death. Those who take this step are shown the second step—that of consecration. Unless that step is taken, the light will not shine much more clearly for that individual. Those who take each step as soon as it is clearly seen will go on from grace to grace, from knowledge to knowledge; for "the path of the just is as the shining light which shineth more and more unto the perfect day." So then, in order to progress one must take the step of full consecration to the Lord.

Next the Pastor pointed out the mistake which many of us have made in the past. We did not really know what it is to be a Christian We do not become Christians, members of the Body of Christ, when first we awake or when first we arise from the dead. Then we were merely looking toward Christianity, merely getting the soul awake to see the possibility of harmony with God and escape from the condemnation upon the world. As St. Paul declares, there is condemnation upon all except those who are in Christ Jesus. But from the moment we get into Christ we lose the condemnation of death that came upon the race because of Adam's disobedience. Then we are individually on trial for life.

The first trial for life everlasting was given to Father Adam, the Pastor said. Adam failed to pass the test, and thus brought condemnation upon all his posterity—the world of mankind. It is a point in law that a man under condemnation for a capital offence cannot be condemned again unless first freed from the previous condemnation. As a race, mankind were sentenced to death by God's Law, "Dying, thou shalt die." Since all humanity is under this condemnation no one can have an individual trial through Christ until first he has gotten free from that condemnation which is the penalty of Adam's sin. So the mere awakening to a realization of our condition does not give any one a second trial for life. Arising from the condition of sin and degradation and trying to live an honest, decent life would not mean that one had passed into trial again.

Then the Pastor demonstrated from Scripture that only the Church class are now on trial for life, and that the world is not on trial at all, but is "dead in trespasses and sins." The world's judgment lies in the future. The Church's judgment has been progressing for nearly nineteen hundred years. The first to be tried was the Head of the Church—our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. He was found worthy and was glorified. The Apostles were tried, and throughout the Gospel Age the individual members of the Church have been tried. Soon the trial of the Church will have been finished, the last member will have passed beyond the veil and entered into the joys of his Lord.

Those begotten of the Holy Spirit are now on trial for life on the spirit plane. All thus on trial will fall into one of three classes. One of these classes will get the highest place—the Divine nature—as members of the Royal Priesthood. Another will get a lower place on the spirit plane, as members of the Great Company—the antitypical Levites. The third class will not get life on any plane. This class will probably not be large, the speaker thought.

Applying his text to the Church, the Pastor said that he was not sure but that many professed followers of Christ are asleep. In the context the people of God who have escaped from the bondage of sin and death, and have come into Christ as New Creatures, have become overcharged with worldly cares, and thus may figuratively be said to have fallen asleep again. The sleepy ones will not be of the Kingdom class, he declared. St. Paul says that the true Church are not of those who are asleep, but are children of the Day; and therefore they are to remain awake and be sober, looking for the great salvation which is to be brought unto them at the Second Coming of our Lord.

Those of the Church who go to sleep now are those who are overcharged with the cares of this world and with the deceitfulness of riches—whether by intermarrying and thus having the world brought so close to them that they are overcome by its influence; or whether by business entanglements or alliances or partnerships, or what not, that may be unfavorable to their spiritual interests and their consecration to God. After one has become thoroughly awake, and has become a member of the Body of Christ, there is great danger that such a one may become overcharged with worldly cares and the deceitfulness of riches. One may get the deceitfulness of riches without having the riches; for the effort to get the riches may develop the deceit.

The Pastor then discussed his text from the standpoint of the future. At the beginning of the New Day of Christ the world will be asleep—some in death, others in ignorance and superstition. But the tumult of the Time of Trouble, with which the Scriptures everywhere declare the change of dispensation will be accompanied, will certainly awaken the majority of those who are not in their graves. Some are awakening now; later, the whole world will awake, and Christ will give them light.

The thousand years of the Messianic Kingdom will be a time of rising from the dead. Not merely those who are in their graves will arise, but all who are living at the time of the establishment of the Kingdom will be awakened, before the awakening of those in the tomb. When awake both classes will begin to rise out of sin and death conditions, trying to get a little higher and more awake, in order that they may receive some of the blessings of that glorious time.

The Scriptures declare that at that time the Sun of Righteousness—Christ and the glorified Church—will arise with healing in its beams. Then the poor world, that have been in sorrow, pain, crying and dying, afflicted of the Devil for six thousand years, will begin to look up to the great Redeemer for deliverance from the power of Satan. For the thousand years of the Messianic Kingdom the Devil will be bound and have no power to deceive the people. The true light will then shine out, and the darkness of superstition and ignorance will be scattered.

The Pastor then drew a soul-inspiring picture of future conditions as figuratively shown in the Scriptures. The New Age will not bring in full light all at once. The great Sun of Righteousness—Christ and the glorified Church—will have a gradual rising, like the natural sun. Gradually its rays will dispel the darkness and clouds; gradually the light of day will increase. During the thousand years the world will be rising gradually from the dead. It will require the entire period of a thousand years to accomplish the resurrection of the world, now dead in trespasses and sins.

The Pastor strengthened his argument with a description of the personal test which God will bring to each member of the restored race at the close of the Messianic Reign, when Christ will have delivered up the Kingdom unto the Father, and mankind will have been left to themselves. Those who have learned really to love the right and to hate the wrong will be ready for such a test; those who have not developed such a character will not be ready.

The nature of this test we may not yet know definitely, the Pastor said. In the Revelation it is represented as the loosing of Satan, to go forth to deceive the whole world of restored humanity. Everybody who has any sympathy whatever with evil will be deceived into taking the wrong course. Doubtless those who have reached perfection of human nature would not take that course if they realized that it would bring death upon them; therefore they would dodge the wrong course merely for fear of the consequences. But God is not pleased to give life everlasting to those who would merely dodge the penalty of wrong doing. Only those who love right as He loves right will receive the boon of life.

In conclusion, the Pastor showed that those who fail to pass the final test will be destroyed in the Second Death, and that this action on God's part will not be unjust or unkind. Mankind were born without life rights, and God has not promised them eternal life. The blessings of the incoming Age are all of Free Grace. All of His blessings must be appreciated from the standpoint of right and wrong. Those who fail to learn the principles of righteousness will not be acceptable with God, either now or in the future. God seeketh such as worship Him in spirit and in truth, such as love righteousness and hate iniquity—injustice. Christ is to be the great Light-giver to mankind—"the true Light, that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." Happy are all they who receive that Light now!

Heart and Nerves Were Bad.
Could Not Sleep.

To the thousands of people who toss on a sleepless pillow night after night, or who pace the bedroom floor with nerves on the jump, the heart action all wrong, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber, as they restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres and correct the wrong action of the heart.

Mrs. Charles Teel, Bernardie, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. My heart and nerves were so bad I could not sleep, and the least noise or excitement would make me feel so that I used to think I was going to die, and I would tremble until I could hardly stand. I took doctor's medicine, but it did not do me much good. At last I tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and can certainly say they did me a great amount of good. I can recommend them to anyone who is suffering as I was."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty years, and have done more to steady shaky nerves and strengthen weak hearts, than any other known preparation.

LIGHT AND FLOWERS.

Why a Garden Is More Fragrant by Night Than by Day.

The light we receive from stars of the first magnitude, like Vega, is equal approximately to a forty thousand-millionth part of that of the sun. It is calculated that the total light received from the lesser stars is equal to that of 1,000 stars of the first magnitude, or a sixth part of that which is sent to us from the moon.

Light exercises a mechanical pressure which can be measured in the laboratory. It has been shown by experiments with artificial light that in its production enormous quantities of energy are dissipated.

In an ordinary wax candle the total energy which is transformed into light is really but 2 per cent. Gas and kerosene lamps are not more economical. On the other hand, the glow worm transforms into light, by means not unknown, 90 per cent of the total energy expended.

It is known that light influences very largely the aroma of flowers. A garden is more fragrant when it is shaded than when the sun is allowed to shine in full blaze upon it. This, at any rate, is the conclusion of a Frenchman who has recently made a vast number of experiments. That which affects the fragrance of flowers is not the oxygen of the atmosphere, as has been commonly supposed, but the light.

According to the same authority, the intensity of the perfume exhaled by a flower depends upon the pressure of water in the cells of the plant, which tends to throw out the essential oils that produce the odor, and the action of the solar light diminishes the pressure of the water.—New York Press.

A WEAK CRESTED BOY

"My boy Frank seemed weak-chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Nimpo, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

Titled Lady's Trip.

Lady Grace Mackenzie is on her way to East Africa, where she is going on a big game hunting expedition at Nairobi. A hundred or so native carriers and bearers will join this modern Diana, and with five white people the expedition will penetrate into the interior. Lady Mackenzie will take with her a doctor, a secretary, and two white hunters. There will be a gramophone and dictaphone equipment to secure permanent records of jungle life. The trip will occupy nine months, and Lady Mackenzie expects to visit districts never previously seen by a white woman.

Paid by the Yard.

Sir James Thornhill, whose former house in Dean street, Soho, London, is in danger of being pulled down, was one of the few great artists who were paid according to the size of their pictures. His paintings, which were chiefly on the ceilings and walls of large halls and buildings, such as Hampton Court Palace, St. Paul's Cathedral, Blenheim and Greenwich Hospital, were literally paid for by the yard, like the work of a bricklayer or plasterer.—London Daily Chronicle.

Another Woman's Case.

Providence, R. I.—"I cannot speak too highly of your Vegetable Compound as it has done wonders for me and I would not be without it. I had a displacement, bearing down, and backache, until I could hardly stand and was thoroughly run down when I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helped me and I am in the best of health at present. I work in a factory all day long besides doing my housework so you can see what it has done for me. I give you permission to publish my name and I speak of your Vegetable Compound to many of my friends."—Mrs. ADELL LAWSON, 126 Lippitt St., Providence, R. I.

Danger Signals to Women

are what one physician called backache, headache, nervousness, and the blues. In many cases they are symptoms of some female derangement or an inflammatory, ulcerative condition, which may be overcome by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of American women willingly testify to its virtue.

Making the Dumb Speak.

A man had lost all power of speech for over a year, writes Sydney Holland in The London Express. His wife brought him to the London hospital to see one of our physicians, who quickly realized that there was nothing whatever the matter with him and that he was merely suffering from the reverse of faith healing—that is, imaginary disease suffering."

In the patient's hearing he told a student to fetch the largest forceps he could find and added, "It may hurt him, but I can remove the growth." "Now, shout out if I hurt you," said the physician as he plunged the forceps down the man's throat. "Heavens!" the patient shouted. "That's right," the physician said. "I have got it away."

The man went away not only speaking, but swearing, and it is said, but I will not vouch for the rest of the story, that his wife came back a week later and begged us to do something to the man, who talked so incessantly to make up for lost time that they were all driven wild.

$65,000 In Lowly House.

Gold and notes to the value of $65,000 were found in the house of an elderly maiden lady who died the other day in an unpretentious dwelling in the East End of Glasgow. The old lady had lived on a very simple plan. She was friendly with her neighbors, but never gave any indication that she was any wealthier than others in the same neighborhood, who were all of the working class. Some of the money was found in an old-fashioned purse, and there was no miserly effort at hiding the money, which was scattered about in different parts of the house. She had often declared that she did not believe in banks.

Speeches Made to Order.

A little, quiet, book-lined office in the heart of the West-end, London, is occupied by a gentleman who is prepared to turn out speeches for all occasions. During a recent interview the speechmaker-in-chief remarked that, while speeches have often been written by others than those who deliver them, he thinks his is the first attempt to concentrate the supply, and to establish the new profession of gentleman speechmaker.

"I am as ready with an after-dinner speech as any other," he said. "They can be bright or serious as required, and I have already prepared a good many speeches which have been delivered with success in different parts of the country. 'Impromptus' are a speciality.

"The method is simple enough. I ask clients to supply me with any local allusions they require, and an idea, if they have one, of the trend of the speech. The rest they can leave to me. I have made a practice of attending all the functions I could for years past, so I know exactly the speech that is popular at garden-parties or foundation-stone layings, at chapel extension meetings, or after dinner. I have a good store of anecdotes, and as I am not a recluse, but go about and know what is in the air, I am able to supply the most up-to-date allusions."

The Professor's Reply.

Bruce McRae, the well-known actor, likes to tell this story about two hide-bound Aberdeen University professors.

"There was a certain Prof. Macdonald who cherished a fondness for the refinements and minor graces of life. It was just after 'at home' cards became fashionable that he sent one of the hardest-shelled of the old professional regime this note:

"'Prof. and Mrs. Macdonald present their compliments to Prof. Scott, and hope that he is well. Prof. and Mrs. Macdonald will be at home on Wednesday evening, the 6th inst. at eight o'clock.'

"The crusty old chap replied thus:

"'Prof. Scott returns the compliments of Prof. and Mrs. Macdonald, and begs to inform them that he is well. Prof. Scott is glad to learn that Prof. and Mrs. Macdonald will be at home on Wednesday evening, the 6th inst. at eight o'clock. Prof. Scott will also be at home.'"

A sociologist fears that we are losing the power to think. There is no evidence, however, of any decline in the arts of sophistry and perversion.

A New York newspaper headline announces "Autos More Reckless In Cities." Can this be an insidious scheme to furnish the chauffeurs with an alibi?

No wonder baseball players are getting chesty. Thanks to the Federal league, a good many of them moved up into the chest circle of income tax payers.

Wonders of Plant Life.

We are told by Darwin in his "Origin of Species" that in the month of February of a certain year he took three tablespoonfuls of mud from three different places beneath the surface of the water of a small pond, which mud weighed only six and three-quarter ounces and was all contained in a breakfast cup. He kept it covered up in his study for six months and during this period obtained from it the astonishing number of 537 plants.

On Nov. 15, 1911, a Scotsman contributor planted a dozen acorns in a patch of soil taken from a hedge root of about twenty-eight inches in length by about eleven inches in width and about two and a half inches deep, and he resolved to take a note of the number of plants which should grow from seed naturally contained in it. By Nov. 15, 1912, he had removed from time to time, as they showed themselves, 158 plants, and by Nov. 15, 1913, fifty-six more, or for the two years 211 plants in all.

"MY STOMACH IS FINE

Since Taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets"

Mrs. J. Merkhuger, Waterloo, Ont., enthusiastically recommends Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets. Her experience with them, as she outlines it, explains why.

"I was greatly troubled with my stomach", she writes. "I had taken so much medicine that I might say to take any more would only be making it worse. My stomach just felt raw. I read of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, and a lady friend told me they were very easy to take, so I thought I would give them a trial and really they worked wonders. Anyone having anything wrong with his stomach should give Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets a trial, they will do the rest. My stomach is fine now and I can eat any food."

One of the many good features of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets is that they are so pleasant and easy to take. The relief they give from heartburn, flatulence, biliousness and dyspepsia is prompt and permanent. Try one after each meal—they'll make you feel like a new person.

IN THE NEW HEBRIDES.

Cannibal Islanders Represent Other Pole of Human Life.

If you take down from your bookshelves a map of Australia, you will see at your right hand, slightly to the north of the continent, a curious spatter-work of dots, many of them bearing names.

Now, picture to yourself your present-day life and surroundings for a moment, with its motors, cinemas, newspapers, society, law, and order—all that go to make up civilisation. Then change over your thoughts, and in your mind clothe one of these dots on the map with endless, inhospitable jungle.

Remember that this jungle shelters men — savages, it is true — roaming the forest, with big, curly wigs and waving plumes, and with bows and arrows as their only weapons. Remember, too, that they are literally and actually cannibals.

Does it not seem amazing that these two extremes can exist to-day, in this year of grace 1914, and within a few weeks' journey of one another?

The dots on the map represent that group of islands known as the New Hebrides, and only one generation ago there was a native population numbering no fewer than 650,000. To-day, since the coming of the whites, the approximate census is little more than 60,000. There is a unique form of government known as the Condominium, half British and half French, and, curiously enough, this system as reported in The London Times, is causing dissatisfaction in Australia. Indeed, within the past fortnight it has been the subject of many questions in the House of Commons.

Dr. Felix Speiser in his wonderful book, "Two Years with the Natives in the Western Pacific," gives details of his extended visit to the New Hebrides and adjoining islands, and describes a tour made from island to island.

Here, for example, is Dr. Speiser's description of those almost inconceivable persons, the modern man-eaters:

"The beautiful, lithe, supple bodies support a head covered with long, curly hair, and the face is framed by a long and fairly well-kept beard. The eyes roll unsteadily. The nose is only slightly concaved, the sides are large and thick, and their width is increased by a bamboo or stone cylinder stuck through the septum.

"The upper lip is generally short, and rarely covers the mouth, which is exceptionally large and wide, and displays a set of teeth of remarkable strength and perfection. The whole body is covered with a thick layer of greasy soot."

Many of the natives of these islands are employed upon the plantations of the white men, but the majority live the lives of primitive beings in the jungle, where the chiefs rule with rods of iron for the most part. To have killed a man, no matter in what way, is a great honor and gives the right to wear a special plume of white and black feathers.

A Fish and Its Young.

The kangaroo has always seemed to have the monopoly of that convenient way of carrying its babies in a pouch, but it has been discovered that a fish has the same useful receptable, which it uses for the same purpose. The pipefish, as it is called from the length of its jaws, has a pocket on the under side of its body nearly half its length. It is found in the male species only and is the only part of its body which is unprotected by large flat plates, which takes the place of scales in its protective armor.

If a pipefish is taken from the water and its little ones shaken out of the pouch back into the water they always seem either unable or disinclined to run away. But if the father is placed in the water again, all the small fish immediately swim back into the pouch. These curious little creatures have prehensile tails, which they use to hold on to the seaweed to prevent themselves being carried away by the tide. The pipefish is similar to the small eel, being about a foot in length and an inch in thickness. But, unlike the eel, it has a very long jaw and the peculiar defensive armor already mentioned.

To Settle Dispute.

The African frontier questions between Great Britain and Germany will, in all probability, be settled shortly. The fact that such a settlement was in contemplation is probably the basis for a series of somewhat exaggerated statements which have been published abroad, and have led to the belief that some comprehensive territorial exchange between Great Britain and Germany was included in the Anglo-German negotiations that have been in progress for some time. Such is not the case, and the alteration of boundary referred to has to do only with the work and recommendations as to rectification arising out of the labors of the Anglo-German Boundary Commission which was delimiting the frontier some years ago.

Died on the Job.

It is somewhat remarkable that the first British Secretary of War, Sir W. Clarke, was killed in a naval action. His duties were those of a secretary to the Commander-in-Chief and, as such, he accompanied the Duke of Albermarle to sea in 1666, and was killed on June 1. His official salary was at first ten shillings and subsequently one pound a day, out of which he paid his clerks.

WELCOME GEESE.

An Unexpected and Badly Needed Feast in the Arctic.

Noah in his ark could not have been more delighted over the return of the dove than were the members of Ejnar Mikkelsen's party, in the desert of Greenland ice, with the sight of a flock of wild geese. In "Lost In the Arctic" Captain Mikkelsen tells of their need of food, of the fatigue of a long sledge journey and of his own illness. He had become so weak that he was obliged to ride on the sledge. Consequently their progress was very slow.

We drive on between a lot of little islands or banks of glacial ice. Suddenly Iverson makes a snatch at the sledge, causing the dogs to halt in astonishment, and whispers eagerly, 'Look, look! What's that?" He points to something that looks like a lot of round stones, and I can scarcely believe my eyes. It is a big flock of geese, sitting there sound asleep. They have not heard us. In a few seconds Iverson is on his way toward them. I of course remain where I am on the sledge.

He takes aim, fires and the whole flock rises. Stop a minute! Isn't there one on the ground? I snatch up the glass. Not one, but two are left upon the field, and after following the shrieking flock a little way Iverson returns, beaming with joy, a big fat goose in either hand. We are delighted and drive off southward in the best of spirits. Iverson even stops every now and then to feel the splendid fat bodies of the birds, and we do nothing but talk of what a feast we are to have when they are cooked. The dogs are doing their best. Iverson marches at the rear of the sledge, singing at the top of his voice, and even I feel a little better.

POLAR RESEARCH.

Arctic and Antarctic Problems That Still Remain Unsolved.

The era of pole hunting is now happily over, and the best result of Peary's and Amundsen's athletic feats in the north and south is that the really important problems of the circumpolar regions can henceforth be attacked with a single mind. From a scientific standpoint enough work remains to be done in these regions to last for several generations.

The antarctic has only been scratched, so to speak. Owing to the diverse scales used in school geographies the average man goes through life with badly warped ideas concerning the relative sizes of various parts of the earth's surface, and so probably few people realize that the antarctic continent is very much larger than Europe—in fact, about as large as Europe and Australia combined. Of this huge continent we do not know even the shape and location of the coast line, except for one long stretch south of Australia and a few widely scattered points elsewhere, while the whole interior, apart from a narrow wedge between Ross sea and the pole, is virtually blank on our maps.

In the arctic a patch of a million square miles is still absolutely untouched. So much for mere surface geography; but, of course, modern polar research includes a wide range of nongeographical problems pertaining to such diverse subjects as geology, glaciology, meteorology, terrestrial magnetism, seismology, oceanography, zoology, botany, physiology, ethnology and archaeology.—Review of Reviews.

Pleasant While It Lasted.

He listened intently. It was his wife and her mother talking.

"No, my dear," the latter was saying, "I must go to-morrow. I do not believe in a mother-in-law making long visits. But before I go I want to tell you what a treasure I think you have gained in your husband. He seems to me to be near perfection. Are you sure, however, that you are not too strict with him? Do not be quick to chide him when he stays out late. Men need a little latitude, you know—say two or three times a week."

The man stirred uneasily in his sleep. It seemed so real; but, alas, it was a dream!

Villagers Sided With Robber.

A robber's marriage was rudely interrupted by the police recently in a village near Madras, India. One Mulimayandi Shevan, who was charged with robbery had been evading the police. Recently the police were informed of his proposed marriage which was to be performed in a village. They proceeded to the scene and arrested him while he (the bridegroom) was riding in the marriage procession. The villagers thereupon attacked the police, rescuing Mulimayandi and seriously injuring some of the police, and getting away with two swords and two uniforms. The police headed by the Deputy Superintendent afterwards surrounded the village and arrested 23 persons of whom six have since been tried and convicted.

An Artist's Sad Task.

Caton Woodville, the English war artist, painted a large equestrian portrait of the Emperor Frederick of Germany in the handsome white uniform of the Imperial Guards, with the magnificent golden helmet crowned by the silver eagle. In his "Random Recollections," Woodville says: "It was a sad task. I painted the portrait shortly after the emperor's death, and the empress was very particular about the color and shape of his eyes. She wore a bracelet with a miniature of one of his eyes painted on ivory in a medallion upon it. She stood beside me for hours holding the bracelet so that I could see it in the best light and not miss any of the details."

Buckingham Well Guarded.

While the King and his household are asleep in Buckingham Palace there are men who never rest. They are the firemen who patrol the palace continually during the night with keys which will enable them to open any room in which fire is suspected. No place is better guarded against fire than Buckingham Palace.

Collars.

Men's collars manufactured in England every year number about 20,000,000.

SALE OF HONORS.

Both Parties In Britain Admit Traffic In Titles.

If there is anything creditable in the trafficking in honors that is now the subject of an investigation in England, it is that representatives of both parties frankly admit that titles have been bought and sold. So accustomed have Governments been to securing their campaign funds through the sale of a few caridoms or other titles that they have become careless, and it may be that some particularly flagrant cases may be exposed. In any event it seems likely that the present discussion will lead to an abatement of the discreditable business. It will certainly make the people suspicious and recipients of these honors in the future may expect to have their claims to them closely scrutinized. Thus public opinion itself may bring about reform. Those who have already been advanced to the peerage will be even more censorious than the average citizen, for the fewer there are the greater is the distinction to those who wear them.

The Prime Minister's hands are always clean. He does not receive a check and by return mail send a knighthood or a baronetcy. Nobody suspects that the King, who is the "fountain of honor," and who, theoretically, is responsible for the distribution of titles, is ever approached in the matter. When the business is to be transacted, it is done through recognized channels. The party whip, who is now Mr. Percy Illingworth, is the agent who is supposed to arrange the affair. His predecessor was the present Lord Murray, formerly the Master of Elibank, and it is under the latter that the practice of exchanging titles for cash is said to have become most notorious. Parties in England, like parties in other countries, require money to carry on elections, and while it has not to be assumed that every contributor to the campaign funds expects some personal return for his money, if he gives a very large sum indeed he has a right to expect that the Government will in some way make an acknowledgement.

Let us take the case of a man of obscure birth who has amassed a great fortune in trade. If he is a Liberal, he is naturally approached by agents of the Liberal party, who ask for a contribution to the party funds. He makes it and in the course of a year has the mortification of seeing some noted trade rival elevated to the peerage. When he is approached again he declines to "unbelt." He did not expect a title for himself, of course, but still, if titles were going, he thought that he had as good a claim on a decoration as his rival, who is no wealthier, and of equally humble origin. The next time he gives money he wants some assurance that the fact will not exactly disqualify him for any distinctions that are to be passed around. The whip is approached and there is some sort of understanding. It may be a definite bargain, so much money for such a date. It may merely be an assurance to the effect that our friend will not be forgotten. It depends altogether upon who is the whip and who is the prospective peer.

On the eve of the election in 1905, when several obscure persons were made peers by the Unionist Government, the most objectionable of them is said to have paid $1,250,000 for his honor, and another $1,000,000. Some baronetcies have cost their owners a quarter of a million dollars, while others have been secured at a bargain price of $50,000. For a knighthood as much as $150,000 has been paid. These figures have been vouched for by responsible authorities, among them Thomas Gibson Bowles, one of the most respected of Parliamentary veterans.

Not Necessary to Speak.

No one has ever succeeded in consulting John Barrett, chief of the Pan-American bureau, as to whether suffrage is right or wrong, but he tells this story apropos of nothing and everything:

Two men were late at the club.

"It's awfully late, Brown. What'll you say to your wife?"

"Not much, old man; just 'Good morning, dear.' She'll say the rest."—New York Tribune.

Another Lady Thinks "Fruit-a-tives" Greatest Tonic In The World.

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th, 1913.

I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollars' worth, but they did all that your advertising claims for them, and as I said before, I cannot speak too highly for them. Their acting is so pleasant, compared with other medicines, that I am glad to say so and I trust that some other woman may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" for I know the results will be all that you claim".

Sure to Return.

One morning a merchant whose goods did not very strongly substantiate his advertising claims put out a new sign. He was pleased to see that a great many people stopped to read it, but directly he was puzzled and angered to notice that they all went on, laughing. There was nothing funny about the sign. It merely read:

If You Buy Here Once
You Will Come Again.

The merchant went outside in a casual sort of way and glanced at his sign to see what was the matter. Some one, no doubt a former customer, had added another line. It now read:

If You Buy Here Once
You Will Come Again
To Bring It Back.

Colored Glasses.

Wearing spectacles to protect the eyes from the glare of the sun is a very old custom. The natives of the far northern regions long ago invented spectacles of wood with a very narrow slit in the center to diminish as far as possible the continual glare of the long arctic day. It is said that the Emperor Nero, who was an albino and whose eyes were therefore very sensitive to light, used amethysts or emeralds to shield his eyes.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

BROKEN BY THE TANGO

From the time when I came to be old enough to think of marriage I looked upon it in a feminine way. I didn't say when I was grown I'd be a teacher or a lawyer or anything like that. I said I was going to be married and live in a nice, cosy house and thought of my dolls as real children.

When I was 18 years old my father died and left me little or nothing. It looked very much like my being forced from the domestic life I had laid out for myself when a child. Will Isham and I were spoons, but Will was such an easy-going fellow that he didn not fill my ideas of a husband at all. What I wanted was a strong character, who would make up my mind for me, relieving me of forming decisions, which I always disliked. Will was an amiable chap, and I was very fond of him, but it seemed to me that we were too much alike.

I was hesitating between Will and stenography—Will was perfectly able to take care of me—when Warren Robbins came along. It seemed to me that Mr. Robbins was just the man I wanted. It was not long before he proposed to me, and I accepted him at once.

I confess it seemed very nice to have some one to obey. There are two divisions of mankind and womankind in these days. I may call them pleasurites and nonpleasureites. Formerly the pleasurites played cards and the nonpleasureites didn't. Now the pleasurites dance the modern dances and the nonpleasureites are shocked thereat. I found very soon that I was a pleasurite. I became infatuated with the tango. Warren declared that a woman who danced the tango was not the wife he should like to marry.

We hadn't been long engaged before Warren made this known to me, and I felt called upon to defer to his wishes. Somehow this particular deference was not pleasant. I did not see how I shouldn't dance the tango so long as I danced it properly. Warren argued that I could not always rely on finding a partner who would dance it properly with me and that the tendency of such dances being bad, by dancing it I was encouraging vice. I told him that I didn't agree with him and should dance the tango.

Warren was somewhat surprised at this and reminded me that I wished to follow a leader. To this I replied that in the tango the man guided the woman's steps.

You should have seen the look he gave me. "That's the most brilliant bit of logic I ever heard," he said. "It's worthy of Archbishop Whatley, who wrote a book of categorical syllogisms and other points pertaining to the subject. If he heard it he would turn over in his grave."

"I don't see anything the matter with it or the tango either," I replied with some curtness.

"It's about like the clinging vine and the sturdy oak. A flagpole set up near the oak, the vine unclings from the oak and clings to the flagpole."

"The vine wouldn't do that unless the ants had got in under the oaks' bark and rotted the trunk."

"Perceiving that your logic and your similes are altogether beyond my poor intelligence, I bid you good evening."

"I didn't feel very good over this. Somehow I felt that, irrespective of the morality or immorality of the tango, in dancing it despite my fiance's wishes I was not following out that for which I had agreed to marry him. While I was thinking about it I was called to the 'phone. Will Isham was at the other end. Will and I were good friends. We had simply not mated, that was all.

"Do you go to the —— ball tonight?" he asked.

"No. Warren doesn't approve of these modern dances, and just now the old ones are not danced. He won't take me."

"Do you suppose he would let you go with me?"

"Let me?"

"Yes. Haven't you said you were going to marry for the purpose of having a master?"

"I'll go with you."

"Thanks, awfully. I'll call for you at 9."

When 9 o'clock came I was dressed in a new ball costume just come in and waiting in the drawing room when who should call but Warren. He had come to make up, but when he saw my clinging skirt and my decollete waist, with only a little lace over one shoulder, he forgot all about what he had come for and began to abuse my costume.

"Looks like an elegantly folded sheet," he said sarcastically, "only the sheet must have been taken from a crib."

I fired up at this and gave him such a tongue lashing that while about it I didn't notice the entrance of Will Isham. When I did notice him he was grinning like the cat that ate the canary.

Warren left me, slamming the door behind him. I went right out with Will, got into the carriage, and we were driven to the ball.

What a softening influence there is in the tango! It made me forget the disagreeable episode.

I have engaged myself to Will. He says he always wished to cling to a woman, and I'm just the woman he prefers to cling to.

IN BALMY BERMUDA.

British Island Colony Is Founded Upon a Coral Substratum.

Governed by the English since they were first settled over three centuries ago, the Bermudas are British in everything but appearance and climate. Fate seems to have decreed that as a compliment to Juan Bermudez, who discovered them in 1522, the islands should resemble Southern Spain. Each little house has its second-story parties hanging out over the sidewalk and almost clasping hands with the one on the other side of the narrow street. Ebony-hued natives, gaudily dressed, and cleverly balancing huge bundles upon their heads amble along the sidewalks, the gay uniforms of the soldiers of the King adding to the striking brilliancy of it all.

The permanent population of Bermuda is about 20,000 and the total area nineteen and three-quarter miles. Like Ireland, there are no snakes, nor are there poisonous insects. Bermuda is the land of balmy sunshine, and all the accompanying delights. The climate is delightful at all seasons; rarely does the thermometer go below 60 degrees in winter or above 80 degrees in summer. Vegetation is very rapid and the soil is clad in a perpetual mantle of green. On all sides, color; birds of brilliant plumage — bright-red cardinal birds, blue-birds of a vivid hue unknown to our more sombre clime; fishes of equally bright shades and fantastic form; and flowers past all belief. Oleander hedges line every roadside, in bloom the year round. Stately palms of many species, the broad leaves of the banana and plantain, the great spikes of the Spanish bayonet, huge aloes, the spreading fans of the palmetto, and many other tropical trees and shrubs abound on every side.

But Bermuda is the beginning, not the end of a continent! It was not ground into its present shape from mountain ranges, dating prior to the Glacial period in geologic age. Neither was it thrown up by volcanic action, which thus transferred portions of the earth's crust.

It was formed by the multitudinous agencies of engineers of microscopic size, who build to a plan no man has ever seen, of an immensity which no man even in this adventurous age would dare.

There is a coating of vegetable soil from one to five feet deep, but the hundreds of islands which make up Bermuda, are all of white coral formation. The rock is merely the compacted cysto and casts of coral bodies in countless millions upon millions.

Everything is white and green, with here and there touches of most vivid colorings from the sweet-scented flowers. The buildings, the fences, the streets and roads are pure white, for coral of that color is used exclusively in construction. The men, even the negro natives, are clad in white duck suits, surmounted by white helmets; and the women, daintily in cambric and fluffy muslins, parade the quay afoot or drive patient, mild-eyed and long-eared, donkeys, hitched to odd little basketcarts.

Artistically harmonizing with the glittering white and making it more restful to the eyes, is the shimmering green of the thick foliage. Every yard is a garden of wondrous beauty, and frequently the tiny white houses are almost completely obscured by the plant life.

A Difference In Names.

One of the tenants in a big business building was leaving his office the other day when he encountered in the hallway two little pickaninnies, evidently one of the subjanitors' children.

"What's your name?" he demanded of the oldest of them.

"Mah name," replied the little fellow, "is Hubert Gladstone St. Ignatius Brown."

"And your brother's name?" asked the man.

"His name am jes' Pieface."

To Make Shaving Easier.

To shave easily and save the blades of safety razors, leave a pleasant feel on the face and make all razors take less stropping, adopt the following plan:

Lather the face well and wash off the lather. That gets rid of all dust. Then with a small brush work into the skin a little vaseline, and without removing this relather the face well, and then shave. The first day or two the plan does not seem so successful, but after that the advantages are very marked.—London Field.

How to Live to Be a Hundred.

Eight hours' sleep every night.
Sleep on your right side.
Keep your bedroom window open.
Have a mat at your bedroom door.
Keep your bed away from the wall.
No cold bath in the morning, but a bath at the temperature of the body.
Exercise before breakfast.
Eat little meat and be sure that it is well cooked.
Drink no milk. (This applies to adults only.)
Eat plenty of fat to feed the cells which destroy disease germs.
Avoid intoxicants, which destroy the cells that combat disease.
Allow no pet animals in your living rooms, for they carry disease germs.
Live in the country if you can.
Watch the three D's—drinking water, damp and drains.
Have change of occupation.
Take frequent and short holidays.
Limit your ambition.
Keep your temper.—Maxims of Sir James Sawyer, English Physician.

Alertly Suspicious.

"Has that young man any bad habits?" asked the cautious father.

"No," replied Gladys Jane, "he never goes into a saloon."

"I know. But he looks as if he spent a terrible amount of time hanging around gents' furnishing stores."—Washington Star.

LIGHTSHIP GOES DOWN.

New Canadian Craft Lost With Scottish Crew of 25 Men.

HALIFAX, N.S., May 26. — The battered hulk of the new lightship, Halifax No. 19, was found among the breakers on Lincomb Island, five miles from the mainland Saturday afternoon. She struck during the dense fog which has enshrouded the coast for several days and it is believed her crew of 25 Scotchmen are lost. Six bodies bearing lifebelts had been recovered up to Saturday night by the steamer Dufferin. Both lifeboats which the vessel carried were also found. A search of the little rocky island in the vicinity was made in the hope that some of the crew may have been able to get through the surf alive.

Word has reached the Canadian Marine Department here that the hull of the lightship was broken in two.

The ship was on her maiden voyage from her builder's yards at Paisley, Scotland, to take up her station off Sambro Ledges near Halifax harbor. Captain Macbeth and Chief Engineer McKenzie are the members of the crew known here. The men were shipped in Glasgow.

The Government steamers Stanley and Lady Laurier were ordered to search for possible survivors or for more bodies. Although the lightship was the last word in staunch steel construction and carried one 23-foot lifeboat and a powerful 24-foot motor launch, little hope is felt by the Canadian Marine Department that anyone of the crew escaped. Long rollers from the North Atlantic break over the jagged rocks with terrific force in the calmest weather.

The first intimation of the disaster was brought in by the Dufferin when she arrived with three bodies. She went back to Lincomb Island later in the day to continue the search and found another body.

Aged, Wrinkled Faces Easily Rejuvenated

An aged face is often only a mask to a comparatively youthful person. Beneath is a countenance young and fair to look upon. It's a simple matter to remove the mask. Ordinary mercolized wax, to be had at any druggists, gradually absorbs the worn-out surface skin; in a week or two the user has the love liest pinky white complexion imaginable. An ounce of the wax usually is sufficient to complete the transformation. It is put on at night like cold cream and taken off in the morning with warm water.

This remarkable treatment is invariably effective, no matter how muddy, sallow or discolored the complexion. Freckles, moth-patches, liver spots, pimples, blackheads and other cutaneous blemishes, naturally vanish with the discarded skin.

To remove wrinkles, here is a recipe that cannot be too highly recommended: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pint witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. It acts instantaneously and is wonderfully effective.

Angry Suffragettes Hold Demonstration on Threatened Grounds.

LONDON, May 26. — Shouts of "Shoot the King" filled the hall in which a meeting of the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant suffragette organization, was held last evening. Every mention of King George's name was greeted with angry derision and prolonged hissing.

Mr. Mildred Ella Mansel, who served a term of imprisonment for breaking windows at the War Office, presided at the suffragette gathering. She alluded to the rushes at Buckingham Palace on Thursday, when 57 suffragettes, including Mrs. Pankhurst, were arrested at the park gate, and declared that both the royal name and the royal office had been disgraced.

The speaker announced that quite a number of contributions had been received following the recent activities of the militants. One Glasgow woman sent $5,000.

"Some day an exasperated crowd will break into a procession of militants. What will then happen to you women nobody knows at present. You have to thank the police for being alive. You owe them a debt of gratitude."

Magistrate Hopkins of the Bow street police court this afternoon a suffragette who had applied for a summons against an unknown man, who, she declared, had struck her on the face when the crowd rushed the suffragette meeting in Hyde Park on Sunday afternoon, and the police came to the women's rescue.

Apparently all that is needed, in the opinion of some observers, for the suppression of the militants, is the withdrawal from them of police protection.

FIRE LOSS A MILLION.

Cleveland Lumber Yards Fall Victims to Conflagration.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 26.—One million dollars' damage has been done by a fire which broke out in the business centre of Cleveland shortly before 10 o'clock Monday night.

The fire broke out in the yards of the Fisher & Wilson Lumber Co., supposedly started by tramps smoking, and spread with lightning-like rapidity. Inside of half an hour the fire was beyond control. It spread across the Cuyahoga river and caught the Cleveland Elevator Co.'s grain elevator.

From there the flames spread to the lumber yards of Martin & Harress, which are situated directly beneath the Central Railway viaduct. At 11 o'clock the flames ate into the viaduct, part of which collapsed at midnight.

Liability Is Limited.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Practically nothing may be recovered by those who lost relatives or baggage in the Titanic disaster, as a result of a decision yesterday by the Supreme Court.

The court held that the liability of the Oceanic Steam Navigation Co. against the $13,000,000 in claims against it as owner of the Titanic is limited in the suits in the United States by the American limited liability law of 1851 to the statute of salvage recovered and the freight and passage money, received on the Titanic's voyage.

Huerta Is Satisfied.

MEXICO CITY, May 26.—After a conference with President Huerta, the Minister of the Interior, Ignacio Alcocer, said:

"The President is highly satisfied with the latest news from Niagara Falls. It seems that we are near a satisfactory arrangement with the United States."

Four Killed In Gang Fights.

NEW YORK, May 26.—The police and the district attorney's office yesterday are investigating seven homicide cases reported within the 24 hours up to midnight Sunday night. Four of the seven victims are dead and the other three are not expected to live. The dead lost their lives in gang fights. According to the police, this is the largest number of homicide cases in the same length of time in many years.

Cartier Statue Nearly Ready.

MONTREAL, May 26. — A letter was received yesterday from Mr. G. W. Hill, A.R.C.A., the sculptor who is executing the statue of Cartier and the other allegorial figures which will surround the base of the monument, from Brussels, that his work is completed with the exception of one figure, representing the military.

Left at the Post.

The Professor's Wife (to the professor, who has just come in from a walk)—What have you done with your umbrella and Fido? The Professor (trying to remember)—What—h'm—wait a minute. Oh, yes; precisely. You see, my hat blew off, and I didn't want to have the poor little beast run with me after it, so I stuck the umbrella in the ground somewhere and tied Fido to it. I suppose they are still there.—New York Post.

Nailing Another Lie.

"Well, you have a sensible daughter, Hiram. I saw her washing dishes in the pantry just now. Is that why she need a rest light?"

"Washing dishes! She never did such a thing in her life. She's developing photographs, old chap."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Himself Again.

Kindly Old Gentleman (regular whether to the area)—Keeper, how's your sick lion today? Has he got back his appetite for fresh meat? Keeper—That 's 'ee, sir. 'E's just eaten the veterinary, sir, that was givin' 'im 'is physic, sir.—New York Post.

Relic of the Past.

"Bo, woman, you treasure another man's photograph?"

"Don't be foolish, Henry. This is a portrait of yourself when you had hair."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

He's Back at Work Strong And Hearty

One More Splendid Cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Quebec Man Who Suffered for a Long Time from Kidney Disease Finds a Complete Cure.

Allen's Mills, Portneuf Co., Que., May 25.—(Special.)—Another splendid cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills is that of Michael Gauthier, a well-known resident of this place. Mr. Gauthier was for a long time a sufferer with a pain in his head caused by kidney disease, and at length got so bad that he had to quit work. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him. He is back at work, strong merry, and naturally he feels that he wants all who suffer from kidney disease to know that they can find a cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

For Dodd's Kidney Pills not only cure the pain or ache that is causing the most distress, they put the kidneys in good working and all the impurities and poisons are strained out of the blood. The result is that new strength is carried to every part of the body. That's why so many sufferers cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills sum up their condition, "I feel like a new man." New energy is new life. You can't have it with sick kidneys. With healthy kidneys you must have it. Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy kidneys.

READY TO SHOOT HIM.

Curious Story of Marshal Soult and King Louis Philippe.

In the reign of Louis Philippe Victor Hugo was a frequent and welcome guest at the Tuileries. Here is one of his anecdotes of the time as told in Victor Hugo's memoirs:

"A few days ago the king said to Marshal Soult in the presence of others, 'Marshal, do you remember the siege of Cadiz?'

"'Rather, sire, I should think so. I swore enough before that cursed Cadiz. I invested the place and was forced to go away as I had come.'

"'Marshal, while you were before it I was inside it.'

"'I know, sire.'

"'The Cortes and the British Cabinet offered me the command of the Spanish army.'

"'I remember, sire.'

"'The offer was a grave one. I hesitated long. Bear arms against France? For my family it is possible, but against my country! I was greatly perplexed. At this juncture you asked me through a trustworthy person for a secret interview in a little house situated on the Corraduras, between the city and your camp. Do you remember the fact, M. Marshal?'

"'Perfectly, sire. The day was fixed and the interview arranged.'

"'And I did not turn up?'

"'That is so.'

"'Do you know why?'

"'I never knew.'

"'I will tell you. As I was preparing to meet you the commander of the English squadron, apprised of the matter I knew not how, dropped upon me brusquely and warned me that I was about to fall into a trap, that Cadiz, being impregnable they despaired of seizing me, but that at Gorteadura I would be arrested by you; that the emperor wished to make the Duc d'Orleans a second volume of the Duc d'Enghien and that you would have me shot instantly. There, really,' added the king with a smile, 'your hand (on your conscience, were you going to shoot me?'

"The marshal remained silent for a moment, then replied: 'No, sire, I wanted to compromise you.' The subject of the conversation changed. A few minutes later the marshal took leave of the king, and the king, as he watched him go, said, with a smile, to the person who had heard the conversation: 'Compromise! Compromise! To-day it is called compromise. In reality he would have shot me.'"

Opened by Mistake.

Absentmindedly the young woman yawned.

"Pardon me," she said. "I didn't mean to do that."

"I see," responded Mr. Lingering—"opened by mistake."—Chicago Tribune.

Small Temptations.

As swarms of noxious insects are more easily destroyed than raging beasts, so is the victory over small temptations greater than that over heavy trials.

No Exchange.

"I see you brought back the same umbrella you took to the banquet."

"Yes; I didn't see anything better."—Kansas City Journal.

Luck comes to them who help themselves and know how to wait.—Max O'Rell.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, May 25.—Prospects of a record breakfast paced on Oklahoma and Kansas today forced prices down in the active options of wheat. Quotations of May tightened, but trading in that delivery was at a standstill. The market closed somewhat irregular, ½c to ¾c net lower to the advance. In corn the outcome varied from ¾c decline to ¼c gain. Oats opened ¼c to ¼c decline and provisions strong cut from a setback of 15c to 17½c to a rise of 5c.

Stockers and Feeders.

Short-keep feeders at $7.75 to $8; feeders at $7.50 to $7.75; stockers at $6.50 to $7.

Milkers and Springers.

The run of milkers and springers were light, and sold at $55 to $100 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were moderate, quality common and medium, and prices firm. Common calves at $7 to $7.50; medium at $7 to $8.50 and good at $9 to $9.50; choice calves at $10 to $10.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were exceedingly light, only 96 all told, and prices very firm. Export ewes and rams at $5 to $5.50; light ewes at $6.50 to $7.25; yearling lambs at $8.50 to $9; American yearling wethers at $8; spring lambs at $6 to $9 each.

Hogs.

There were no Ontario hogs on sale, but there were over 500 northwest hogs on the market, the quality of which was good. Ontario hogs were quoted at $7.90 f.o.b. cars $8.25 fed and watered and $8.50 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, May 25.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 23 were: 1060 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 2100 hogs and 1200 calves. Offerings on the market this morning amounted to 300 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 1700 hogs and 550 calves.

In cattle the feeling continued firm and prices were unchanged owing to the small supplies. A number of carloads of prepared beef have been brought in of late direct from Toronto. Trade was fairly active, with sales of full carloads of choice steers at $8.25 to $8.50 and good steers of 1100 pounds brought $8, while fair stock sold at $7 to $7.50 per 100 pounds. An increased demand was reported for good butchers' cows and bulls. A stronger feeling developed in the market and prices for Ontario stock advanced 10c to 25c per 100 pounds over Wednesday. The demand for packers was good and an active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $9.10 to $9.25, cows at $7.10 to $7.85 and stags at $4.85 to $4.85 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

The trade in small meats was fair and prices ruled steady. Yearling lambs sold at $6 to $6.50 and ewe sheep at $6.50 to $7 per 100 pounds, while spring lambs brought from $4 to $8 each, as to size and quality.

TO BE PRETTY, A WOMAN'S HAIR MUST BE FREE FROM DANDRUFF

A pretty woman may enhance her beauty and a plain woman become good looking by the proper care of her hair.

Nice hair, pretty hair, growing on the head it adorns, is one of nature's greatest beautifiers.

The kind of hair which always makes us look the second time, follows the use of Newbro's Herpicide, and is possible for every woman.

The results following regular applications of Newbro's Herpicide are often wonderful. It not only cleans the scalp entirely of dandruff but helps the coming out, adds to it life, lustre and luxuriance which are so essential to hair beauty.

Newbro's Herpicide is the Original scalp prophylactic. All other hair remedies claiming to kill the dandruff germ are simply trying to trade upon the reputation of genuine Herpicide.

Applications may be obtained at good barber shops and hair dressers.

Send 10c in postage to the Herpicide Co., Dept. E., Detroit, Mich., for sample and booklet.

Newbro's Herpicide is 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

A Discreet Story.

A central story in talk of the late Sir William Hingston in a recently published book of reminiscences. He was about to get into a hansom when a friend passing in a brougham offered to give the right hon. gentleman, whose avoirdupois was considerable, a lift to his town house. Sir William accepted the offer and gave the disappointed jehu a shilling. "Only a bob, guv'nor?" he asked ruefully. "Certainly," was the reply, "I never got into your cab." "But, guv'nor," responded the jehu, "consider the fright you gave the hoss."

Offended the Sun?

Speaking on folk-lore in East Africa at a meeting of the Folk-Lore Society at University College the other night, Miss A. Werner said that the aborigines had all a folk-lore of their own. There is a pillar in one town on which once stood a white bowl or vase which glittered in the sun. The story goes that one of the natives in his anger shot the bowl off, went home, and dropped dead, owing, it is firmly believed, to his destruction of the bowl.

This Boy And Girl Had St. Vitus' Dance

Boy Lost All Strength and Girl Could Not Speak—Doctor Could Not Help Them—Cured by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

So great is the strain on the system of the growing child that even with a careful attention to the food supply it is often difficult to keep up vitality.

It is necessary to supply a blood-forming treatment in condensed and easily assimilated form, so that it may be quickly taken up by the blood stream and thereby nourish the feeble nerves back to health and strength. It is difficult to imagine anything so admirably suited to this purpose as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. D. Aglen, Brandon, Mann., writes: "My son, aged fourteen, and little girl of three years, were both stricken with St. Vitus' Dance. The doctor told us what the ailment was, but could not keep them from getting worse and worse, so when I received a book about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I decided to try it. The boy had lost eighteen pounds in two months, and could scarcely take hold of anything. The little girl lost the power of her tongue, and could scarcely speak. I now take pleasure in stating that they are both quite well, and you would never know there had been anything the matter. The boy has gained twenty-five pounds in weight. I am very thankful there is such a medicine on the market, and that I happened to get the little book just when I did."

Mild and gentle in action, and yet wonderfully potent in its restorative influence on the system, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a splendid help to children who are pale, weak, and puny, slow in developing or nervous and irritable. Fifty cents a box, 5 boxes for $2.50; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Cheese Relish.

Spread bread which has been toasted or fried in deep fat with grated cheese, or with grated cheese mixed with a little mustard, then heat in the oven until the cheese is melted. This may be served with salad, or as a relish to give flavour to some dish such as boiled rice or hominy, which has no very marked flavour.

Chocolate Caramels.

One cup of molasses, 1-2 cup of milk, 1-2 cup of butter, 2 squares of chocolate, scant cup of sugar, 1-2 cup chopped nuts. Flavour with vanilla. Cook until slightly brittle when tried in cold water.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, MAY 26, 1914

CITY WAS CAPTURED BY THE BELLEVILLE RED-COATS

Visit of the 15th Regiment Was Predominating Feature in Peterborough's Celebration of Victoria Day.

MADE A FINE IMPRESSION

Nothing but the most friendly spirit and relationship was exhibited during the two days' stay here of the Belleville Regiment 15th Argyle Light Infantry. The weather was not all that could be desired, but the men applied themselves to local conditions, and spent a most enjoyable time. As is customary, the public manifested a great interest in the visitors, and large numbers turned out to watch the different parades.

Nothing marred their visit here, except a slight accident to Pte. Prince of F Co., who on Sunday afternoon, slipped across a tent rope, and fell on to a tent peg of an adjoining tent, rigging them uncles of his shoulder rather badly. He was taken to hospital and given medical treatment, but was around again yesterday, with no more injury than a sore limb.

Sergt. Major Gillespie is the instructor of the regiment, and has his messn well disciplined. A Co. is composed entirely of students from the Albert College, and is a smart company generally.

It was approximately 12 o'clock on Saturday night when the Belleville 15th Argyle Light Infantry arrived in the city per G. T. R., special train. A large number of citizens had gathered at the G. T. R. depot to await the arrival of the visitors. The train, however, took them on to Brock Street, where they detrained.

The Bag-pipes.

It took but a few moments for the men to form up and they marched to their camp, via Aylmer and Murray Streets to the step of a Scottish air, rendered by a bag-pipe band. It may here be mentioned that the Belleville regiment is comprised of a smart lot of men, perhaps a little on the young side. This is no detriment, however, as the young men are more likely to take a lasting interest in the life military, and remain with the Regiment, and that being so, with due and proper training, they will develop into smart and efficient militiamen.

They were brought on to the parade ground in quarter column and, after the officers and men alike had been dismissed, a bee-line was made for the tents. This, though, was done in an orderly manner, one Company at a time. The arms were deposited in the gun sheds of the 34th battery. Amost unnecessary to relate the citizens in that portion of the City adjacent to the camp were not disturbed from their night's rest.

Being Sunday morning, the reveille was not sounded until a rather late hour. The men were marched in Companies to the various hotels and restaurants of the City to get their breakfast, after which they made ready for the Church parade.

Church Parade.

At 9.15, on Sunday morning, the 15th Regiment, 330 strong, were joined by the 57th Regiment, and with the two bands heading the respective Regiments, they paraded to St. John's Church, where they heard a very appropriate sermon by the Rev. Canon Davidson. In the neighbourhood of seven hundred soldiers participated in the parade, those of the 15th Regiment, under the command of Lt.-Col. L. W. March and those of the 57th Regiment, under Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg.

The parade was a splendid one, and the appearance of the Regiments, as they marched along George and Hunter Streets, to the Church, was superb. The men and officers of both Regiments bore themselves exceedingly well, and the crowd that lined the streets to see the parade were not disappointed. The bands formed up on the lawn of the Church while the soldiers marched past them into the Church. Then the bands followed.

Canon Davidson heartily welcomed the visiting Regiment to our City. He was glad that the officers and men of the 15th had honoured the people of Peterborough by their presence in this City. Their uniform was a sufficient introduction; "our City is open to you to enjoy yourselves while you are in it."

For his sermon the Rector took his text from the 17th verse of the 27th Chapter of Proverbs, which reads as follows: "Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend."

It was not only the case that iron would sharpen iron, but a strong man could put grit into his fellows. When a man entered the militia he turned his back on what was soft and easy and came in contact with what was hard and rugged. So through soldierly contact the men were strengthened. The camps and strenuous marches helped in a great measure to introduce iron into the character of the members of the Regiments. In civil life there was an increase of luxury and ease. The habits of men were becoming careless and indifferent. In military life there

IMMIGRATION HAS DROPPED

Department Statistics Show a Decrease of 52 Per Cent. in Newcomers During Last Month

ONLY 35,432 COME IN

OTTAWA, Ont., May 26.—A tremendous dropping off of immigration into Canada is told by statistics of the Department. A decrease is shown in the arrivals from all countries.

Total immigration to the Dominion for April last was 35,432, as against 73,286 for April of 1913, or a decrease of about 52 per cent.

IS KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Special Wire to The Examiner:

SASKATOON, Sask., May 26.—T. F. Calder, aged 34, manager of the Standard Trust Company, was struck by lightning and killed while on a holiday automobile trip.

Fireworks For The Children Went Off In The Kitchen

Mr. Nelson Graham, the Charlotte Street magazine and newspaper dealer, is nursing a burned hand to-day from a premature fireworks display in the kitchen of his home on Rink Street yesterday morning. He had brought home a box of assorted fireworks, which were intended for an evening's amusement of his children.

One of them assayed to test one of the smaller pieces in anticipation of the evening's fun, but a spark from it landed on an exposed part of another piece in the box, and the pyrotechnics were lovely. It was in trying to squelch the display that Mr. Graham burned several fingers.

Fortunately no damage was done to the house.

What Next In The Home Rule Question?

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., May 26—Now that the home rule bill has passed the House of Commons, what will happen That is the question being asked al over the United Kingdom this morning, as the peope scan the morning papers. The general impression is that nothing will develop seriously any way till after the amending bill has been brought into the House of Lords. Just what this bill will provide nobody but the Liberal leaders know. The Unionists shake their heads dubiously and talk generalities like "mockery, farce, sham" and their newspapers are advising them to stay away from all conciliation conferences. The Liberals maintain an optimistic attitude.

CHANGES WILL IMPROVE SCENE AT THE STATION

The Grand Trunk Railway Company is going to make a big improvement in the appearance of their property near the local depot. Men started to work this morning to replace the cinders which have been serving for ballast around the tracks near the Station, with gravel of a brighter colour. This will relieve the dark and unpleasant appearance of the tracks around the Station which has been very noticeable in the past. By this means the gloomy effect, it is hoped, will be eliminated. Flower beds wil be placed in the lawn just north of the station, which will add a little more colour to that section of the landscape. When everything is completed the Station surroundings will have been greatly improved and brightened. The ballast which is being used to replace the cinders, is being taken from the blizzards ballast pit.

OFFERED $17,000 FOR TERRACE.

Mr. John Craig has been offered $17,000 cash for his terrace on Stewart street, south of Hunter street. He has sold a house on King street for $3,300 cash, and states that the despatch and success of the sale has been largely due to The Examiner's "want ad" column.

SUCCUMBED TO HIS INJURIES

Thomas Batty Fell Over Bannister at Grand Hotel Saturday Night and Was Fatally Injured.

DIED SUNDAY MORNING

Thos. Batty, an employee of the Bell Telephone Co., was fatally injured on Saturday night, when he fell from the stairs of the Grand Hotel, down one and a half storeys to the retunda. At the time he was with two fellow-employees, J. Lawley and W. Tevens, who were the only ones to see the accident, which occurred about nine o'clock.

Batty was staying in a room on the third storey of the hotel, and shortly before nine o'clock he left the room, in company with Lawley and Tevens, intending to come down stairs. He only took a few steps, however, when he lost his balance and swung over the bannister. Before he could be rescued he dropped head first to the ground floor. In the descent he struck his head on a post at the head of the stairs leading to the second floor of the hotel. His two friends rushed to the bottom of the stairs, and others who were in the hotel ran to the injured man, but he was found to be unconscious. Dr. Amys and Dr. McNulty were sent for, and on the orders of the former the man was taken to his room. About an hour later he was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in an automobile, where he died on Sunday morning about nine o'clock.

At the time of the accident the police were notified, and they sent to the Fire Hall for the pulmotor. It was found, however, that the man was suffering from an injury to the skull that could not be helped by the use of the pulmotor. The stairs of the Grand Hotel are divided by a landing between each floor of the building, so that in falling the man had to pass three landings, and it was by striking his head on a post at one of these that he received the fatal blow.

Batty has been in the employ of the local branch of the Bell Telephone Company for three months, during which time he was construction clerk under Construction Foreman M. McBrien. For two days before the accident he was working under Mr. McBrien on rural lines, and was staying at the home of people near Chemong. He drove to the City in company with his foreman late on Saturday afternoon.

The dead man was thirty-seven years of age, and comes from England, in which country a mother and sister survive him. They have been notified of his death. The funeral was held this afternoon from Lane and Bann's Undertaking Rooms at 2.30 o'clock, to the Little Lake Cemetery. There will be no inquest into his death, it being clearly an accident.

A GOOD COMPANY AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE ALL THIS WEEK

Two large and very appreciative audiences greeted the matinee and night performances of the pretty Irish musical comedy "Donny Brook Fair," at the Opera House yesterday, when presented by the Realto Review Co., who have established the fact that it is the peer of all Tabloid Musical Comedy Companies, and embraces some of the best singers and dancers as well as funny comedians, and a real beauty chorus. While the vaudeville cannot be improved upon, even at much higher prices, Mr. Wm. O'Clare, a very sweet Irish singer and yodler, assisted by a nice looking lot of girls, did some excellent harmony singing which the audience never seemed to tire of. A very funny act was done by DeLoss and Pearl, who kept the audience in a roar, with a crazylogue. And the trio, Barney Stone and Desmond Sisters demonstrated that they were the classiest of dancing acts. Miss Grace Farnum, a very pretty soprano, whom is the Prima Donna of the company, won all her hearers by her excellent voice. The company deserves the liberal patronage it has started off with, and no doubt capacity houses will be their reward for the nice, clean show of merit they are presenting at prices only 10 and 20c.

Royal Party Will Leave Peterborough Via the G.T.R.

Mayor Buller has received word that the Royal party which will honour Peterborough on June 1st will arrive by the C.P.R. and depart by the G.T.R. It is expected that George street will be in good condition for that date, but the route to the G.T.R. station will have to be along Hunter and down Aylmer as Charlotte street will hardly be finished by that time.

SIX MONTHS FOR SUFFRAGETTES

Militants Who Smashed Pictures in the National Gallery and Royal Academy Are Sentenced.

OTHERS IMPRISONED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., May 26 — Freida Graham, the suffragette who last week smashed Bellini paintings and others in the National Gallery, to-day in the London sessions was sentenced to six months in the prison, and Mary Spencer, the militant who mutilated a picture in the Royal Academy, received a like sentence. Miss Graham acted as her own counsel, and argued that she was justified in damaging works of art or committing any other act of vandalism by the refusal of King George to receive suffragettes. Seventeen militants, charged with window smashing in connection with the Constitution Hill melee were tried to-day and each sent to prison for four months.

CLAIMS $500 FOR OBSTRUCTION

Of Right of Way--J. J. McBain and J. R. Bell Are Parties Interested--Another Writ For $1000

PROMISSORY NOTE

A writ has been issued by Messrs. Hall and Hall, for John J. McBain, plaintiff, against James R. Bell, defendant.

Plaintiff claims $500 for the obstruction of, and interference by the defendant, with the right of way, appurtenant to that part of Lot 5, south of Hunter street, and west of George street, in the City of Peterborough, owned by the plaintiff, together with the said right of way as described in a conveyance to the plaintiff dated 29th October, 1909, and registered in the registry office for the County of Peterborough.

The plaintiff also seeks an order commanding the defendant to relieve the said obstruction, and an injunction restraining the defendant from obstructing or interfering with the said right of way.

Mr. G. N. Gordon has issued a writ against James Russell Dodworth, of Pittsburg, Pa., music teacher, defendant, for the Cosmopolitan National Bank, and Charles C. Murray.

The plaintiff claims $1,000.00 from the defendant, being part of a promissory note, and interest thereon at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. The plaintiff also claims $40.00 costs.

The case will be tried at the next sitting of the High Court.

TO-MORROW'S GAME CALLED FOR TWO O'CLOCK

To-morrow afternoon the game at Riverside Park between the local Canadian League squad and the Erie Club will commence at 2 o'clock, instead of 3:45 as usual. The change in time is to allow the Erie team to leave the city to-morrow afternoon.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION AT COLDSPRINGS

The Township Sunday School Convention is in session this afternoon at Coldsprings and will also hold a meeting this evening. Mr. Harold Waite, of Toronto, will give addresses at both meetings. Sunday was the 20th anniversary of the Union Sunday School at Coldsprings, and was featured by an address from Rev. R. G. Peever.

Mr. R. Sheehy Gets Contract For $125,000 Church in Toronto

The Toronto Globe announces that Mr. Richard Sheehy of Peterborough has secured the contract of a new Catholic Church, to be erected at the corner of Grace Street and Mansfield Avenue. It will be one of the finest churches in Toronto and will cost approximately $125,000. Mr. Sheehy has already begun the preliminary construction work.

Peterboro' Musicians Scored Fine Hit At Concert in Bethany

BETHANY, May 26.—The Bethany Athletic Club's concert in the Town Hall last night prived highly successful from every standpoint. The programme was provided entirely by a number of musical artists from Peterborough, and every number was enthusiastically received. Financially thee oncert was all that could be desired, and the hall could not accommodate all those who gathered to hear the visitors. The overflow crowd was almost half as large as the number who secured seats in the hall. The concert was splendidly varied and everything passed off without an itch. The vocalists were: Miss Ada Richardson, soprano; Miss Ida Sanderson, contralto; Mr. Maurice Park, tenor; Mr. Asa Huycke, baritone. Mr. Huycke's orchestra was composed of Mr. Wm. Wilson, violin; Mr. Chas. Seymour, violin and harp; Mr. Otto Gliddon, clarinet; Mr. Jas. Minnecola, cornet; Mr. Huycke, trombone and piano; Miss M. McCabe, piano; Mr. Geo. Chambers, traps and drums. Miss Richardson and Miss Sanderson delighted the audience with their solos and the mixed quartettes with Mr. Park and Mr. Huycke were exceptionally fine.

Mr. Wilson contributed a violin solo that highly pleased the assemblage, and his obligato with Miss Richardson's first solo made this a very charming number. The orchestra played splendidly several of the selections being Mr. Huycke's compositions. Miss McCabe played the accompaniments. The concert was an unqualified success, and the Peterborough party are assured of a big reception should they return to Bethany.

They motored out after seven o'clock, arriving in good time and everything passed off without a hitch. They were entertained at luncheon after the concert at Mr. McCartney's and a most enjoyable evening was concluded with a dance at which the visitors and members of the Athletic Club and their friends were present.

LOHENGRIN

Something About This Famous Opera

The Bridal Chorus Translation

The "Heart Song" illustrated in to-day's issue of the Examiner is the famous Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin. To untold thousands of people this wedding march recalls the most joyous moment of their lives.

In sequence of writing this great opera is the seventh of Wagner's productions for the stage. The poem was written at Dresden in 1845; the music begun in September, 1845; the instrumentation of the entire work was completed during the ensuing winter and spring; and the first performance took place August 28, 1850, at Weimar.

The opera has always been especially popular in the United States and England, not only on account of the wondrous beauty of the music—but because the legend itself has been embodied in English literature from early times.

The Lohengrin Bridal Chorus, or Wedding March, is only one of several celebrated compositions of this kind that appear in the book—and it is this completeness and accuracy that make it universally interesting and absolutely a work that no home should do without.

HEART SONGS is one of the great books of the century. It will charm, entertain and instruct every member of the family. It has five hundred large pages, including over four hundred selections, words and music, and is now being distributed by this paper to its friends and readers on presentation of six consecutively dated coupons clipped from the paper, and the bare cost of distribution. Books are on display at this office, and the choice is optional, as set forth elsewhere in this issue.

FOUR ARE DROWNED WHEN A CANOE WAS CAPSIZED

North Bay Couple and Their Two Children Lose Their Lives While on a Holiday Trip to Lake Nipissing.

DOG GAVE ALARM

Special to The Examiner:

NORTH BAY, May 26.—Attracted by a collie dog which came whining and barking to the camp and led them back to an inlet on Lake Nipissing, searchers found the body of Mrs. Mamasbridge of this town with her two children clasped to her breast, all dead, in a few feet of water near the shore.

On further investigation the body of her husband was also found further out, and an upturned boat not far away indicated that they had been turned out of the frail craft and drowned all except the dog which had apparently done its best to help his mistress to the shore and then had gone to call help.

The family was very popular in the community. They were on a holiday outing when death overtook them.

Two Youths Upset From Sailing Canoe Were Well Ducked

Joseph Mitchell, Aylmer Street, and Sid McCabe, Perry Street, got a ducking on Sunday morning out in mid-stream, near the Lock Street wharf, when their sailboat in which they had put off from shore, upset. Other than the wetting they suffered no results from the mishap, as they made shore safely and rescued the boat, paddles and cushions.

SAYS CANADA IS IN LEAD

New York Authority Says This Country is Five Years Ahead in Controlling Residential Dishicts

CITY PLANNING CONVENTION

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 26.—That Canada was five years ahead of the United States in controlling the residential districts and restricting certain neighbourhoods to certain classes of buildings was the statement made to-day to the City Planning Convention by Lawrence Veiler, secretary and director of New York City. He said that laws enacted in this direction in Los Angeles in 1909 and taken up by other United States cities later, have been in operation since 1904 under the direction of the Ontario Legislature.

ELIMINATION OF HUERTA THE ONLY DRAWBACK

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., May 26—After almost continuous sessions with the Mexican representatives the mediators to-day were interviewed by United States delegates, who impressed on them the great necessity for the limination of the Huerta Government as a factor in the situation. It is stated unofficially that the Mexicans leave taken a broad view of the situation in all things except in that point but they say some government must be recognized as existing in Mexico, and it can only be Huerta's as the conditions are at present. From an independent source it is believed that could this objection be passed over the prospects for a peaceful settlement are very bright.

Are N.C.O's of Some Regiments Fully Efficient?

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—During the past few days the military have played a prominent part in this city, but the conduct of some of the men must have left a far different impression than that intended. As one who has served in the army, and has a good knowledge of law, I should like to point out a few things, which, rather doing the King's uniform a credit, abuse it. Every man walking out should be properly dressed, viz., tunic, trousers, and forage cap, belt and cane. Several could be walking through the town, without a belt, and some with their hats anything but straight. To correct these faults, discipline must be enforced by the non-commissioned ranks. A sergeant, when in uniform should associate with his own rank, otherwise efficiency will never reach a high standard. One man I particularly noticed, had exchanged hats with a civilian friend. A party of about four soldiers passed, among whom was a sergeant, and they rather enjoyed the joke. Now, should this not have been put right by the sergeant, and not, as was the case, by a local policeman. Flowers and pennants could be noticed as being worn as decorative articles. Decorations on the King's uniform, other than those earned by soldiers, are against regulations, and rather than make a man look soldierly, make him look ridiculous. These faults are very detrimental, and I feel sure that if the men were cautioned and instructed before such celebrations, as to their behaviour, and given to understand that they were under military law, they would realize the position more, and uphold the motto "Nulli Secundus" (Second to none).

The above does not, in any way refer to the 57th, who I know, hold a very high standard of efficiency.

Thanking you for your space, I am,

"A GRENADIER."

Couldn't Find It.

"Mary, why didn't you sound the dinner gong?"

"Please, 'm, I couldn't find it."

"Why, there it is on the hall table!"

"Please, im, you said this morning that was the breakfast gong."

Quite a Social Event.

"Mabel, I'm drawn on the grand jury!"

"So am I, Gertrude."

"Our responsibilities will be heavy."

"I realize that. What shall we wear?"

A BRITISH VIEW.

What a fine thing it must be to have a tame Government in your pocket? Sir Wm. MacKenzie, President of the Canadian Northern Railway system, announces with great glee that the Dominion Government, after "thorough investigation," has definitely decided to guarantee a trifle of £9,000,000 (45 million dollars) for the completion of the line. That is all; only another 20s. ($5) per head loaded on to the unfortunate inhabitants of the country. Apparently there is no real effort made to discover whether the line is needed or whether it will pay, but it looks sufficiently attractive to get more money out of British pockets, and that is quite justification enough for anything. We often wonder how long it will take investors here to realize the actualities of the situation. Canada may become a big country in time, but when every man, woman and child owes nearly £100 to foreign creditors, it is a terrible handicap to any real progress.—John Bull.

KEEP THEM SEPARATE.

The only merit that one can see in the proposal of the City Council to put the work of the Utilities Commission and that of the City Engineer's department under one executive head is its economy; and it seems that it would be false economy—an economy that might and would mean waste and unsatisfactory results in the end. No man can serve two masters; and there is a limit to the capabilities of the most capable men. The very idea of a Utilities Commission argues the desirability of separate administration of our water works, electric lighting and power, and of our civic affairs. In the first place the City Engineer, who is the "one executive head" mentioned is an exceedingly busy man as things stand. It is no disparagement to him to suggest that he couldn't do the double bill of work, couldn't find the time, or have the physical endurance to do it. Our City Engineer's department is becoming so important—so great a spending department, that the City Engineer, as it is, is overworked if he does his duty adequately and efficiently. It was only a few days ago that the City Engineer said he hadn't the time to accompany the City Council in their annual tour of street inspection—something which he should do more than anybody else. If he has more work added to his present overwork, he cannot [illegible] to it, and a subordinate engineer would have to be appointed, and if we are to look to having dear work cheaply done, we shall have unsatisfactory results and a repetition of the blunders that have necessitated the calling in of experts, who are under the ban of the city fathers, as so strongly expressed at the conference of the city fathers and the Water Commission.

We are engaged in an extensive programme of civic improvement; we are confronted with the necessity of grappling with the sewer disposal problem, and when we come to add the new scheme of city beautification, which the city is committed to—if the aldermen at the recent banquet were not humbugging us, we shall have a good many irons in the fire at one time. With all this on hand or in view, a city engineer has his work cut out for him, and he will be lucky if he gets time to eat and sleep without having two more important departments as difficult as his own saddled upon his already overburdened shoulders.

The water works and the Hydro-Electric service will not be easy to administer, and are too important to be put off with the services of one-third of an executive head, who will have more than he can do in looking after the City Engineer's department. The success of the Waterworks administration has been due to the fact that it is separate from the City Council control, involving the possibility of the application of business principles to management. We have city corporation and the Utilities Commission separate in body, and it seems that will be a good thing to keep them separate in head. Without that we cannot avoid complication, overlapping, cross purposes, friction. If one head is given to the City Engineer's department and the waterworks and Hydro-Electric, we may appear to save money—in the comparatively trifling matter of salary; but if work is to be properly done, if proper supervision is exercised, we shall have to have sub-ordinate heads, and the economy will be less real than apparent, not taking into account unsatisfactory results. And this has come to us in the past, with high expenditures to repair the results of insufficient supervision. The proposal of the City Council to amalgamate these offices under one head has one thing to recommend it—it will stand a deal of thinking over before being adopted. The old Romans had in their myths a three-headed dog, Cerebus, the guardian of the infernal ferry. But this three-headed official had only dead ones to look after; whereas our proposed three-headed official will have live issues and live interests to demand more time than he can give, and more engineering skill and administrative resource than are usually wrapped up in the skin of one man.

CANADA FOR CANADIANS.

The Borden Government did the right thing, the patriotic thing, in having the Department of Marine and Fisheries give an order to the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company for two new ladder deep-digging dredges. These two dredges are the largest of the kind ever built in Canada and are intended for heavy service in deepening the St. Lawrence Ship Channel. They are 214 feet long, 37½ feet beam, and 14 feet depth. They are classed 100-A-1 Lloyds special dredge class. The bucket ladder is 117 feet long, with a chain of 40 buckets of a cubic yard capacity. The dredge is capable of digging to a depth of 32 feet below the water with the ladder at an angle of 45 degrees. The vessels are completely equipped with the necessary hoisting, breasting and other winches, electric light, etc., and were built under the close supervision of representatives of the Department. The first finished dredge carried out trials at Collingwood on the 23rd and 24th of April, and the second on May 9th, and in both cases the strongest contract requirements were more than met.

So much of detail is given in regard of these fine dredges, because they emphasize a fact that cannot be too much emphasized—the fact of Canada's ship-building capacity. Here we have two specially ponderous and complicated dredges, so thoroughly well built in a Canadian shipyard that they are recorded as 100-A-1 in the most exacting and most widely recognized marine register in the world—Lloyd's. They demonstrate that Canada is capable actually of building the highest class of passenger and freight steamers and potentially—with proper equipment and development of natural resources and facilities—any class of ship that floats—even the Dreadnought. We have only to give Canada a chance and she—her resources in coal and iron and the instructed skill of her mechanics—will do the rest. If the Borden Government, when it assumed power, had carried out the Naval Law of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, had dealt with the tenders called for and ready to be dealt with when Laurier was replaced, we should have had great ship-building yards established, and cruisers of the highest class well under way or completed for a Canadian navy. In the very process of doing this we should have developed the ship-building industry, and Canada would have been well launched on the way, by building all the vessels in the Canadian service, every vessel of Canadian register, that ploughs our inland seas or the high seas.

The Examiner, and there are in Canada, tens of thousands or more that think with it, believes that the best patriotism, the best loyalty to Canada, and the best interests of the Empire demand the highest development of our own resources by the production in this country of everything that can be produced or manufactured in Canada, and the development of our raw resources whether of field, forest or mine, to the ultimate point of manufacture, with all the advantages that come from the employment of Canadian labour, skilled or otherwise.

It is a craven position to take as Mr. Borden took when he declared that Canada could not build the vessels of a Canadian navy in twenty-five or fifty years. All the success we have achieved in manufacture in all its branches have come from making a beginning. If we had never made a beginning; if private enterprise had taken the Canada-can't position of Mr. Barden, we should still be having our school books printed in Great Britain, and we should be still using wooden ploughs or agricultural implements, and the bulk of our machinery imported from Britain or a foreign country. The order given for the dredges spoken of above is in itself a condemnation of the policy of contribution that belies the capabilities of Canada, tends to keep us in the colonial class and tends to keep us in the class of imperial dependents. The more we develop ourselves, the more we help ourselves. The more worthy we make ourselves in every way of our place in the Empire the better we shall be, strengthening and building up the Empire. We must be true to ourselves, must cherish our autonomy, emphasize our imperial individuality. The more true to ourselves the truer we shall be to the Empire—we shall realize and impress the immortal truth of Shakspere's saying—

To thine own self be true,
And it must follow as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.

REVISION OF PRAYER BOOK
NEW PETITION FOR LABOUR MEN

Changes Are Not Drastic--Litany to Be Shortened and Many New Prayers Are Added

The first statement on the proposals for the revision of the Prayer Book, which the Bishop of Kingston was requested to prepare by the special revision committee, shows that the "eminently conservative" revision which was forecasted leaves very few marks upon the old forms of morning and evening prayer.

In addition to the present rubric another has been added sanctioning the shortening of the service by the omission of the Venite (in the morning prayer), of one or more psalms, of one lesson, of one canticle as appointed, of the lesser litany and the Lord's Prayer after the creed, and of the prayers following the third collect, except the prayer of St. Chrysostom and the grace.

The following combinations of services are permitted:—(1) Morning prayer and holy communion. (2) Morning or evening prayer and litany. (3) Litany and holy communion. (4) Morning prayer, litany and holy communion.

Many new opening sentences have been added to the order of morning prayer, and new special anthems are suggested for use on holy days.

MEANING OF "HELL."

The following rubric is inserted after the apostle's creed:

Note that the words in the creed "He descended into hell" are considered as words of the same meaning as "He went into the place of departed spirits."

Two new prayers are added after the prayer for the royal family, one being for the Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, and the Lieutenant-Governors of the provinces, and the other incorporating petitions for all the royal family from the King downwards, the Governor-Generals, Lieutenant-Governors and the Legislatures. In the prayer for the clergy and the people the phrase, "Who alone worketh great marvels," is altered into the "Giver of all spiritual gifts," and "clergy" is substituted for "curates."

The changes made in the order for morning prayer were adopted also for evening prayer in the places in which the two orders are identical.

RETAIN CREED.

The Athanasian creed to be retained in the Prayer Book in its present place exactly as it stands with out any alteration in text or rubric, but that a liturgical version omit ting verses 1, 2, 28 and the last verse, be printed immediately after the creed as it now stands. This means that permission is given to use the liturgical version where preferred in stead of the creed as it now stands. This recommendation amounts to little since the creed has largely fallen into disuse on account of its archaic nature. In many places it is already to all intents and purposes obsolete. Many of the clergy have taken conscientious objection to what are known as the "damnatory clauses" in the creed.

TO SHORTEN LITANY.

A new rubric is placed before the litany directing that when the litany is not used as a separate service the minister may, at his discretion, all that followeth the Lord's Prayer, except the prayer of St. Chrysostom and the grace.

The words "from fire and flood" are inserted after "from lightning and tempest."

The following is substituted for the petition for the Lords of the Council, etc.: "That it may please Thee to endue the Governor-General of this Dominion and the Lieutenant-Governor of this Province with grace, wisdom and understanding."

Then follows a new petition: "That it may please Thee to bless the Parliaments of the Empire, and to direct their consultations to the honour of Thy name and the welfare of Thy people."

PRAYER FOR LABOUR MEN.

After the petition for the magistrates the following new petition is inserted: "That it may please Thee to bless and protect all who serve mankind by learning, labour and industry."

No change of even a single word was made by the revision committee without a two-thirds majority, and they acted with unanimity on all matters.

The present Prayer Book, as used now in England and Canada, and the colonies, was last revised in 1662, in the reign of Charles II., the first Prayer Book being compiled about 100 years previously.

For the Irish Church and in the American Church of the Prayer Book was revised to meet conditions in these, but Canada has hitherto followed the English use, and attempted no revision.

BIRD MISSES THE TRAIN

The Examiner is indebted to Mr. John E. Nelson, of Fern Green, Pollokshields, Glasgow, Scottland, for the following clipping from a Glasgow paper:

An interestinng incident in bird life has just come to light at Limavady, Ireland. In a railway carriage which travels each morning to 'Derry at 11.35 a.m., leaving 'Derry again at 4.50, in the afternoon, a thrush has built her nest, and is at present engaged in hatching four eggs. The nest is built on top of the steam heating pipe under the carriage seat, there being of course no heat at present used on the train. How the nest was built is a mystery, as the carriage is used every day except Sunday. On Wednesday last, through a change in the arrangements, the train, which usually leaves 'Derry at 4.50, left 10 minutes earlier, and the thrush, not aware of the new time-table, missed the train. Whether the bird travelled by the next train has not transpired, but on Thursday morning she was noticed flying off her nest as usual. The railway officials have now made arrangements that the carriage in which the nest is built shall not be used again until the eggs have been hatched.

Twenty dollars a pound was the price paid a few years ago for aluminium. To-day The "SALADA" Tea Co. are commencing to use it to wrap their well-known tea. So light is this wonderful metal that a single sheet weighs no more than a similar sized sheet of letter paper.

SPIRIT IS WEAK.

"I thought you all wus gineter git married to Rastus Pinkley."

"I was thinkin' about it," replied Miss Miami Brown. "But when I los' my temper an' slammed him wif a skillet an' he neber come back at me, I says to myself 'Dat ain' no man to put in charge of family discipline."

GETTING A START
By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER JR.
WHAT YOU WANT WHEN YOU WANT IT

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

You can't know it all. Don't try to. Your brain and your time are limited. If you carry in your head the fundamentals of knowledge, and are familiar with current topics, you have all that you have a right to expect, and al that you can conveniently hold.

Ability to find out what you want is as valuable an asset as actual knowledge in the premises.

The answers to 99 out 100 questions can be obtained over the telephone or found in the good reference library, and many of them are in the dictionary. A little, but persistent, effort on your part will enable you to locate immediately the man who, or the book which, has the answer, or can direct you to the man or book possessing it.

Let us suppose, for example, that you desire to know the average thickness of silver plate. If you are not in the silver business, this information is of only transient value to you; and it would be absurd for you to retain it except when you want it. Telephone to any jeweller or silversmith. He knows.

Perhaps you desire to locate the author or publisher of a not very well known book. The head of the editorial department of a publishing house, or any editor, can give you the information, or tell you where it can be obtained.

Your employer may desire to have his office chairs upholstered and he would consider a durable imitation of leather. Nearly every leather manufacturer or furniture maker — and you can reach them by telephone—can give you information.

If you are seeking special education, or desire to take a night course, the superintendent of schools or any educator, will gladly assist you to select the best institution.

Your employer, or you, yourself, may desire to know what mucilage is made of. Any stationer can tell you, or give you the name of some one who can.

You are looking for an historical date. The librarian has this information at his tongue's end, or can easily locate it.

You are considering the purchase of a new filing system, and want the best. Obtain the catalogue of the leading manufacturers. And consult with houses using those systems.

You would obtain some information regarding certain imports and exports. Perhaps this data is in book form. Your librarian knows, or the President or any official of a board of trade can help you.

When you want to know anything telephone, write, or call upon some party, who, you think, is likely to have the information, or who can locate for you the right man or book. Don't try to carry it all in your head. You have not room for it. Simply learn how to get it when you want it. The process is easy.

Don't forget the dictionary. There is more in it than most people think there is. I suggest that, when you are not busy, you become familiar with it. You will find the acquaintanceship profitable.

"Detestable Habit Of Open Windows" Says Sir Robt. Nicol

Sir Robertson Nicol complains about the "detestable habit of open windows," by which he asserts that he catches cold. Despite the fact that many doctors preach the gospel of the open window, there is apparent dissonance between medical teaching and medical practice, says the London Standard.

At half-past eight o'clock yesterday morning in Harley street there was scarce a window that let in the morning air. Later exploration at eleven o'clock and at noon of a warm, sultry day in the doctors' quarters—Harley street, Queen Anne street, Cavendish square, Wimpole street, and Devonshire street — corroborated the fact that, to outward appearance, doctors do not practice all they are believed to preach.

A physician gave the following explanation: "All up and down Harley street just now you observe the painters' ladders. I want the air, but unmixed with the odour of paint." This failed to account satisfactorily for the case, however. While the painters were busy about the house of Dr. Abercrombie, for instance, and the doctor's many windows were all sealed, the men of the brush were equally busy next door to Sir John Tweedy, yet most of his twelve windows let in the odourous air. Ladders were reared against Dr. Gordon Holmes' and Dr. Pegler's, but the windows there were open wide. Yet a tour of the district, where specialists' consulting rooms vastly outnumbered the paint pots, made it evident that eleven out of twelve of the West End medical practiced the plan of the closed window.

In Cavendish square but one half heartedly opened window let the noontide air into the house of Dr. Symes Thompson, son of the great pioneer of open-air treatment for tuberculosis. Sir Victor Horsley kept his closed, save one on the second floor, and seemingly of his mind were Sir D. Ferrier, the specialist in neurology; Dr. Sandwich, Dr. Elizabeth Patteson, Sir Arbuthnot Lane, the senior surgeon of Guy's; Dr. Dundas Grant, throat and ear specialist, and Sir Ronald Ross, who has special experience of tropical medicine. There it appeared as though a six-inch opening was in deference to the wishes of a small bird that hung in a gilded cage.

No. 7 Harley street, which has the plates of seven doctors on its door, had but two sparingly opened windows. On the other hand, those of Dr. Guthrie Rankin, physician to the Seamen's Hospital at Greenwich, all opened so widely that the curtains fluttered out into the zephyrs of the street, and Sir Anderson Critchett, surgeon in ordinary to the King, invited as much air as he could into every room. The practical evidence at the house of Dr. Lister, ex-president of Guy's, and an authority on consumption, was to the contrary purpose. At Dr. Wethered's, physician to the Brompton and Ventnor Hospitals, three windows out of twelve were opened a little way; but Dr. Pasteur's, senior physician to Middlesex Hospital, were opened wide. Sir Maurice Abbott-Anderson, surgeon to the Princess Royal, used the double window favoured by Queen Victoria, so arranged that his first floor was aired between the panes.

But these and many open-air exceptions only proved the rule of the sealed house.

In his recent book, "The Humorous Side of the Pulpit," the Rev. W. Cowan gives a warning to preachers who read off sermons they have not written themselves without taking the precaution of going through them very carefully beforehand. It sometimes happens, he says, that the preacher has appropriated for the pulpit the complete sermon of another man, and he tells a story of a Cambridge don who did this when preaching to a congregation of undergraduates. Towards the end of his sermon he suddenly astounded his hearers by turning to another aspect of the subject in hand with the preliminary remark, "And now a word to you who are mothers."

DREAM OF CASH THWARTS BURGLARS

VINELAND, N.J., May 21.—When Harry Lipitz, a young merchant of Newfield, went to bed he dreamed of the $200 he put under his pillow upon retiring. Just as he saw the money (in his dream) turn into gold he opened his eyes to see a burglar flashing a light about the room. Lipitz slipped from bed, jumped out a second story window and ran to his store for help.

A posse found two men in the Lipitz yard, but just as Detective Ekoff made a grab for one of them he fell and the robbers began to exchange shots with the posse. In the mix-up the suspects got away, but Lipitz has his $200.

What He Caught.

"Does your husband go fishing?"

"Yes," replied young Mrs. Torkins.

"And does he catch anything?"

"Yes. I heard him telling a friend how, after great patience and perseverance, he caught his third ace."

Do You Remember how mother would cuddle you up close to herself in the rocking chair or tuck you in one of those dear old cradles of the time when it wasn't a crime to have rockers on the cradle? And as she rocked and sang "In the Sweet Bye and Bye," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," or "Twinkle, Twinkle," you just felt yourself slipping away into dreamland until you never could remember the last words she sang. And these old lullabies are better to-day than they ever were.

You Can't Put Baby to Sleep with the modern ragtime or the latest popular hit of the day. Musical though they may be, none of them have that soft, soothing effect, which those old-time lullabies sung by your mother had on the baby in the cradle—and the memory of which still affects us deeply in maturer years.

ARE YOU GOING TO MUSKOKA THIS SUMMER?

If so take the 10.20 a.m. fast express from Toronto, daily except Sunday, via Grand Trunk Railway, and arrive Muskoka Wharf 1.45 p. m., where direct connections are made with steamers for points on Muskoka Lakes. This train carries Parlour, Library; Buffet car and first-class coaches, and passengers are assured of a comfortable ride along the most interesting route to Muskoka Wharf, which is the origina gateway to the far-famed Muskoka Lakes.

The curative odour of balsam and pine, and the preponderance of water area to land surface, together with the high altitude (1000 feet above the sea), render hay fever an impossible condition and perfect immunity from this annoying ailment is assured.

Return connection is made with train leaving Muskoka Wharf 10.30 a.m., daily, except Sunday, arriving Toronto 2.55 p.m.

Tourist tickets at low fares are now on sale to Muskoka Lakes' points, good for stop-over and valid to return until November 30th, 1914.

If you are contemplating making a trip ask Grand Trunk Agents for full particulars or write C. E. Horning, District Passegner Agent, Union Station, Toronto, Ont. 14d-122-3w22

WOMEN TIE WITH MEN IN STRUGGLE TO PURCHASE CALGARY OIL SHARES THE STRIKE MAKING MANY RICH

Writing to a member of The Examiner staff a former Peterborough boy now in Calgary mentions the oil strike and resulting fever. He says: "I suppose you have heard that Calgary has the oil fever. It fastened itself upon the city on Thursday last, when the drillers at the Dingman well tapped a vein of ninety per cent. pure gasoline which spouted sixty feet into the air. You will probably remember that the Calgary Herald launched a campaign against the oil exploiters some months ago and was successful in curbing the public appetite for oil stock. The discovery on Thursday of oil of superior quality at the bottom of a 2,600-foot well has practically knocked the props from under them. Talk about money being scarce, it was never more plentiful. Brokers' offices sprang up overnight and the following morning were doing a land-office business. In fact they couldn't take the people's money fast enough. They simply gathered it up in paper baskets where it remained until the office closed. The Dingman shares jumped from $5 a share to $450 a share. You couldn't buy it to-day. The stock was withdrawn. One company was selling stock at ten cents a share before the carrier strike; same stock is now listed at 30c a share. I bought a bunch of the Herron-Elder stock at about 80c, and in two days it had soared to three dollars a share. It required the services of five city police to regulate the crowd's outside the Herron-Elder building on Saturday night. They were lined up two deep and hundreds were turned away. One broker told me he had made $500 on Saturday in commissions alone.

The Herron-Elder people are two practical oil men. They are right in the centre of the oil fields and are down about 1,500 feet. It is hardly likely they will hit the juice until they get down as low as the Dingman people, who are down over 2,500 feet. Cunningham Craig, a geologist of note, told the Dingman people about two weeks ago that they would strike oil before the first of June. They struck it on Thursday last in much larger quantities than were ever dreamed of. It is ninety per cent. pure gasoline. In fact it is too strong to use in its present state. It is on sale in a couple of garages throughout the city. Craig thinks that the Herron-Elder people are better situated than the Dingman outfit. Besides the former are practical oil men, while the latter is a company promoter.

"I saw one girl put up a check for five hundred dollars for stock. There were almost as many women as men in the crowds that surged through the brokers' offices. The whole city is in a fever of excitement. Trains are bringing capitalists from Chicago and other centres daily. Cablegrams have been received from all over the world, including South Africa, asking for confirmation of the news. The Calgary Herald received over one hundred despatches on Saturday last.

"The oil fields are situated about thirty miles from the city. They contemplate piping the oil into the City, where a refinery will be established. At the present time natural gas is being piped to the City, a distance of one hundred and sixty miles, so that a thirty mile stretch of pipe will be an easy matter to deal with.

"I bought a pair of good lots this week for three hundred dollars a-piece. I paid cash and got them cheap. They are inside the City limits and are served with water, light, and other civic conveniences. Houses are built all around the property. I got them from a man who was clean down and out. He is a booze-fighter and a bankrupt, doubtless as a result. He conducted a good business here two years ago. He was hit by the slump and went under, with many others. I have been offered four hundred dollars for one lot already."

THE WOMAN WHO WENT UP ON THE PLANKS—Mrs. Wells wife of the manager of the Dominion Bridge Company, now building The Royal Bank Building in Toronto, which when completed will be the highest building in the British Empire. She went in the derrick car with the last load of steel to be hoisted to the twentieth floor. The crowd on the street actually gasped as they watched the heaving bundle of planks being drawn up the side of the building, but Mrs. Wells, between her husband and the foreman of the construction gang, knew no fear.

Scout News

(By "Scribe."

A meeting of all Peterborough troops was held at the Armouries Friday night and fifty boys were present. Several new patrols were formed and many more boys are expected next Friday.

It is learned on good authority that troops from Norwood, Pontypool, Millbrook, Bethany and others will be present for the inspection, June 1st, by the Duke of Connaught. About 60 boys are expected to turn out in Peterborough alone for this event.

As was announced last week, a Scout hike was held on May 25th to Downer's Corners. According to our last report, about forty participated in the event. The outing was to the very kind hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Paskins. An outing was held last Victoria Day to the same place and a very enjoyable time was spent. The routine of the day was as follows:

1.30 p.m.—Leave Knox Church and parade to Downer's Corners. After the march has been made the boys will have sport, and to close the day a sham battle will take place followed by a bonfire.

Orders For the Week.

Wednesday 7.30—Peterborough troop will meet at the Armouries. All the boys are requested to be present and in full uniform.

Friday, 7.30— Peterborough troop will again meet to put the finishing touches to the ceremonial drills, which are progressing very nicely. There is also a possibility of a third meeting on the following Saturday.

THE STORY—(By "Scribe"

How the Troop Helped.

"I don't see what good these confounded scouts are anyhow," said old Squire Hopkins as he sat down to breakfast with his wife and son. "I have just seen a troup of them going by now with those bits of stick on their shoulders."

His boy, Herbert, said little during the remainder of the meal, but anyone watching him closely could see that he looked disappointed. After Squire Hopkins left his home for the office, Herbert said to his mother: "Mother, I was sorry to hear father talk that way about the scouts at breakfast."

His mother looked up with wonder in her eyes and inquired, "How is that Herbert?"

"Oh, because I wanted to join them, and I am sure, after the way he talked that he will not let me join."

Mrs. Hopkins said no more on the subject, but went on with her work.

That night after Squire Hopkins returned from his office, Herbert managed to sum up courage enough to ask his father if he might join.

"No, Herbert, decidedly no. Tell me, pray, what use are they to the community, and if you can tell me one thing, why you may join."

Herbert was thoughtful for a moment, but could not think of anything that his father would acknowledge a benefit to the community.

After a time the family retired for the night, and little did they then think that something would happen that night which would show them that the scouts were of benefit to the community, for if they had noticed that the wood in the oven of the kitchen stove had caught fire they would not have gone to bed with such easy minds.

About 9.30 p.m. the Hopkins retired and were all sound asleep by 10.30, and about that hour the back of the house was in flames and would likely have burned the family to death had it not been for the timely awaking of Herbert, who immediately awoke the household.

About the same time Mr. Durland, Scout Master of Troop G of St. Matthew's Church, also noticed the fire from the woods where the scouts were camping. He at once ran up to pointed the fire out to him. The Scout Master awakened the camp and it was not long before the whole troop were on the march, armed with staves, buckets and ropes. They soon arrived at the fire and greatly assisted the bucket brigade of Kenton in keeping the crowd back and in checking the flames, and were partly instrumental in saving Squire Hopkins' home from total destruction.

After the fire had been checked the Squire came up to Mr. Darland and said: "Sir, I never before realized of what use scouts were, and I am very thankful indeed for the great service rendered me by them to-night."

About three days later the troop received a cheque for $30 and a new member.

Many Visitors At Stony Lake For Holiday

Peterboro' and Toronto People Spent Victoria Day at Their Summer Homes.

STONY LAKE, May 26—Hundreds of visitors flocked to Stony Lake during the Victoria holiday.

Friday, the steamer "Empress," with Capt. Robinson in charge, met the noon train at Lakefield, and carried a record number of passengers and a large quantity of freight. Toronto people were in the majority.

Those who are not fortunate possessors of summer homes in Stony Lake no doubt often wonder what the attraction is so early in the season, but there are a number of things that may have happened during the winter, such as damage from ice, tempest or fire, destruction by mice or other wild (?) animals, or depredations by intruders or thieves, and they find it an advantage to have all their repairs made before the arrival of their families when the holiday season opens.

Saturday and Sunday were ideal days.

The following are a few of those who came up from Toronto: Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Peck and Mr. W. J. Peck to "Belle Chasse"; Mr. and Mrs. H. Sutherland to "Inglestane"; Mr. McCready to "Blarney Castle"; Dr. Griffin to "Maple Hurst," Messrs. A. B. Mitchell and A. E. Klippert to "Sunnyside"; Mr. and Mrs. Oxley, Mr. James Aikens, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. East and Dr. East, to "Indian Isle"; Mr. and Mrs. S. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Zarbaux and son, to "Britannia"; Mr. and Mrs. Addison to "Claudeboye"; Mr. and Mrs. Rathbone, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Acton to "Twasentha," Prof. Woodcock to "Kilmsa," Prof. and Mrs. Stuart, and the following from Peterborough: Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Knapman, Master Jack, Miss Ruth and Miss Irene to "Forest Home." Mr. and Mrs. J. Nugent to "Meedawawbeek"; Mrs. McWhinnie, Miss Goodfellow, and Mrs. Booth, to "Idleside"; Messrs. R. J. Winch and Dawson Kennedy to "Yarrow Brae"; High County Constable George Cochrane, Miss Cochrane and Mr. Wm. Cochrane to "Crown Point"; Mr. Joseph Yelland and son, Mrs. Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Beal, Miss Amy and Master "Bob" to "Seldom Inn"; Mr. Anderson to Big Island, having come from Sulphide on his motor cycle; Mr. Hal. Crawe and his friend, Gordon McFarlane, to "Gladstken"; Messrs. Gerson Graham and Donald Cameron, Messrs. Douglas and Murray Carlisle, to "Upsidedown"; Police Magistrate Dumble and B. F. Ackerman to "Balleyraggit"; Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Gibson, Miss Mary Gibson, Mrs. Starr and Miss Jessie Starr, and Miss Moffatt.

Mr. John Rozel, Miss Ray of Lakefield to "Raybourn"; Mr. Wesley Sherin and family, Mr. Levi Payne, and family, Mr. J. Roxborough; Mrs. E. Wyley Grier and family, and Miss Wood to "Woodonga."

Mr. P. G. Might of Toronto spent the holiday at "Idleside."

Mr. H. W. Stock has opened Juniper Island store for the season.

"Glenwood," Boschink, will be in charge of Mr. Love.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Carey spent the day at "Poitree."

Controller J. D. McCarthy of Toronto, and family, motored from Toronto to McCracken's Landing and are spending the week at "Emerald Isle."

Dr. Zimmerman, Mr. George Zimmerman, Mr. Edwards and son, and Mr. Blackmore of Toronto motored to Kawartha Park.

Daughters of the Empire Place Flags On Soldiers' Graves

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—Permit me to express through your columns a little word of praise for the beautiful custom of the Daughters of the Empire in placing a Union Jack on the graves of departed soldiers. I understand that this mark of respect is performed every year on May 24th, and I hope it will be permanent. If this were the only purpose of the existance of the Daughters of the Empire as an organisation it alone would be most laudable and sufficient. In both the Little Lake and St. Peter's Cemeteries on Sunday I noticed the Union Jacks placed here and there on graves, and the appropriateness of the act and the sentiment behind it impressed me deeply. Some of the graves seemed to be unmarked by stones, and the majority of the mounds mark the last resting place of men who saw active service for the Empire. It is also true that the most of them went unsung and unhonoured to their graves. It was not until the earth had been heaped over them and the sods became compact that they were recognized. Nameless now, they are recognized, but it is not too late. In many cases their relatives are scattered broadcast, and the graves but rarely visited. Is it any wonder then that their remembrance by the Daughters of the Empire is deeply appreciated by

A DESCENDANT OF ONE OF THEM.

CONFLAGRATION WAS NARROWLY AVERTED

Yesterday was not exactly a holiday for the fireb rigade. They were called upon to answer two alarms, but in neither case were they called upon to exert themselves to put out the blaze.

At about five o'clock yesterday afternoon, they were called to M. J. Hickey's tailoring establishment at 484 George street. Mr. Hickey had been using the electric iron early in the afternoon, but deserted his store for the ball game about three o'clock. In the rush to Riverside he forgot to disconnect the iron, which became very hot. The iron burned through the ironing board, through the table, and fell to the river, and had started operations there, when the smoke was noticed by a local street car conductor. He rang in an alarm but in the meantime Mr. Hickey returned and put out the fire with a pail of water. There was little or no damage done except to the ironing board and the table.

The other run was at 7:20 last evening when the brigade was called to a house across from the Market Square on Water street. The insulation had burned off the electric wires, and filled the house with smoke. There was no fire however. So the Victoria Day celebration passed in this city without a fire.

should be a promptness and briskness in everything, and an erectness of carriage. The military training was conducive to strong, robust, self-respecting characters.

If the iron in the militia did not appeal to all it should appeal to those with a soldierly spirit. Iron could not sharpen soft substances, but only iron. So we count upon the iron in the Canadian Militia. If softness and slackness had no place in military life, it had no place in religion. "How much or how little religion you have," said the speaker, "let it be of the duty-loving and the duty-doing kind. Do not shrink from religion because of the fire in it. Be honest, clean, pure and temperate. Do not smirch the uniform by stooping to low, dishonourable language. The King's language was for the King's men. Many of the men before him had not even seen the King, yet their allegiance was just as true. Another King who you have not and cannot see, calls for your loyal, stead fast allegiance."

The service included several appropriate hymns and responsive readings, and prayers, in which the soldiers participated with feeling. After the service the men of both regiments formed up outside the Church and marched back to Central Park.

After the return from Church the remainder of the day was at the disposal of the men. Several citizens were heard to remark on the smart and clean appearance the men presented on the Church parade. There was one fact in connection with the parade that might be commented upon and probaby was not noticed by the majority of City people, namely the Belleville Regiment marched in fours, while the local Regiment marched in two's.

It may be only a difference of opinion, but topical conversation was in favour of the first mentioned order, that of fours. During the remainder of Sunday the officers and men of the regiments were busy getting acquainted with each other. On Sunday afternoon the visiting officers were taken for an automobile ride to Chemong, in cars lent by local owners, and expressed themselves as highly delighted with the trip.

In the Sergeants' mess the men were enjoying themselves to the fullest extent. The bar had been thrown open, and the men took the opportunity offered to indulge in a little libation. The band of the 15th Regiment delighted a large concourse of citizens who had gathered in Central Park on Sunday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, by rendering a selected musical programme and instrumental solos. The work of the Band, though perhaps not of such high standard as that of the 57th Band, was fully appreciated. They are fully equipped for concert work and, with practice, will be able to present a concert superior in every detail. In the evening, after Church hour, the 57th Band gave a concert in Victoria Park, and it could be estimated without exaggeration that at least two thousand people listened to the selections that were given. The programme was a varied one and filled the demands of the public fully.

The Officers' Reception.

In the evening, following the band concert, a reception was held by the officers of the Garrison, to which many of the more prominent citizens were invited.

The guests were received in the Officers' quarters of the Armouries by Col. and Mrs. Clegg; Col. and Mrs. Young; Major and Mrs. Mills, etc., etc. A very elegant and recherche affair it was, dainty refreshments, served in Hoopers' usual good style, being much appreciated by the considerable number of guests present. Thanks to the hospitality of the hosts a very pleasurable and rational Sunday evening was passed; the numerous visitors expressing themselves as highly delighted with the function.

Monday's Proceedings.

Yesterday morning the men awoke to find the weather of a very inclement nature. Rain had come during the night, and about 9 o'clock, the time stated for the parade, a heavy downpour of rain was geenral. This necessarily delayed the march out.

As soon as the sky began to clear however, the men started from the parade ground and came down George to Hunter street, along Hunter to Water Street, down Water to Simcoe Street, along Simcoe Street to George Street, and up George to the parade ground. The men were then dismissed, and some took in the ball game and had the satisfaction of seeing the 7 to 1 defeat, while others had a trip over the Life Lock in the steamer "Stony Lake." The boat had been chartered for this purpose, and made two trips, one at 10.30 a.m., and one at 2.30 p.m. Those who took in this trip were much interested in the massive structure and its working.

Most of the officers showed themselves to be good baseball fans and took in both games.

On Monday evening a banquet was given by the local officers in honour of the visiting officers and was attended by the officers of the Peterborough Garrison.

Messrs. Hooper were the caterers, and did their part in a satisfactory manner.

Several of the visiting officers made short speeches and thanked those of the Garrison for the most enjoyable time they had been given, stating that the local officers knew how to conduct themselves as hosts, splendidly. While they had been here everything pertaining to their comfort and convenience, as well as excellent service, had been allotted to them. They here extended an invitation for the Peterborough Regiment to return the visit, and they would do all in their power to give them, an enjoyable time as they had received at their hands.

In making a reply Col. Clegg thanked them for the courtesy they had shown in extending to the Peterborough Regiment an invitation to visit Belleville, and it was quite possible that they would make their trip to that Town next year. As far as entertaining the guests, they had only done what they thought was right and wanted no thanks for it.

The Regiment was to have paraded at 9.15 to entrain for the return journey, but as was remarked by one Officer, they might as we have said 12 o'clock. As it was, the Regiment paraded at 11 o'clock. After the usual farewells had been exchanged the Regiment marched out, headed by the Band, down George to Hunter, along Hunter to Aylmer, down Aylmer to Charlotte and to the depot. Here the special train was awaiting them and they steamed out about 11.30.

Thus ended the visit of the Belleville Regiment of Argyle Light Infantry, who had helped to a large extent, to bring to the realization of the public of Peterborough the fact that May 25th was observed as Victoria Day.

One Minor Accident.

During the stay of the Belleville Regiment here only one accident occurred to any of its members, but it was of a trivial nature. Private Prince, about four o'clock Sunday afternoon, tripped over a guy rope, and falling to the ground strained a tendon in his shoulder. He was taken to the Nicholls Hospital where he was attended by Dr. Young and Dr. Tennant (Medical Officer of the 15th Regiment). He was released from the hospital yesterday afternoon, and returned with the rest of the regiment to Belleville last night.

The Belleville Officers.

The 15th Regiment, during its visit to this city, was under the following officers: Lt.-Col. L. W. Marsh, Majors D. Barragar, and W. J. Brown, Captains A. P. Allan, S. E. Carmen, W. J. Cook, A. C. McFee, G. H. Holton, W. H. Hudson, O'Flynn and J. W. Wilson; Captain Doyle, Quartermaster; Lieutenants R. D. Ponton, S. R. Burroughs, P. K. Ketcheson, J. S. Barber, H. White and Fennel; Lieut. B. L. Hyman, Paymaster, and Lieut. Tennant, Medical Officer.

Moral Issues Should Govern

All Christian Men in Coming Provincial Election Said the Rev. R. Pogue

Speaking to a good-sized congregation in the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, yesterday morning, the Rev. Robert Pogue made clear the course that should be adopted by all Church members who lived up to what they professed, as far as the coming provincial election is concerned.

His sermon dealt in general with the duty of the Church, in regard to moral interests, and in the course of it he pointed out that there is going to be a great moral issue at stake in the coming provincial eections. He said that all Christian men in the Province of Ontario should place the moral issues involved ahead of their party politics and sentiments.

CONDEMNS PENNY WISE AND POUND FOOLISH POLICY

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—I see by your evening edition of the 22nd inst. that our worthy Mayor and Aldermen have been giving Hail Columbia to several gentlemen who have been called to Peterborough in the past to give expert professional advice with regard to some of the engineering problems which this City had to face, and in particular to Mr. Willis Chipman, of Toronto. To one who knows Mr. Chipman's professional standing and experience as an engineer this seems very ridiculous to say the least.

I was pleased to see that the gentlemen at the head of our only really properly managed municipal service—the waterworks—did not fall readily into the idea of placing all our municipal works under one head—not any—when the Waterworks Department make a move they at once call in the services of an expert, and they are perfectly right in doing so, for they are business men, and they know that it pays in the end.

With all due respect to our worthy Mayor and Aldermen, let me say as an humble citizen of this City for the past fifty years that never during that time has Peterborough needed the service of an expert more than it does at the present day.

Peterborough is at the present time spending money like water on so-called permanent improvements. Wait for a few years until these permanent improvements have fallen in and gone to pieces, then the people of this City will wake up to the fact that they have been fooled again, and all because they followed a pennywise and pound foolish policy.—Yours truly,

CITIZEN.

$49 Paid Into Police Court This Morning

Thirteen informations, including drunks, drunk and disorderlies, and blasklisters, were laid before Acting Magistrate Rush this morning, at Police Court. The sum of $49.00 was collected in fines, and will help considerably to swell the city treasury. Eight men pleaded to a charge of being found drunk in a public place, and were assessed the usual fine of $2.00.

Two men were each fined $5.75 for being drunk and disorderly. Another was mulcted $10.00 for being drunk while on the blacklist, and still another was fined $5.75 for being found drunk in charge of a horse and rig.

In Saturday's issue the name of Jas. Tierney appeared in the Police Court news. The name should have been Kearney.

Children Confirmed at South End Church

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to the First Communion class at the 8:30 a.m. mass on Sunday morning. Afterwards the children promised to abstain from intoxicating liquors for life. A rather large number of adults were confirmed in the afternoon.

Lindsay Man Is Minus $55

(Lindsay Post.)

A well-known Lindsay man, is today mourning the loss of $55.00, which, it is alleged, was extracted from his coat pocket by a man who it is understood was fraternizing with him Thursday afternoon.

According to the story told Acting Chief of Police Short, the two men, in coming with another friend were going along Victoria avenue south when the accused slipped his hand into his coat pocket and extracted a pocketbook containing the money. The complainant, it is understood, had sixty dollars during the afternoon, but spent five dollars. The two men decamped after the theft and one of them bought tickets for Toronto, boarding the train at 6:30 o'clock.

Acting Chief of Police Short got the man's story of the affair and has sent out the description of the accused to Toronto and other points.

Here lies a weary tailor who Committed suicide;
His thread of life grew short and so
He bit it off and died.

FIRST LACROSSE MATCH A WEEK FROM TO-MORROW NIGHT

The first lacrosse game in Peterborough in many years will be played on Wednesday evening next at Riverside Park when the local intermediate team plays Hastings in the intermediate series of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association. It is almost a generation since the game flourished in this city and it has been no easy matter to revive the game. A handful of the old faithful have worked strenuously to put Peterborough back on the lacrosse map, and it is only hoped that the game will appeal to the present generation to some extent as it did to their fathers. Young players are turning out and it is believedf that thel ocal team will give a good account of itself during the season's games.

All the players are asked to be out on time to-night. Fred Kelly, of hockey fame, is an expected addition for to-night, and Harry Morgan has expressed a desire to be back in the fray, but it is not known for a certainty whether he will be able to get away from his business. Several new players have been working out and a number of former local players are showing old time stuff. The Lacrosse Club requires the sympathy and support of those who believe in the game and who feel that it should have a place in the pastime of Peterborough's youth.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKET

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, May 26.—Latest reports promise bullish operations in the general stock market leading active issues. The buying of Westinghouse, B.S. and Utah is very good. Pools are bullish on these specialties, also on the other Copper shares. The character of absorption of Atch., P.P., S.P., S.T. and R.G., is very high grade. Shorts are trying to retire from Can. Pac. The same may be said of the Rumely.

Steel offerings are limited.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

To-night there is going to be a joint meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A. and a delegation of young men who are going to co-operate with them in the financial campaign. Several problems that confront the Y.M.C.A. will be discussed.

The rooms of the Association were open on Sunday and Monday for the men of the visiting regiments. A special correspondence room was fitted up for the benefit of the visitors.

The summer activities of the Y.M.C.A. are in full swing and a busy season is looked for.

The Y tennis courts are in the best of condition and no doubt a large number of tennis enthusiasts will avail themselves of this opportunity to play the game.

PETERBOROUGH CRICKETERS VICTORIOUS

On Saturday afternoon the Peterborough Cricket Club eleven motored to Port Hope, where they played the Trinity College School eleven. The game was close throughout and was a good exhibition, the Peterborough team winning by 16 runs, the score being 79 to 63. The Peterborough seven displayed fine form in their batting, especially Lawrence, who made 22 runs; and Boone, who made 16. The bowling of Ward, Lawrence, and Boone was also very good. For T. C. S., who are coached by an M. C. C. professional, Saunders' bowling and batting was excellent.

The two teams and their scores were as follows:

Peterborough C. C.		Trinity C. S.
Thompson C.		Moore	8
Boone, 16.		Gray	1
Lawrence, 32;		Dibpter	3
Parkin, 0;		Saunders (Capt.)	15
Ward, 3;		McBean	11
Whitehouse (Capt.) 1;		Ketchum	10
Patterson, 0.		Tayor	0
Stewart, 8.		Butt	1
Hall, 8.		MacKindrick	3
Bennett, 3.		Aylen	0
Fielder, 6.		Pepler	3
	79		63

The bowling analysis:

Lawrence took 2 wickets for 18 runs.

Boone took 1 wicket for 17 runs.

Ward took 3 wickets for 7 runs.

Patterson took 2 wickets for 13 runs.

WILLIE SWARTZ IS RELEASED

Outfielder Willie Swartz, the only survivor of the team brought here by Templin, three seasons ago, was released on Saturday by Manager Blount. Swartz was very popular with local fans, a quiet, unassuming player and he will be missed. The needing of more hitting strength in the outfield and the acquisition of Outfielder Welsh led to the dropping of the Reading boy.

BASEBALL.

In the Church Baseball League, the George Street Church team defeated the Y.M.C.A. team at Nicholl's Oval on Saturday afternoon with the score of 15—8.

The batteries were as follow:

For George Street—R. Smith and A. Darling.

For Y.M.C.A.—C. Kinnear and A. Horsfield.

A small crowd watched the game.

LUXURIOUS RAILWAY CAR.

What is conceded to be the finest private railway car in existence has been constructed for President Rea, of the Pennsylvania Railway. Such things as a fireplace, shower baths and special heating plant are features. It is steel mahogany finished, the lining sheet being covered with cellinite for insulation. From an ordinary vestibule a corridor leads past the kitchen and pantry to a dining-room nine feet square, seating eight. Another corridor leads past two state-rooms with two berths each, and two drawing rooms with beds and shower baths, into the parlour 9 feet by 14 feet furnished with fireplace, desk, tables and chairs. The car is 82 feet 3 3-4 in. long, 10 ft., 2 in. wide, and 14 ft. 3 in. high, weighing 75 tons. Mr. Rea designed it himself.

Selfishness—another name for self-love.

REMARKABLE SINKING OF RAILWAY BRIDGE—This cut shows where a bridge on the C.P.R., near Baxter Station, north of Alliston in Ontario, buckled a short time before an express was due. A pier sank in quicksand and let the structure collapse and sink.

WHY NOT FATHER'S DAY?

There is a Mother's Day, but what's the matter with father? says Roy L. McCardell.

May 12 is the day for Maw, and everybody sported a carnation in her honour, but where does Paw come in?

Nay, where does Pater get off?

Let's stand up for father. He's been given the social chill long enough. Mother gets all the floral tributes, song, story and heart throb drama has always played to the gallery and mother.

Let's do something for dad. Let's get up a day for him, compose songs in his honour.

Look at all the vocal tributes mother has had along these lines for years and years: "Take This Letter to My Mother," "Stick to Your Mother, Tom," "My Mother Was a Lady," "Break the News to Mother" and "Oh, Mother, Mother, Pin a Rose on Me."

Mother, evidently, has pinned so many roses on so many me's that now they are going to pin carnations on mother.

Oh, yes, they do sing songs about father. But, listen, even the one that asks "What's the Matter with Father?" only says he's all right because he's paying the freight. That's all father gets in balladry, even when he gets the best of it. But generally the songs about one's male parent run along the lines of "Everybody Works But Father."

Does any sentimental basso ever bellow "Rock Me to Sleep, Father, Rock Me to Sleep?" Nary one.

Father would jolly well run out and get a dornick and come back in and rock the singer to sleep if he did. Father isn't used to being petted and praised.

Even in recitations — and only when electrocution as capital punishment came in did elocution go out—well, even in "speaking pieces" did any tot, "showing off," ever lisp before the admiring gathering of friends, parents and relatives:

"Who ran and caught me when I fell,
And kissed the hurt to make it well?
My popper?"

No, it can't be done!

But we can agitate and legislate for a Fathers' Day or a Father's Day, let the apostrophes, and there'll be plenty of 'em, fall where they may.

Yes, a Father's Day!

The worm and the long lane have turned. The early bird is a wise child! A truce to eugenics and the single standard of ancestor worship! Father must and shall have his day! He shall have several of them.

Think of father toiling all week at the caviare factory, working on the caviare tower and getting highly commended by the foreman for making more AI perfectly round caviare than any other caviare worker on the job.

That's all right on the works. Father may be the whole works there, but what does he amount to in the home?

He can't sit in the parlour because Tidy's dude has dropped in. They drive him out of the kitchen because the cop that calls on the cook thinks father in a reformer. If father goes out to the saloon and plays Kelly pool, mother make his coffee unpalatable till father thinks he has liver trouble because she puts a tasteless remedy in it every morning.

What matters it if father is aces abroad if he's only a deuce at home?

No, father must have a day, a day of his very own; not because he is the deftest caviare moulder on the sturgeon-egg shot towers or not because he may be a strong union noodle alphabet compositor, but because he is what he is—a parent, a papa.

Let father have his day; let father have his flower. Let father's flower be the night blooming kale, most beautiful and useful of all perennials.

Let it not be Labour Day; let it not be April 1. Let Father's Day fall as it may, but let it come on payday.

Friends of the old man rally round. Let mother have her 11th of May. But a little later on give the old man a show.

MAGNESIA USEFUL IN CLEANSING.

A small square block of magnesia, costing but a few cents, is most useful. Fine lace that cannot or ought not to be washed that cannot or ought rubbing a good quantity of magnesia on it, then laying it away for a while in blue tissue paper. If it is much soiled, keep it in the paper for a week or more, then shake out the magnesia, and the lace will be soft and clean, and none of its beauty marred.

After each wearing of white silk gloves, which soon lose their silkiness by washing, rub them with the block of magnesia, and they will not need washing for a long time.

White canvas shoes can be kept clean in the same way. Whenever the shoes are worn, wipe them off with a clean cloth, then apply the magnesia before putting them away. The next time they are to be worn dust off the magnesia, and they will be fresh and clean. Little white crochet collar pins can be kept clean the same way.

The soiled collar of an unwashable silk waist may be much freshened by applying magnesia over night, and the longer it remains on it the better the result.

After a trial, the practice of using magnesia on all unwashable neck furnishings, lace yokes, etc., recommends itself, but it is better not to let the article get too soiled; rather keep it clean by frequent application. As there is nothing about magnesia to injure any fabric, it may be used freely to advantage.

"Yep. Place to hide a will, eh?"

"No! I just want to have a place where I can keep a few clothes. My wife's things occupy all the visible space."

THE LADIES' MORNING MUSICAL

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—In your "Review of the Musical Season" in your issue of Saturday you say "the work and result of the Morning Musical is an unknown quantity to the general public, though it may seem impertinent to say so."

We do not quarrel with your remark, but at the desire of the President of the Society, Mrs. R. E. Wood, will content ourselves with reminding you that the Club was a private one and limited to twenty-five in number, entirely owing to the fact that we did not feel justified in incurring the expense of hiring a hall, piano, etc., until we saw if the interest evinced in this new musical venture was sufficient to justify us in launching out to greater and more ambitious efforts, and also that as our fortnightly meetings were held in the homes of the members it was not possible to accomodate more than the original twenty-five members. The object of the Ladies' Musical is entirely an educative one and in this respect it can be honestly said, it has not failed.

During the season the works of the great masters, such as Beethoven, Mozart, Chopin, Schubert, Mendelsohn, Liszt and Wagner have been studied and demonstrated, also more modern composers, such as Elgar, Macdowall, Nevin, and Chaminade. In view of the fact that a large number of ladies interested in the musical progress of our City have expressed a desire to join the Society, proposals and plans are now under consideration with the object of increasing the membership and enlarging the [illegible] of the Society.

Negotiations are now being carried on to obtain a suitable hall, etc., and it is also probable that in future associate, as well as active, members will be admitted to membership, as is done in other cities where ladies' musicals are in existence; it is also intended to hold the meetings either in the afternoons or evenings, thus making it easier for ladies to attend.

The Society also hopes to be able to occasionaly bring artists to the City for the purpose of demonstrating any particular branch of musical art it may happen to be studying at the time.

It is proposed next season to start from the very foundation and study the "History of Music" from its earliest and most primitive state and thus endeavour to instil within all our members a knowledge and a reason for the faith that is in them.

The Society have greatly appreciated the courtesy of the Library Board, through Mr. Dale Posse, in securing for them so many Text Books, Manuals, Dictionary, etc., which have proved of so much service to the members.

Thanking you for inserting this little explanation for the benefit of the general public", I am

Yours faithfully,

Annie Forbes Allan,
Vice-President.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

A Grand Rally In The Ninth Was The Feature Of The Afternoon Battle

Petes Scored Four Runs With Two Out and Although They Were Eventually Beaten Out The Crowd Went Home Happy--Homesters Won Morning Game 7 to 1 Thanks to Belting's Effective Pitching and Misplays of the Yankees.

The big holiday crowd at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon surely got a run for its money, and although the Petes were finally beaten out 7 to 6 after the most exciting game of the season, the fans were satisfied. It was a peculiar game. In the early stages, thanks to Sterling's lack of control, the Sailors set up a four run lead. The Petes battled two of them back, but the invaders came on and landed two more, and when the Petes went to bat in the ninth they were on the short end of a 6-2 score. Wilcox opened the innings with a Texas Leaguer back of second, but when Fox and Gorman grounded out it looked all oved.. "It's never too late" shouted Ken Tracey from the coaching line, and his words were verified a few seconds later. Kelly was passed and Manager Blount sent Schettler to bat for Sterling. With two strikes on him Louie came through with a double to left, scoring Wilcox and the crowd jumped to its feet. Blount was the next hitter, and when the little manager cracked a two-bagger over third base scoring Kelly and Schettler the crowd went wild. Joe-Byrne followed with a slashing single and Blount dusted home with the run that tied the score. Byrne promptly stole second. Welsh made a valiant attempt to end the game then, but his smash went right at Behan, and the innings was over.

With the score tied Schettler went to the mound for the tenth. Whether or not he was warmed up properly his control was bad and Harris drew a walk. A sacrifice moved him to second and when Wiltse doubled to right, Harris came home and the game was virtually over, although Wilcox's muff of Gygli's fly scored another run before the side was retired. Brown worked the last innings for Erie and the Petes went out in order.

It was a fine game for the crowd, with considerable hitting and some fine fielding plays on both sides.

Sterling was Manager Blount's selection. The big fellow had trouble in locating the plate and was in the hole all day through his wildness. Six Sailors walked and four of the dead heads afterward scored, so that his generosity was both ill-timed and costly. He was not hit hard, but the safeties were mingled with free passes and gave the visitors an early lead. Fitzpatrick worked for the Yanks and although he was by no means a mystery he got by nicely until the ninth when the Petes fell on him for four solid hits and the same number of runs.

Manager Curly Blount, who has been in a hitting slump since the Erie series, had a great afternoon, featuring his work with a spectacular steal of home for the Petes' first run. He opened the fourth with a single to second and went to third on two infield outs. With King at the bat, Blount got a nice start, and as Fitzpatrick commenced his wind up sprinted for the plate ,making it easily. He slid across the rubber before McNeal had a chance to tag him. It was a fine play and the stand gave Curly an ovation. Blount had two clean hits, driving in a pair of runs in the ninth with a neat double over third.

There were other fireworks in addition to the Petes' rally in the ninth and Blount's steal. Chief among them was some beautiful catches by Jack Dawson, centre fielder for the Yanks. On one of these a drive he misjudged, he made a leaping catch, spearing the ball in sensational style.

There was no score in the opening stanza, although Byrne and Welsh both singled. The former was out stealing and Welsh was nipped off first in the midst of a day dream.

Erie started the trouble in the second. Harris opened with a triple over Welsh's head and scored when Sterling threw low to first on Behan's roller, Behan going to second. Wiltse drew a pass. McNeal singled over third, scoring Behan and took second on the throw to third. Fitzpatrick fanned.. Dawson singled over second scoring Wiltse, but Blount nipped McNeal at the plate when he tried to score on the same play. Blount's running catch of Smith's drive ended the innings.

Sterling's wildness got him in bad in the third. He walked Gygli the first man up and after Schaeffer had singled, Harris also drew a pass, filling the bases. Behan fanned, but Wiltse scored Gygli with a sacrifice fly to Wilcox. McNeal flied to Blount, retiring the side.

The Petes broke the ice in the fourth. Blount singled over second and moved over to third on Byrne and Welsh's infield outs. He then stole home cleanly and got an ovation from the crowd. King was passed, but Wilcox grounded to Wiltse.

The Petes closed the gap again in the fifth. Fox lead off with a single through short. Gorman flied to Dawson, but Miller pasted a beautiful double to left centre, scoring Fox. A wild pitch moved Miller to third, but Sterling grounded out and Blount flied to Schaeffer.

The Yankees got one back in the sixth. Wiltse drew a walk. McNeal bunted a foul fly to Miller. Fitzpatrick grounded to Fox, Wiltse going to second. Dawson's single scored Wiltse. Dawson then stole second, but died there when Smith flied to Blount.

The Petes had a royal chance in the seventh. With one gone Fox was passed and Gorman doubled to left. Miller, however, died on a fly to Smith and Sterling grounded to Fitzpatrick.

Another complimentary gave Erie a run in the eighth. Behan was passed, moved up on Wiltse's sacrifice and scored on McNeal's single through short. Fitz sacrificed and Dawson was safe on Gorman's fumble. McNeal died at the plate on an attempted double steal. Miller had his hand spiked in the play and had to retire, Kelly replacing him.

The Petes failed to score in their half and the Sailors were blanked in the first of the ninth.

It was 6 to 2 against the homesters when they went to bat in the ninth. Wilcox opened with a Texas Leaguer to centre, but Fox grounded to Gygli and Gorman to Behan and the chances looked slim. Kelly drew a walk and Schettler batting for Sterling doubled to left, scoring Wilcox. Blount followed with a double over third, Kelly and Schettler scoring. When Byrne singled through short scoring Blount with the tying run the crowd went wild. Byrne stole second, but Welsh ended the rally by grounding to Behan.

Back came the Sailors in the tenth with the runs that won the game. Schettler could not reache the plate for Harris and the right fielder walked. Behan moved him to second with a neat bunt. Wiltse cracked a double along the right field foul line scoring Harris and taking third on the throw to the plate. McNeal hit to Schettler and Wiltse was out at the plate Dunn batted for Fitzpatrick and walked. Dawson drove one to right which Wilson dropped, and McNeal scored. Welsh made a pretty catch of Smith's fly to left to end the innings. The Petes went out in order in their half with Brown pitching.

Easy Win in the Morning.

In spite of the drizzling rain, there were over 1,000 fans present when the morning game started, half an hour late on account of the weather. The before dinner battle was an easy victory for the Petes, thanks to Belting's effective pitching, Erie's misplays and some timely hitting. Catcher Mully Miller leading in this regard with three clean singles in as many trips to the plate. Belting only allowed the visitors six hits and no two came in any one innings. He had nice control and speed and was never in danger after the first innings when Erie scored their only counter. Morris, the Buffalo International recruit, who twriled for Erie, was not hit hard, but the Petes' hits were mixed with the bad fielding of the Yankees and that helped a lot. The Smith gang were guilty of some bad fielding, six errors being charged against them, and they nearly all counted in the run-getting.

The Petes fielded snappily, Welsh shining with a couple of pretty catches.

Erie scored their only counter in the first innings, Dawson first up was passed. Harris fanned after two vain attempts to sacrifice. Gygli flied out, but Schaeffer drove a double down the first base line taking third on the relay throw to the plate. Dawson scored on the play.

Peterborough started in the third. Gorman was safe on Dunn's wide throw to first. Miller singled solidly to centre, sending Gorman to third. Belting's sacrifice fly to Schaeffer scored Gorman and moved Miller to second. Blount missed three, but Dunn let the third one get away from him and the runner went to second. Miller reaching third. He scored a moment later on Byrne's sacrifice fly to left. Welsh singled through short, Blount scoring from second. King ended the fun with a fly to Schaeffer.

In the fifth Miller led off with a clean single over second, but Belting hit into a double play. Blount was passed, stole second and went to third on Dunn's poor throw. Byrne chased him home with a pretty double to left centre.

The seventh was another carnival for the Petes. Gorman got on when Smith muffed his pop fly. Gorman stole second and scored on Miller's third single. Belting laid down a bunt for a sacrifice but Wiltse threw to the stand the runners reaching second and third. Blount fanned. Byrne bunted and on Morris' bad throw to the plate both Miller and Melting scored. Welsh cracked a liner which Dawson nailed, and King grounded to Wiltse.

There was no further scoring.

LOST ON SATURDAY.

LONDON, May 23—London made it seven in a row to-day by cleaning up the series with Peterborough. The tally was tied in the ninth round, but Linneborn singled, stole second and scored on Long's rap, coming through with the winning run. The score was 2 to 1.

Beebe was in strong shape throughout the game, while Schettler was also effective, save in the fifth and ninth innings when hits were bunched off his delivery.

The game, which was snappily played, was witnessed by a large crowd. The score:

Hard Luck For The Petes

The Petes are having more than their share of hard luck. Yesterday Muly Miller, who was just rounding into form, and who had had four hits in six times up, had his hand spiked in the ninth innings, one finger being badly torn and he will be out of the game for a week at least. Pitcher Stan Cresswell is ill and will be out for ten days or two weeks. Bob Sterling has a poisoned heel, and King was spiked at London and had a finger badly hurt yesterday, although the injury will not keep him out of the game.

MR. GEORGE O'NEILL WAS THE GUEST OF HONOUR

Genial Owner of the Erie Club Banqueted by Local Fans Who Were Entertained by Him in Erie

ENJOYABLE FUNCTION

Mr. George O'Neill, of London, the genial owner of the Erie Baseball Club, was in the city yesterday for the holiday games, and the party of fans who journeyed to Erie for the opening day game, took advantage of the opportunity to show Mr. O'Neill how much they appreciated his hospitality on that occasion. It will be remembered that the popular owner of the Yankees entertained the Canadian visitors most lavishly, the climax being a big banquet.

Last evening Mr. O'Neill was the guest of thel ocal fans at a most enjoyable banquet in the White House. The tables were artistically decorated and a splendid repast was served by Mine Host Graham. About fifteen were in attendance with Mayor Buller and Mr. W. H. Denham presiding.

During the speeches that followed the local speakers expressed their appreciation of the treatment Mr. O'Neill had accorded them in Erie. It was the opinion of the speakers that Erie was fortunate in having such a man as Mr. O'Neill at the head of its baseball intereats, a man who was a true sport in every sense of the word. It was pointed out that Mr. O'Neill stood very high in the list of Canadian League magnates.

The banquet was a great success.

Local Boys Won At Lindsay

Walter Flowers and Charlie Thorpe in Events at Victoria Day Sports

Two local boys figured prominently in carrying off prizes in the Victoria Day sports at Lindsay, run under the auspices of the I. O. F. Charlie Thorpe was handicapped in the running events by the heavy condition of the track, the downpour of rain during the morning rendering the track into anything but fit condition for making fast time. The local boy got second in the mile and half-mile events, Humphries of the West End Y. M. C. A. winning out by about a yard.

Walter Flowers won the one hundred yard dash, the standing high-jump, the running high jump, and got second in the hop-step-and-jump.

The baseball tournament was won by the Olympiads of Lindsay. Five innings were played to each round. In the first round the Peterborough bankers were defeated by the Lindsay nine—4 to 2. In the second, Beaverton was beaten by the Olympiads, the latter aggregation winning the final round.

NOTES OF THE HOLIDAY GAMES

The rally in the ninth sent the crowd home happy.

Manager Blount hit his stride yesterday. Two hits, two runs, a steal of home and several sparkling fielding plays made a fine afternoon's work.

The attendance yesterday was very gratifying to the local management. With rain falling at the advertised hour of the morning game there were 1000 fans on hand, and in the afternoon there were nearly three times that many. At that the heavy showers during the noon hour made many people think the game would be off.

The infield at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon was in good shape, considering the heavy showers. Gasoline was burned over the base paths, drying them up considerably.

McNeal got a good reception from the crowd yesterday when he went in to catch the afternoon game.

Erie play here again to-day and tomorrow, the games being called at 3.45 p.m. Tomorrow's game will be the last appearance of the Petes until Monday, June 8th. The locals play London, Toronto and Ottawa before returning home.

TENNIS

To-day the tennis courts at the Golf Links will open for the season. The courts are in good shape and no doubt a large number of members will be playing tennis again this year.

WALTER JOHNSTON

The famous pitcher, who with Catcher Ainsmith and Outfielder Clyde Milan, of the Washington Americans has been reported to have signed Federal League contracts. This will, if confirmed, be a bad blow for the Washington team, as they credit Johnston's pitching for the place they hold in the league.

Erie Players Are Wrathy

The Erie Club from Manager Geo. Smith down are incensed over the treatment they received from Umpire Evans in Ottawa. They say that that official's work was bad all through, but the climax came on Saturday, when with two on the bases and none out MceNal cracked a liner to centre. Shaughnessay came in and dove for the ball. The Yankees claim he dropped it and fell on the ball, but when he got to his feet he claimed a catch and Evans decided in his favour, the result being a triple play. The assault on the official by McNeal followed and the catcher and Manager Smith were both banished. President Fitzgerald first suspended both men, buty esterday changed his decision, raised the suspension and fined McNeal $75 and Smith $50. The suspension was raised in time to let Smith get into yesterday's games.

The "Maple Leaf" Band Discourses Sweet Music.

There are many things—like the modest violet, "born to blush unseen"—or unheard. How few people appreciate the fact that twice, weekly an Alfresco Concert, of good quality, is given outside the Royal Theatre by the Maple Leaf Band, the members of which, under the able conductorship of Mr. A. Armitage, have been brought to a high pitch of musical attainment, and this is all free gratis and for nothing! It may not be generally known that this Band is open for engagements for picnics, moonlight excursions, garden parties, and entertainments of all kinds, by arranging with the Conductor at 196 King Street.

SCRUTON—HOWELL.
On Monday evening, May 25th, at five o'clock, the marriage of Miss Olive Howell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Howell, Reid Street, Peterborough, to Mr. James F. Scruton, of Kingston, was quietly solemnised at St. Andrew's Manse by the Rev. James Rollins, B.A.

The bride, who is soprano soloist of St. Andrew's Church, and the groom, special representative of H. J. Heinz Co., Pittsburg, are both extremely popular young people, and their many friends will be sorry to see them leave Peterborough.

They anticipate taking up residence in Toronto shortly, after a honeymoon trip to Point An Baril and Muskoka points.

OBITUARY

ANDREW FAWCETT.
The death occurred Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock of a very old and respected citizen of Peterborough, in the person of Mr. Andrew Fawcett, who passed away in the Nicholls' Hospital after a week's illness.

The late Andrew Fawcett was 77 years of age and was born in Ireland. A number of years ago he came to Ashburnham, where he settled and has since resided. During his many years' residence in this City he had won the love and esteem of all who came in contact with him and a very large number of friends will be sorry to learn of his death. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Gill of Smith Township.

The funeral was held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the residence of his niece, Mrs. Whatley, 670 Harvey Street, to the Little Lake Cemetery. The Rev. F. J. Sawers, Rector of St. Luke's Church, of which the deceased was a faithful member, conducted the funeral services.

SAMUEL ROBERTS PRICE.
The death occurred of Samuel Roberts Price on Sunday evening. Mr. Price has been afflicted with rheumatism for some time and during the last two years it assumed an acute form, finally reaching his heart. He came to this country with a number of other young gentlemen to learn farming in the year 1868. He served for a number of years in the old 57th Battalion in No. 2 Company. He was an active member of the Peterborough Cricket Club, about the year

1875 and was a member of Corinthian Lodge in the Masonic Order. He was the son of the Rev. William Price, Rector of Waterford, Ireland, and was also a cousin of Lord Roberts. In the year 1875 he married Amelia, daughter of Lt.-Col. Robert D. Rogers.

He leaves to mourn his loss his widow and two sons and three daughters. He was of a jovial disposition, and beloved by all who knew him.

MRS. CLARA J. HAYES.
The death occurred on Saturday evening of Clara J. Hayes widow of Edward J. Hayes at her residence, 828 Water Street. The deceased had been ill for some time, and her death was not altogether unexpected.

She leaves to mourn her loss six sons and three daughters, namely, Edward, Alexander, and Bert of Toronto, George, Frank, and Nelson of this city, and Mrs. N. O'Toole, Douro, and Ethel and Pearl residing at home.

Her cheerful disposition and exemplary life endeared her to all her acquaintances, who will deeply regret her demise.

The funeral took place this morning at nine o'clock from the family residence to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Peter's Cemetery. The pallbearers were her six sons. Rev. Father Meagher sung the Requiem High Mass. Rev. Father Cote officiated at the grave.

WORTH REMEMBERING

To remove the stains from fireproof dishes which have become brown from baking, soak them in strong borax and water.

The work of cleaning white paint should be divided between two people, one doing the washing and the other the polishing. The washing should be done with soap suds and warm water and a piece of flannel, the drying with a piece of old linen, and the polishing should be done immediately with a soft duster.

A cloth wet with camphor will remove white spots from furniture.

Brush fringe on towels and tablecloths with a whisk broom before ironing them and it will be light and fluffy.

To steam velvet, instead of using a flatiron, try your soapstone and see how much better and smoother the velvet wil be.

To prevent anything sticking to the saucepan when boiling or the trouble stirring, put a marble in the saucepan.

Paste labels on the inside of glass jars used to hold food supplies, such as rice, tapioca, spices etc. Thus labelled, the jar can be washed without soiling the label or pulling it off.

To make a furniture polish, put in a small vial or bottle the following ingredients: Two tablespoons sweet oil, one tablespoon vinegar, one-half tablespoon turpentine. Shake before using, and apply with a piece of flannel, after which rub a little with a dry flannel. Surface should be free from dust before aplication.

WHITE LINEN OR CREPE.

Last Fashion Word from Paris — Skirts are Assuming Redingote Form.

PARIS, May 23—Gowns in white linen, or white crepe are unfolding in dazzing brilliance like royal lilies, now that the glorious days of sunshine and calm are here. It is evident that they are to be worn much more than in recent years. With them is usually a black belt, sometimes a black boero. Not infrequently the garniture of the robe is black passementerie. Small ornamentations even to buttons, display it in profusion.

The latest novelty in the form of a complete costume is one composed of striped crepon, with the stripes running horisontally in the upper skirt and vertically in the main skirt and corsage. There is a white linen vest with long sleeves, the ends of which are buttoned and flounced. A black velvet ribbon is tied in front, giving the impression of a belt. The tricorne hat is partly covered with black silk and adorned with white aigrettes.

Many skirts are now assuming what is termed the "redingote" form —open in front to a point about midway between the ground and the waist line.

The one-piece gown being now much worn, it goes without saying that the blouse, or shirtwaist, has become an object of coquetry, rather than an essential, as it was a few years ago. The varied styles of the blouse at present are a long departure from those that we have hitherto known. Embroidery and floral designs and a blending of white tissues, plain or polka-dotted, are conspicuous characteristics.

Mediators at Niagara in Agreement on Many Points.

NEW GOVERNMENT PLANNED

Reliable Information Is to the Effect That the Retirement of the Present Mexican Regime Has Been Discussed and Personnel of a New Government Is Now Being Talked Over.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., May 27.—Substantial agreement on many of the main points involved in the mediation conference has been reached by the American and Mexican delegates.

The discussion yesterday covered the actual terms and details of many of the things deemed necessary to the pacification of Mexico. The mediators and the opposing delegates were decidedly optimistic. An early agreement is now looked for.

The situation was summed up in the following by Justice Lamar upon the authority of the mediators:

"We have begun to discuss the actual terms and details of a plan of pacification. On a number of them we find ourselves in substantial agreement. Others are still under discussion, and as to them there has been no disagreement. It will, of course, be improper for us to specify the particular points we have discussed or those upon which we have agreed, or those we will consider further."

From the mediators themselves it was learned later in the day that some vital points had been discussed in to-day's developments. These are understood to include the manner in which the present regime in Mexico City would give way to a new provisional government.

That Gen. Huerta had given his consent to the program thus far outlined here was one of the reports, from reliable sources, upon which some of the optimism displayed by all parties to the conference was believed to be based.

The Mexican delegates as well as the Americans are anxious that the transition in Mexico City shall be smooth and unattended by any disturbances. So they are approaching the question of personnel for the new government with extraordinary care and a consciousness of the sensibilities of the Mexican people.

TAKING THE TROUBLE.

Albania's Difficulties Caused by Parsimony of Natives.

ROME, May 27.—One of the chief reasons for the trouble in Albania is the unwillingness of the inhabitants of that country to pay taxes, according to the Marquis di San Giuliano, Italian Foreign Minister, in answering questions in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday. He described the action taken by the Italian Minister and the sailors of the Italian fleet for the protection of Prince William, ruler of Albania, and for the re-establishment of order in Durazzo.

The Foreign Minister emphasized the identity of Italy's views on the subject with those of Austria. Both countries, he said, were aiming to enforce the decision of the conference of London regarding the independence of Albania.

The Marquis di San Giuliano said that Italy and Austria would do everything in their power to prevent armed intervention in Albania and they were desirous of withdrawing the detachments landed from the warships at Durazzo.

She is so modest and so good,
So earnest and so dutiful.
But I'd not win her if I could,

Would Take Option

Dr. Pugsley to Move For Right to Purchase the C.N.R.

AT LOWER CAPITALIZATION

He Proposes To Cut Down the Capital to $20,000,000 and Take a Five-Year Option on the Property in Order to Lessen the Risk to the Country — Meighen's Statement Challenged.

OTTAWA, May 27. — The greater part of yesterday's session of the Commons was spent in committee considering the C.N.R. bond guarantee resolution, clause by clause.

Mr. Pugsley began yesterday by questioning the accuracy of a statement made by Solicitor-General Meighen last Thursday. Mr. Meighen, according to Mr. Pugsley, had stated that all the British Columbia town sites were included in the holdings of the C.N.R. Townsites Company. He read from the trust deed of 1912 to prove that only Port Mann was included. He also read from the same trust deed to show that Mackenzie and Mann might withdraw any farm land in operations of the trust deed upon payment of $15 per acre and any urban property upon paying $150 per acre.

Mr. Meighen replied that all the British Columbia townsites were included. He said it could make no difference, so far as the Government was concerned, whether any particular remained subject to the trust deed or went into the possession of Mackenzie, Mann & Co., Limited. The firm of Mackenzie, Mann & Co. was a party to the contract with the Government.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier objected that the Government was taking no mortgages upon the St. Catharines and Niagara Railway.

Mr. Meighen replied that this was true in one sense, but said the St. Catharines & Niagara Railway was owned by the Canadian Northern Ontario. The Government would get a lien upon it under the provisions of the contract, which created a mortgage upon the Canadian Northern Ontario to the extent that any part of the $45,000,000 was expended in construction work upon the C.N.R.

Mr. E. M. Macdonald desired to know whether the Government had requested Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann to pledge their personal estates as security for the proposed Government guarantee. He claimed that in 1914, when the C.P.R. applied for a loan of $30,000,0000, the promoters of that enterprise had pledged their own property as collateral security. This statement the Prime Minister disputed. No such authority, he said, had been granted by the Government of Sir John Macdonald. A member of the Laurier Government had said in 1909 that the C.P.R. had in 1884 no security to offer.

Mr. Carvell said nothing was to be gained by discussing ancient history. He would ask the Government whether it had called upon Mackenzie and Mann to put up any security, and whether it intended to so call upon them.

Mr. Borden: "They will certainly be called upon if other adequate security is lacking."

Mr. Pugsley asked about the Northern Construction Co., in which he understood relatives of both Sir William and Sir Donald figured prominently.

Mr. Bristol (Centre Toronto): "There is an affidavit on file to the contrary."

This statement was sharply challenged and after some desultory debate the Prime Minister said: "The Mackenzie in that firm, I am advised, is not a relative of Sir William Mackenzie. The Mann in the firm, is, I believe, Sir Donald Mann's nephew, possibly his brother. I am not certain which, but we have explicit sworn testimony to prove that neither Sir William nor Sir Donald has any interest whatever in the Northern Construction Co."

When the clause of the resolutions was reached which provided for forty per cent. of the C.N.R. stock being turned over to the Government of Canada, Hon. Mr. Oliver asked what responsibility the Government would assume for the conduct and result of the railway system.

Mr. Borden said the Government would be merely a stockholder. There would be no attempt at Government operation of the road.

Mr. Pugsley said that the Government as trustees for the people would have to take a lively interest in the conduct and operation of the system. He thought the idea of a partnership between His Majesty the King and Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann most objectionable.

He gave notice of an amendment to reduce the capital stock to $20,000,000, all of it to be deposited with the receiver-general as trustees, and the Government to have an option on the whole system exercisable at any time within five years.

Mr. Meighen said Parliament had no power to interfere with civil rights, and therefore could not confiscate the property of Mackenzie and Mann. All that could be done would be to ask Mackenzie and Mann to consent to some such plan as Mr. Pugsley suggested. They would, he said, undoubtedly refuse.

Mr. Meighen concluded by saying the adoption of Mr. Pugsley's amendment would result in the appointment of a receiver for the Canadian Northern.

NEW YORK, May 27—Sentence of death in the electric chair at Sing Sing in the week of July 6, was pronounced here yesterday on a woman. Mrs. Madelina Fuoto, aged 46, convicted of stabbing to death Carmelo Cannetrale, who refused to marry her after he had betrayed her, and she had given him her savings.

She is the first woman sentenced to capital punishment from New York in fifteen years.

Quicksand Alarmed by Quakes.

CATANIA, May 27.—Earth shocks which have been felt daily since the disastrous earthquake of May 8, became more accentuated here yesterday, causing considerable alarm among the inhabitants. Rumors even were circulated that a number of persons had lost their lives in the outlying districts, but up to last night the official reports made no mention of any casualties.

Injured in Fall.

KINGSTON, May 27.—John Morton fell off the runway on the schooner St. Louis a distance of 20 feet and suffered serious injuries. He is in a critical condition.

The hardest man to understand is the one who always knocks the town he lives in and boasts the one he moved away from to keep from growing up with it.—Exchange.

DONNELLY MURDERED.

Coroner's Jury Finds That Man Was Killed by Unknown.

CHATHAM, May 27. — At the inquest last night into the death of William Donnelly, whose body was found floating in the creek under the C.P.R. bridge near Princess street, last Wednesday morning, before Coroner C. R. Charteris, the jury found that Donnelly came to his death by being struck on the head by some person as yet unknown. The murder is supposed to have been committed last Tuesday night about 10 o'clock. Jacob Libertus, colored, stated that when he had passed the vicinity of the tragedy that night at that hour, he saw the outlines of three men on the bridge. The men were using loud and angry language. Dr. R. V. Bray, who conducted the autopsy, testified that Donnelly had a gash in the head back of the left ear, probably caused by a pair of steel knuckles.

This Trial Was Quiet.

LONDON, May 27.—An almost uncanny stillness is marked contrast to recent police court scenes in which militant suffragettes have participated, reigned yesterday at the London sessions during the trial and conviction of the women vandals of the National Gallery and the Royal Academy, and of the recent raiders, who broke many windows in the west end of London.

Sentence of six months' imprisonment on each of the picture destroyers, while the window smashers in all cases were condemned to terms of four months. Several of the women refused to give their names and were tried as "Number so and so."

Big Stable Burns

Forty Horses Are Lost in Midnight Blaze in Hamilton.

MANY FIRES ARE RECORDED

Loss of $100,000 With Practically No Insurance Is Caused by Fire Which Destroys Business Section of Attin, B. C. — Rocket Is Responsible For Destruction of Three Years' Crop of Flax.

HAMILTON, May 27.—Fire of unknown origin broke out about midnight in the premises of the Wood Milling Co., Main street east, between Catherine and John streets. Behind the plant was a big two-storey frame stable, which was completely gutted, in which thirty or forty valuable horses were burned to death.

The four-storey brick building of the Wood Company was at an early hour yesterday morning about destroyed, and the flames were threatening the whole of the business block next to it.

The building is next door to the partly wrecked Waldorf Hotel, where the new Connaught Hotel is to be erected. In the big business block are located the W. E. Sanford Clothing Manufacturing Co., the McPherson-Glassco Co., wholesale groceries; the Bank of Nova Scotia, the paint factory of Bleicher and Recho. This is the same block in which the big fire occurred a few months ago, in which the H., G. & B. station was burned down.

The entire fire apparatus of the city is at work at an early hour, including the steamers, and extra hose was sent for, in the prospects of a big and stubborn fight.

Attin, B.C., Fire-Swept.

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 27.—The business section of Attin, a mining centre in northern British Columbia, was wiped out by fire Sunday, starting in the Kershaw Hotel. That building, the Vancouver and Northern Hotels, postoffice, Government telegraph office, and ten stores, mostly on the north side of Main street, were consumed. Loss, $100,000 or more, practically no insurance.

Fire In Coast Coal Mine.

VANCOUVER, May 27.—Fire of incendiary origin yesterday destroyed the tipple of the South Wellington Mine, owned by the Pacific Coast Coal Co., with a loss of $30,000. The work of rebuilding has been commenced and a new tipple is expected to be in operation in ten days.

Farmer's Barn Burned.

KINGSTON, Ont., May 27.—Heavy electrical storms passed over this district yesterday morning. A barn and two sheds owned by Edward Harker, one mile north of Sydenham, were struck by lightning and destroyed with a loss of $3,000.

Forest Fires in Nova Scotia.

HALIFAX, N.S., May 17. — Forest fires began their annual devastation Monday when, driven by a fifty-mile gale, they swept from the woods back of the villages of Peucell's Cove and Ferguson's Cove two fishing and summer hamlets on the western shores of the Northwest Arm and Halifax harbor, destroying a church and a half dozen houses, and threatening the destruction of the great fortifications.

Life Lost In Cleveland Conflagration.

CLEVELAND, O., May 27. — One was burned to death in the conflagration, which wrought damage estimated at $1,500,000 in the lumber yard district along the Cuyahoga river Monday night. While policemen were clearing the damaged central viaduct, an unknown man became confused and leaped from the bridge into the centre of the flames, 75 feet below. He was incinerated.

Fire Near Moncton.

MONCTON, N.B., May 27. — Fanned by a high wind, fire which broke out at Berry's Mills, eight miles from here, Monday afternoon, destroyed seven buildings with a loss of about $10,000. A fortunate change in the wind saved the village.

Rocket Causes $15,000 Fire.

WALLACEBURG, Ont., May 27.—As a result of a rocket falling on to a stack of flax belonging to the Canada Flax Mills Limited, their entire crop of flax of three years of which only part had been threshed, was burned Monday night. Loss about $15,000. No insurance.

Two Accidents Are Fatal.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., May 27.—Two tragedies marked Victoria Day in Brockville. Harold Barton, aged 23, employed as salesman, became entangled in the gearing of a test car of the Atlas Auto Co., on which he was joy riding with four other young men, and received a fractured skull, besides other injuries. Barton died at an early hour yesterday without regaining consciousness. George Collins, a veteran member of the fire department, was missed Monday night from duty. His body was found floating in the river.

Huge Steamer Stabs Barges.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The great steamship Vaterland, which took nearly two hours to dock when she came to this port on her maiden voyage recently, sank two coal barges as she steamed out of her berth yesterday.

Backing out under her own steam, her momentum carried her across the Hudson and she slipped in between two piers, where the coal barges, carrying 500 tons of coal each, were tied. Both barges went down almost at once, but no lives were lost.

Had To Forfeit Bail.

MONTREAL, May 27. — John E. Roberts, secretary of the Dominion Temperance Alliance, had to forfeit $400 bail yesterday morning for the non-appearance in the court of special sessions of two men who had been used as detectives by him in cases against the cabarets. The two men are Michael Sannes and Leonard Carstens. These two were charged by the liquor men with attempting to defeat the ends of justice by offering to accept bribes.

MODERN KRYPTOK BIFOCALS

Do you wear the old style conspicuous cemented Bifocal lenses, or do you wear the modern KRYPTOK Invisible Bifocals? How often you see people wearing a very conspicuous sort of Bifocal Glasses—the kind with divided lenses for near and far vision.

KRYPTOKS do away with this.

They are light solid lenses with perfectly even, unbroken surfaces. There is no dividing line which keeps you ducking and dodging to see over, making but a beautiful clear lens through which you read and look afar with equal facility.

We have the EXCLUSIVE right to sell these lenses for this City and vicinity.

ARE YOU GOING TO MUSKOKA THIS SUMMER?

If so take the 10.20 a.m. fast express from Toronto, daily except Sunday, via Grand Trunk Railway, and arrive Muskoka Wharf 1.45 p.m., where direct connections are made with steamers for points on Muskoka Lakes. This train carries Parlour, Library, Buffet car and first-class coaches, and passengers are assured of a comfortable ride along the most interesting route to Muskoka Wharf, which is the origine gateway to the far-famed Muskoka Lakes.

The curative odour of balsam and pine, and the preponderance of water area to land surface, together with the high altitude (1000 feet above the sea), render hay fever an impossible condition and perfect immunity from this annoying ailment is assured.

Return connection is made with train leaving Muskoka Wharf 10.30 a.m., daily, except Sunday, arriving Toronto 2.55 p.m.

Tourist tickets at low fares are now on sale to Muskoka Lakes' points, good for stop-over and valid to return until November 30th, 1914.

If you are contemplating making a trip ask Grand Trunk Agents for full particulars or write C. E. Horning, District Passenger Agent, Union Station, Toronto, Ont. 14d-122-3w22

The restaurant proprietor said, "Let me show you a curiosity." and forthwith produced something from a recess.

"Way, it's only a lady's umbrella," said his friend.

"That's the curious thing about it. We have twenty or more men's umbrellas left here every week, but that is the first lady's umbrella I remember being left."

The hand that holds the umbrella rules the world, comments the Manchester "Guardian."

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By LOUIS TRACY

"You are not to think me mad or cruel to speak in this way," she cooed. "I have looked into my very soul, Dear, and a great peace has come from my self-communing. You have wearied your clever brain with guesses as to my motive in meeting you to-night, and I giggled like a schoolgirl to-day at the thought of your absolute amazement when you read my note bidding you prepare to leave Newport. But it is all part and parcel of my plan, Derry, which rests on your reply to one small question. Do you want to go away from me? Are you ready to face a world in which there will be no Nancy, never, no more?"

"Ah, you are trying me beyond endurance!" he almost sobbed.

"But you must tell me that, Derry. I have gone a long way daringly. It is my privilege, my right. If you love me, you must expect it of me, because, as things are, I am forced to take the first step. But a woman must be sure that she is loved, and her lover alone can still her doubts."

An impulse stronger than his own strength of will brought strange, wild words to his dry lips.

"Nancy," he said, with the calm accents of despair, "I have never loved any woman but you, and, God willing, I never shall!"

"That is all that really matters," she sighed, with a contented note in her voice that rang in his ears like a chord of sweet music heard from afar in the depths of a forest.

After that they sat in silence, she seemingly wrapped in dreams, and he wandering in a maze wherein impassable walls showed no gateway of escape; though the guarded path was alluring, and the air was heavy with the scent of flowers.

The cab stopped, and they alighted; for Nancy, demurely self-controlled, announced that she meant to take him for a stroll along the Cliff Walk. Power, deaf and blind to externals, would have accompanied her straightway; but she laughingly called him back from the clouds.

"Tell the cabman to wait," she said, "and give him some money, or the poor fellow will think that we have come this long way from town purposely, and mean to go off without payment."

He handed the driver a subsidy which caused the man to avow his willingness to wait till morning if necessary. Once away from the main road, and with no other company than the stars and the sea, Nancy took her escort's arm, and kept step with him.

"Now," she said, "I'm perversely disinclined to discuss personal affairs until we reach a certain rock at the foot of the Forty Steps. I mean to sit on that rock, and you will curl up on the shingle at my feet, and light a nice-smelling cigar, and listen while I explain the method in my madness of the last twenty-four hours. But I cannot arrange my thoughts in sequence till we are settled there comfortably. In the meantime, I'll make you acquainted with my best friend, the Duchesse de Brasnes, whom you will meet some day in Paris, I hope, and then you will see for yourself some of her delightful eccentricities which I'll recount to you now, and you will laugh quietly and say, 'What an observant little person that Nancy is! Now, who'd have thought she could quiz and con a great lady of the Faubourg so accurately?' But you're not to misunderstand my joking; for the duchess is a dear, and I'm very fond of her."

To this day Power has never recalled a single syllable of Nancy's utterances concerning one of the leaders of Parisian society. All that he knew, or cared to know, was that the voice of his beloved was murmuring words which were curiously soothing to his tingling nerves. By this time he had cast scruples to the winds. His mind was armoured with triple steel against any other consideration than that Nancy was by his side, that her hand rested confidently on his wrist, that he could feel her slender arm warm and soft near his heart.

And the supreme moment was rushing upon him with the wings of love on a summer's night, than which no flight of bird is so swift and noiseless. They reached the top of the rocky staircase, and began to descend. A fairy radiance from off the dark-blue mirror of the Atlantic made plain each downward step; but Nancy wore the high-heeled shoes which women affected then more generally than is the fashion to-day, and Power held her hand lest she slipped and fell. Thus they made their way to the beach, until they had almost negotiated the last short flight. Power, indeed, was standing on the shingle, and the girl—for, married woman though she was, her years were still those of a girl—was poised gracefully on the lowermost slab.

There she hesitated perceptibly. His eyes met hers in a subtle understanding look, and he saw that her face was deathly white. Yet there was neither fear nor indecision in her steadfast glance. Even while he asked dumbly why she waited, her lips parted, she held out her hands with a gesture of pleading, and she murmured:

"Oh, Derry, my own dear love, it is not the first but the last step which counts now!"

Then he took her in his arms, and their lips met—and for her there was no uncertainty ever more.

CHAPTER VIII.
THE STEP THAT COUNTED.

Of course, being a woman, she made believe that he had taken her by storm.

"Derry, dear, how could you?" she gasped, all rosy and breathless, and seemingly much occupied in smoothing her ruffled plumes during the first lull after the hurricane.

"You witch, who could resist you?" he muttered, showing well-marked symptoms of another attack.

"No, you'll just behave, and sit exactly where I shall point out!" she cried, and her pouting confidence gave eloquent testimony to the passing of an indelible phase in their relations. "And I am not a witch; but if you find it necessary to resist me, as you put it—— Well, there! only this once. We must sit down and be serious. I have such a lot to say, and so little time in which to say it."

The new note struck by the unfettered intimacy of her manner exercised an influence which Power would have regarded as a fantastic impossibility during those moments of delirium when first she clung to him, and both were shaken by irrepressible tumult. It said, far more plainly than impassioned speech, that she had thrown down all barriers, that she had counted the cost, and was giving herself freely and gladly to her mate. The recognition of this supreme surrender by a proud woman, a woman to whom purity of thought was as the breath of life, administered a beneficial shock to his sorely tried nerves. Had a brilliant meteor flashed suddenly through space, and rushed headlong toward that part of the Atlantic which lapped the southern shore of Rhode Island, is could not have illuminated land and sea with more incisive clarity than did Nancy's attitude light up the dark places of his mind. Some stupendous thing had happened which would account for this miracle, and he must endeavour to understand. No matter what the effort needed, he must attend to her every word. In his inmost heart he knew that he cared not a jot what set of circumstances had brought about a development which he had not dared to dream of. He recked little of the cause now that its effect was graven on tablets more lasting than brass. But it was due to Nancy that, he should be able to follow and appreciate her motives. He held fast to that thought in the midst of a vertigo. A waking nightmare had been changed in an instant into a beatitude akin, perilously akin, to that of the man and woman who found each other in the one perfect garden which this grey old world has seen, and no darkling vision of desert wastes and thorn-choked paths tortoured the happy lovers now gazing fearlessly into each other's shining eyes. The heritage of "man's first disobedience" might oppress them all too soon, but, for that night at least, it lay hidden behind the veil. Exercising no slight command on his self-control, therefore, Power strove to revert to the well-ordered coherency of speech and action which he had schooled himself to adopt when in Nancy's presence.

"Forgive me if I have seemed rather mad," he pleaded, seating himself at her feet, and simulating a calmness which resembled the placid centre of a cyclone. "During three long years I have hungered for the taste of your lips, Dear. That is my excuse, and it should serve; for I was content to wait as many decades if Fate kept firm in her resolve to deny you to me."

"You would never have yielded if I had not used a woman's guile?" she said, half questioning him, half stating a truism beyond reach of argument.

"There is little of guile in your nature, Nancy."

"Well, I think that is true, too; but it is equally true that a woman often takes what I may call a saner view of life than a man. She is quicker to admit the logic of accepted facts. If you discovered that some girl had won by false pretence, not your love, for love gilds the grossest clay, but your respect, as her husband, you would not spurn her with the loathing I feel now for the man who made me his wife. For that is what it has come to. I refuse to pose as Hugh Marten's wife in the eyes of the world one moment longer than is needful to obtain my freedom. His wife I have never been in the eyes of Heaven, because my Heaven is a place of love and content, and I have neither loved my husband nor been content with him, not for a single instant. Our marriage began with a lie, and has endured on a basis of lies. Such contracts, I believe, are void in law, and the principle which governs men in business should at least apply to that most solemn of all engagements, the lifelong union of husband and wife. Hugh Marten conspired with my father—hired him, I might rather say—to drive you and me apart, Derry. The stronger and more subtle brain devised the means, and left it to the weaker one to carry out the scheme in sordid reality. As for me, I was helpless as a caged bird. How was I to guess that Marten, whom I knew only as the owner of the Bison mines and mills, had plannned my capture Even my poor, weak father did not suspect it till you were hundreds of miles away in California. And then how skilfully was the trap baited, and how awiftly it worked! You had not reacher Sacramento before a lawyer wrote from Denver warning my father that the mortgagees were about to foreclose on the ranch. On several occasions previously he had been in arrears with the interest on the loan; but they had always proved considerate, and their just claims were met, sooner or later. Yet, in a year when scores of well-to-do ranchers were pressed for money, and when clemency became almost a right, these people proved implacable, and swooped down on him like a hawk on a crippled pigeon. Derry, you bought the place—who were they?"

"I do not know. I dealt through a lawyer, and the vendor was Mr. Willard. He sold the property free of any encumbrance."

"Yet local opinion credited you and Mac with being a shrewd pair!" she commented, laughing softly, as if she were reviewing some tragi-comedy in a quizzical humour.

"We certainly wondered why Marten made things so easy for us—in other respects," he volunteered.

"Ah, then, you did have a glimmering suspicion of the truth? I guessed it; though I could not be absolutely certain till yesterday morning, when Mr. Benson refused to answer my pointblank question. He would not lie, but he dared not tell the truth; so he fell back on the feeble subterfuge that, after the mighty interval of three and a half years, he could not recall the exact facts."

"Benson? Did you write to him?"

The surprise in Power's voice was not feigned. He was beginning to see now something of the fixed purpose which had governed her actions during the past twenty-four hours.

APPLE FLOAT.

Whites of three eggs, beaten very stiff. Sweeten with four large spoons of sugar, add one pint stewed and sifted apples and beat until stiff enough to stand alone. Fill a dish with whipped cream or custard and pour apple over. This is delicious if chilled thoroughly and served with small cookies.

That Weak Book

accompanied by pain here or there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—may be faint spells—or spasms—all are signals of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering from that change into middle life which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nervine prescribed for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the disease of women.

DR. PIERCE'S

has successfully treated more cases in past forty years than any other known remedy. It can now be had in sugar-coated, tablet form as well as in the liquid. Sold by medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50 cents in stamps.

Miss Elizabeth Lordahl of Berkeley, Cal., in a recent letter to Dr. Pierce said: "I was completely broken down in health, I was aching and had pains all over my body and was so nervous that I could scream if anyone talked to me, but I had the good fortune to meet a nurse who had been cured by Dr. Pierce's Prescription. I have never had an occasion to consult a physician since—am in excellent health."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate stomach, liver and bowels—sugar-coated, tiny granules

Participating versus Non-Participating Life Policies Again

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO a Publisher of this City at age 43 took out a Ten Pay 15 year Endowment Policy of $2000, No 81226 in The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada paying therefore an annual premium of $187.20.

The Non-Participating Premium would have been $170.40.

The extra paid for profits per year (for 10 years only was $16.80.

On the 1st of May 1914 the above Policy matured and he received in cash $2620.25.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Policy he would have saved $168.00 extra in premiums paid for profits during the ten years but he would have lost $620.25 at maturity of Policy as he would have received only $2000.00 instead of $2620.25 as he did.

Where is there a man that would not like to invest money at such a rate and that too in the Largest and Strongest Life Insurance Company in the British Empire?

You are invited to call and investigate.

BURNS LIVES SIMPLY

PRESIDENT OF BOARD OF TRADE STARTED AT THE BOTTOM.

Member of Commons for Battersea is the Son of a Washerwoman and Has Made His Own Way to the Top—Started in a Candle Factory and Finally Became an Engineer —Did a Term in Jail.

The announcement that the Labor party in Great Britain did not intend accepting the suggestion offered by Mr. Asquith for a closer working alliance between the Liberal and Labor parties calls attention again to the representative of the working classes who sits in Cabinet Councils, Mr. John Burns. He is the first workingman ever admitted to the inner Councils of Downing Street. Of course, he has made no concealment of his lowly origin. "I ought to know something about laundries," he told the House of Commons, "for my mother was a washerwoman." She was, he testified, a good mother. A Scotsman by parentage, his father, Alexander Burns, being an Ayrshire man, and his mother hailing from Aberdeen. John was born in London 56 years ago. His school education at Battersea was very brief. At the age of ten he was employed at Price's candle factory; two years later he became a page-boy; subsequently he found a place as a rivet-lad at Vauxhall; and at fourteen he was apprenticed as an engineer at Millbank. This trade he followed. He worked at it in various parts of England, also on board ship, and for a year on the delta of the Niger. Before then, at the age of twenty-two, he was married to the daughter of a shipwright. He was an ordinary mechanical engineer at Hoe's printing machine works when he became noted as a leader of the poor and the out-of-work. From his infancy, as he declared, he had been in contact with poverty of the worst possible description, and he set himself to relieve it.

As a Socialist, an agitator, an open-air orator, a champion of free speech and of the right of combination, a leader in civic reform and an enemy of corruption and private monopoly, the engineer won his place in the sun. A hardy frame, a powerful voice, a striking face, great natural powers cultivated by reading, and a glow of romance rendered him an ideal leader. He stood as a Socialist candidate in Nottingham in 1885, but had, before reaching Parliament, to serve a public apprenticeship in London. The efforts which he began among the laborers of Battersea were gradually widened. His views resounded from the dock in 1886, when he was charged with conspiracy and with uttering seditious and inflammatory language; next year he was imprisoned for leading a rush on Trafalgar Square on "Bloody Sunday"; in 1889 he was elected to the County Council, and the same year saw "the orator of Tower Hill" conducting the protracted and celebrated strike for the "docker's tanner," a strike which resulted in the greatest victory ever won for unskilled labor. The London County Council gave Mr. Burns a practical opportunity for the employment of his reforming zeal. By municipal enterprise he tried to realise this ideal, and at the same time he labored to beautify his beloved London.

In 1892 Mr. Burns was elected to Parliament as member for Battersea, the workingmen providing him with an income, small, but sufficient. He entered the House of Commons, he said, as a big Briton and a great Londoner(caring for the England "that Chaucer exalted in song, that Milton ennobled in verse, and that Shakespeare glorified in monumental play." The member for Battersea distinguished himself as a spokesman for the London Progressives, his speeches being marked by literary allusiveness as well as by fluency and force, and although he took comparatively little part in general debate, he proved an eloquent assailant of Unionist Administration in the 1895-1905 regime, and was recognised, moreover, as a doughty representative of Labor before there was a Labor party.

Then came his admission to Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's Cabinet as President of the Local Government Board, a post which he held under Mr. Asquith until recently, when he was transferred to a position of equal rank at the Board of Trade. "Public service"—as he wrote in his last election address as a Cabinet Minister—"ought not to be an easy retreat for the ignorant upper classes, nor office a dull yet decorous interval for the gilt-edged incompetent between 11 and 4 o'clock." He himself set a good example in diligence, and although untrained and unconventional, he has proved a strong-minded administrator. Cities were thrown at "the Right Honorable John" when as a Cabinet Minister he refused to sanction some of the Socialist schemes of those who claimed him as a former comrade. He confessed without shame or fear that he found it not only politic, but wise, to revise some of the views which he expressed in his salad days. When his salary was $10,000, and still more when it was raised to $25,000, old friends taunted him on his old obiter dictum, that no man was worth more than $2,500.

Thus the candle-maker and page-boy has risen to be a Minister of the crown, the head of a great department of state, a dispenser of patronage, a friend of some of the most celebrated men in the land, and himself one of the best known figures in the Empire. And yet he retains his simple habits. He lives still at Battersea; he is a teetotaller and a non-smoker; he wears a "bowler" in Whitehall; he is a familiar habitue of the National Liberal Club. Reading has been to Mr. Burns an enduring pleasure.

Nerves Were on Edge She Could Not Sleep

Great Change Brought About By Dr. Chase's Nerve Food —System Built Up—Nerves Strong—Sleep Natural and Refreshing

Nothing can give you the real and an idea of what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will do for you as reading the letters from persons who have been benefited by its use. That is why we are publishing such letters daily in this paper.

Diseases of the nerves are manifested in different ways. With some it is sleeplessness and inability to rest. Others have frequent headaches and neuralgic pains. Indigestion is a common symptom, and depressed spirits and discouragement are usually manifest. Whatever may be the warning, the principal thing is to restore the wasted nerves before paralysis or locomotor ataxia claim you as a victim.

Mrs. Edson Brock, Trenholmville, Que., writes: "I want to state that I have never taken anything to do me so much good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am never without it in the house. I have been using the Nerve Food for months now and am still taking it, as it just suits my needs, and is building up my system wonderfully. I was so nervous I could not sleep, but now I sleep soundly at nights, and wake up feeling refreshed and ready for the day's work. I know it is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that has brought about the great change in my condition, and am change for it. My husband was a great sufferer from itching piles, and has been entirely cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."

By noting your increase in weight you can prove that new, firm flesh and tissue are being added to the body. Naturally and gradually vigour is restored to the nervous system by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food until you find yourself again feeling and looking well and ready to fight the battle of life. Fifty cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Didn't Mind Pneumonia.

African natives treat pneumonia with extraordinary levity. On a big trek in central Africa, writes a correspondent, one of the carrier "boys" fell ill, and a doctor who was of the party diagnosed it as double pneumonia. The Europeans did what they could for him—medicine, a flannel shirt, blankets and the like. "Before turning in that night," says the traveler, "I went across the camp with the doctor to see how he was getting on. He lay quietly sleeping alongside the fire, clad only in his customary loin cloth; having rolled up both the shirt and blanket we had given him to act as a pillow! Yet he pulled through all right."

An Anecdote of Renan.

Renan while traveling alighted at Naples. One morning a servant of the hotel came to him and said that as she had heard the preacher at the cathedral make use of his name many times she would be thankful if he would choose for her a number in the lottery about to be drawn. "If you are a saint," said she, "the number is sure to be a good one; if you are a devil, it will be still better." Renan smiled and chose a number, but he never knew if the servant was lucky.

Now, dat ain't burglary at all, boss; dat's jes' simply findin' chickens, an' I leabe it to yo'self."

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

Are The Original Pill For The Cure Of Backache, Lame Back, a Weak Back Or Any Other Kidney Trouble.

The fact that Doan's Kidney Pills are the original Kidney Pills has not prevented the placing of other preparations in pill form upon the market under the name Kidney Pills. It is necessary, therefore, that all wishing to secure the curative effects which have made Doan's Kidney Pills so popular everywhere, should see that the trade mark, the Maple Leaf, appears on the wrapper. Without this trade mark you are not getting the genuine Kidney Pills as originally placed before the people by Mr. James Doan, as shown by the following declaration.

Celery Seed For the Nerves.

Those who are troubled with restlessness and loss of sleep caused by nervousness, should know of the value of celery seeds to the system.

A few seeds eaten three or four times a day will do much toward quieting our nerves, and if taken a half hour before retiring, they will cause more restful slumber.

A tablespoonful of celery seeds boiled for from three to five minutes in a pint of water, and a half of a teacup of this liquid taken prior to meals, or before retiring, will act like a charm on the nerves, and will give the person the needed rest. The liquid may be flavored if the celery taste is not desirable.

Celery oil made from crushed celery seeds and applied to the spine is an excellent tonic for the nerves. It reaches the spinal cord, and is very soothing.

Poorly Paid Police.

The Paris police are poorly paid. The maximum salary attainable by a "sergent de ville" is $360 a year. In view of the high cost of living in Paris this amount is inadequate to maintain a family in any degree of comfort, and the married members of the force have frequently to supplement their income as best they can. Some of them earn a few francs by working as market porters during their time off duty. Others do boot repairing, and there is one who does odd tailoring jobs. Still, in spite of these hardships, there are always plenty of men eager to join the force, about ten candidates being available for every vacancy that occurs.

Several New York hotel proprietors have been fined for selling adulterated coffee. In New York they adulterate everything but the price.

Check these Colds in the Head with FOSSAL BALM

As you know, "catching a cold" simply means allowing the germs to cause a cold to catch you.

Usually these germs, which abound wherever people congregate, gain their first foothold in the mucous membrane lining the nasal passages. Here they multiply if unchecked, and quickly set up an inflammation. Then follows that smarting, burning, stuffed up, "headachy" feeling—that cold in the head that is so depressing and so likely to develop into something more serious.

Fossal Balm goes right to the spot, kills the germs and checks the cold. Fossal Balm is an antiseptic, healing ointment, put up in a collapsible tube with a long, nozzle-shaped opening. This little nozzle, inserted in the nostril carries the Fossal Balm well up into the passage, where it quickly spreads over the inflamed membrane, destroys the germs that are causing the trouble, soothes the irritation, clears the passages, and gives grateful and lasting relief.

Get a 50c tube of Fossal Balm from your Druggist or write for it direct to us. National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 4

Minced Collops.

Minced collops form a favourite dinner and supper dish. Butchers now keep the minced meat at call, but care should be taken, for obvious reasons, to procure the mince at a respectable butcher's. Season the collops to taste with pepper and salt and about a tablespoonful of catchup to a pound. Place in a stewpan and do them over a slow fire. Keep constantly moving the collops with a wooden spoon to prevent them from lumping or burning. Some cooks put in a small teacupful of gravy or soup, others a little browned butter, so as to liquefy them. Many people cut up an onion very small to cook along with the collops. Others, if they are to be used at once, add a few toasted bread crumbs. The mince should be ready in about an hour.

Labour is life, but worry is killing. Accept things as they are, and do not bother about the yesterday, which is gone forever; do not bother about tomorrow, which is not yours; but take the present day and make the best of it.

Detective Stories as Told by Real Detectives

New York Sleuths Rounding Up Desperate Band of Safe Blowers

Detective McKenna Tells of Hairbreadth Escapes

WE DREW OUR GUNS AND RETURNED THE FIRE.

[From the New York Commercial.]

"WE safe men—the bulls call us yeggs—would starve to death outside of New York. This blizzard has put us on the bum. That's why there are so many of us here now."

The speaker was seated at one of the little round tables in the rear of a saloon in the Bowery whose proprietor has been suspected for years of being the most notorious fence for post office robbers in this country. His saloon is the haven for every well known yeggman in the country while stopping in New York. Here the stamps stolen from shattered rural post office safes are brought and this man buys them at a big discount and readily disposes of them to dishonest clerks and even merchants who do not strain a point where pennies can be saved.

The writer had drifted into this "crib" in search of a yeggman known to be in New York. It was his intention to gain first-hand knowledge as to the epidemic of safe robberies that have been perpetrated, or attempted, here of late. In nearly every instance these burglars have opened fire on the detectives and policemen who surprised them at their work and in one case a policeman was shot to death in performance of his duty.

"I have been in New York now a week," said this yeggman. "I have not attempted to put over any job, for I am so well known that I am sure the bulls are trailing me. I shall stay here until I can pick up a stake. Then I'll pull my freight and go South, where the pickings are easy and the bulls not so fly."

"Are there many post office yeggs here now?" the writer asked.

"Lots of 'em. I have met a couple dozen of my old pals. Many of these men have been up-State, or in New England. But the storm hit them and they hustled for the big town, for there is little chance of pulling off a trick in the country now, when there is no chance for a getaway. The trains are not running regular and when we blow a safe under those conditions we are caught like rats in a trap. When we locate a job nowadays the most important of all things to be considered is the chance of getting away. I wouldn't touch a job anywhere unless I was sure I could be twenty-five miles away an hour after the tiff was tapped."

The contention of this yeggman that the city is overrun with safe blowers was not taken seriously at Police Headquarters. Detective McKenna, who is in charge of the "strong arm squad" and whose chief mission it is just now to round up these burglars, had this to say:—

"There are no more safe burglars at work here now than there were a year ago. We are getting more of them, that's the reason this chap makes his quoted. Very few safe blowers known to the police have set foot in the city within the last month who haven't been trailed from the moment they arrived. We never let them out of our sight. Of course, we could arrest them as suspicious persons as soon as they touch foot in the city, but by lying low and trailing them we catch them redhanded and then it is easy to convict them and send them away for long terms."

"Isn't that a new police procedure?" I asked.

"Not as new as you might think. I have trailed safe blowers for nine weeks before I could get them right. Then we only captured them after we had been shot at a score of times, wounded three of the yeggs and nearly beat their heads off with the butts of our guns before they would give up

"What recalls this case is a trip I made to Mineola, L. I., with several other detectives a few days ago to identify an old-time safe burglar known as Tim Hogan, who is being held there for trial. Tim is a bad yegg. He has a long record and would shoot any one who interfered with him as quick as a flash.

"Some years ago Inspector McCafferty, then in charge of the Detective Bureau, called me into his office and told me that with Detectives Cassasa and George Young he wanted me to trail Herman Palmer, an all round crook and bad man. The Inspector had heard Palmer was in the city and, as he put it, 'Palmer can't stay in New York five minutes unless he is working. Go look him up. See what he is about, and when you get him be sure you have the goods on him. If necessary, follow him out of the city, or out of the State for that matter, only be sure you get him. I want him put away and beyond temptation's reach.'

"We found Palmer living with his wife and little girl in Eighth avenue, near 135th street. We covered him night and day for seven weeks and, seemingly, without being able to pin anything on him. He never took a step that we weren't behind him and we knew every person he met and sometimes we were close enough to him to hear what they talked about.

"One of the men that Palmer met was Tim Hogan. We knew a good job was brewing. Several times this pair crossed over to Jersey, generally going to Newark. From the way they prowled about we knew they were trying to locate a job and it was only a question of time before we would get them. Some nights they would visit other New Jersey towns and these excursions they would vary by trips to nearby New York towns.

"One night soon after midnight Palmer left his home and took a crosstown car to Lenox avenue. He went down Lexington avenue to Seventy-sixth street and walked east to Second avenue, where he met Tim Hogan and another man. Tim had only recently escaped from jail in Cleveland, Ohio, where he had shot at several of his guards. He shot to kill, too.

"The trio proceeded up Third avenue and, turning into Thirty-seventh street, tried to force an entrance through the side door of Mulraney's saloon. The panel of this door was made of zinc and somehow they failed to pry it out. They abandoned this means of entry and went to the rear of the saloon, where they tried to force the iron bars that covered the window. It was then that we leaped upon them. Although we had our guns handy they were quicker than we were, for their pistols belched fire and just why we three bulls weren't murdered in our tracks I don't know. In any event we got in on them at close quarters.

"Cassasa rapped Hogan a clip on the head with the butt of his gun and Tim went down and out for the count. He was knocked so cold he didn't know what hit him. Young bowled his man over and by that time Palmer was bearing down on me with murder in his eye. I managed to hit him first and he dropped. Taking no chances with one I knew to be a murderer at heart, I kept handing him the butt of my gun until he rolled over unconscious.

"I sent Palmer to the hospital [illegible] he stayed three weeks. When he came out he and Hogan were convicted and settled for a three year term. They were characterized as habitual criminals by Judge Rosalsky, who told them he would send them away for life if they ever came before him again. I think Palmer did it for Tim, but Hogan is up again and I am certain he will be put away for a good long stretch this time.

"But failing safe blowers," the detective continued, "seems to have been my long suit. For in the old time days I got more than my share of it.

"Some years ago there had been an epidemic of safe blowing in and around New York. The inspector sent for me and asked if I knew Humpty Williams. He gave me his photograph, saying:—'I understand this fellow is somewhere near Providence, R. I. Go get him. Don't try to get him until you have him right, but follow him no matter where he takes you.'

"Mingling with the underworld of Providence soon gave me my first clew. I located Humpty and set to work to trail him. He took me all through New England, spending some time in Boston. Apparently he couldn't locate a job to his liking and just ambled aimlessly around. I had picked him up in the general post office, where he was inquiring for mail, and from that moment until I got him, nine weeks thence, I never let him out of my sight. Two men were stopping at the Providence hotel with him and they just palled around and, try as I might, I could get nothing on them.

"Twice they came to New York, but only stopped here overnight. When they boarded a train to leave I was always on the same train and, strange as it may seem, they never suspected my presence. A third trip was made to New York and after communicating with Headquarters I learned that Cassasa and Young had been detailed to help me. I felt then that the net was tightening.

"Williams' next trip to New York was made alone, but after trailing him a day and a night I found that two men were with him at his home in Lexington avenue, Brooklyn. It took us a day or two to locate the homes of these two visitors and this done we soon got their records and found they were about as desperate as Humpty himself. We knew our work was cut out for us, but it was a case of get them and get them right. Those were the orders and every good detective is a good soldier.

"Late one afternoon the three went over to Newark. We went along, too, and as one of the three carried a heavy sack we felt sure a job was in sight. They went to a park in Broad street, where they sat until soon after midnight. None of us knew Newark very well, so we had arranged to have a couple of Newark police detectives within call, so that in case of emergency we could act quickly.

"Leaving the park they went down a side street and entered a narrow little alley, which was as dark as pitch, and as we were strangers in the town we couldn't tell where it led to. The man with the sack dropped his burden and we heard him opening it. The jingling of steel assured us that he was unlimbering his burglar's kit.

"Without warning we heard our quarry making their way toward us. Cassasa at once began to chatter in Italian, and I think his quick wit either saved us from an unmerciful beating or else saved our lives, for that mob had us completely at their mercy in this narrow, dark, little trap.

"As we took up the trail again we noticed that the man who had carried the sack had planted it somewhere. The trio made its way back to New York and we followed them. All returned to Williams' house, where two of us covered the house while a third hurried back to Newark to look over the job Humpty had in prospect. Our man couldn't find the burglar kit that had been planted, but he learned that a very prosperous looking jewelry shop backed up in the alley and that in all probability the real scribe would be made in the near future.

"Our conjecture was correct. The next night Humpty and his two comrades sauntered out of Williams' house, and again the trio crossed over to Newark. We hadn't landed in Newark five minutes before our quarry gave us the slip. We lost them clean, but we were sure they were headed for the jewelry shop, so we surrounded the place long enough, when we got there our mob gave it work.

"A dim light in the store faintly outlined the forms of the three crackmen as they worked away at the safe. We managed to get into the building by another entrance and got in a good position to watch operations. One of the trio was an expert in applying the 'soup,' and with the first blast the big door of the immense safe was sprung from its hinges and lay crumpled up as it dangled by the lone hinge that withstood the shock of the explosion.

"Jimmies and sectional crowbars were quickly brought into play as the burglars attacked the inner door of the safe, behind which lay a small fortune in gems. As the crackmen bent to their work we figured that the time was ripe for our descent, so, creeping along and keeping as close to the wall as possible, we hid behind a big column and ordered our men to throw up their hands and give up.

"But they weren't of a kind to give up without a struggle. Blinding flashes and deafening reports told us that magazine guns already were working, and as the bullets sped over our heads we could only draw our guns and from our points of vantage return the fire. The battle raged fast and furious and the store was so dark that we could only concentrate our fire in the direction of the flashes from our quarry's guns. An occasional squeal, then a groan or a curse, told us that some of our bullets had sped true to the mark and that one or more of the crackmen had been hit. But, hit or miss, three pistols from the other side of the store still barked their defiance at us, and it was only a question of keeping safely under cover and firing at sufficiently short intervals to prevent our men making a break for safety.

"This break did come finally, as one of the safe blowers made a running leap at a side window and went through, taking the sash with him. As the others attempted to follow him a shot laid them low, and we leaped upon them and closed in for a hand to hand battle. Wounded though they were, this pair was in no mood to surrender. The pain from their wounds only added to their rage and they fought at us as though they would brain us on the spot.

"That was one of the most desperate battles I ever engaged in, and when it was all over and our two men were stretched out at our feet we each counted ourselves exceedingly lucky that we, instead of them, were not lying there insensible on the gun shop floor.

"Williams and Tiffany were the men we had bowled over, and after the first flush of victory had passed I was highly elated to find that the man I had been sent to Providence to get was stretched out before me and that the fugitive would in all probability be in our clutches in short order.

"We sent the two wounded men to the hospital and then hurried on to Hoboken, where we were sure we would find Richard Vaughan, the fugitive. He was there all right, and his arrest was only a question of an hour or two. When we arraigned the trio all were quickly indicted, and when they came up for trial each was given fourteen years. They are still serving their bids, and when they come out all will keep watching, for they are a fine lot, and a human life means no more to them than that of a rat."

NOVEL EXPERIENCES OF ENGLISH LORD ON TANK STEAMSHIP

IT is not often that the Collector of the Port, acting as the representative of the President of the United States, extends all official courtesies to a petty officer on a grimy tank steamer, yet this was the experience of Richard Herschell, paymaster of the Standard Oil tank steamship Prometheus, which arrived in the harbor of San Francisco from Talara Bay, Peru, January 3.

But Richard Herschell, the paymaster of the Prometheus, is in reality Lord Richard Farrar Herschell, known at the court of St. James', a familiar figure on the boulevards of Paris and at Monte Carlo and a globe trotter of world renown. Lord Herschell's arrival in San Francisco as one of the tanker's crew was not unheralded, for a splendidly appointed limousine stood in readiness for forty-eight hours in a remote part of the water front waiting to transfer his lordship and his valet from the cramped quarters on the tank ship to the luxurious apartments engaged for him in a hotel on Nob Hill.

LORD HERSCHELL

A Picturesque Trip.

After an arduous season at court Lord Herschell, seeking rest and recuperation, embarked on a world tour last October, making his first stop in Buenos Ayres. After a prolonged period of sightseeing and touring in and about the capital of Argentina his lordship made the picturesque trip over the backbone of the South American continent via the Trans-andean Railway to Lobitos, Peru, expecting to make direct connections there and travel north by steamship to San Francisco, which he had arranged to meet his lifelong friend and chum, Sir Robert Balfour.

Here he encountered trouble, for at the end of the trip his lordship found himself "beached" on the western edge of the South American continent. Instead of finding accommodations to which a peer of the realm is accustomed, nothing appeared available but the dingy freighters plying between the west coast ports and Panama, which would necessitate a slow passage amid unpleasant surroundings and frequent changes until the canal port was reached and direct connections made for San Francisco via the Pacific Mail route.

A Vexing Problem.

It was here that the advantage of being a friend of royalty assisted in the solution of a vexing problem, for when Lord Herschell made known his unexpected situation to friends at home the influence of one of England's greatest shipping firms with the Standard Oil Company was exerted in his behalf to secure him the privilege of signing as one of the crew of the tank steamship Prometheus, one of the fleet of Standard Oil vessels plying along the west coast and at that time lying in Talara Bay. The maritime laws prohibiting vessels of this type carrying passengers are strict, and it was only the pressure brought to bear from London that made it possible for Lord Herschell to arrive at San Francisco under false colors, so to speak, without undergoing the discomforts of tedious trips on slow going cargo boats.

His Lordship Gets a Job.

When permission was finally granted for the distinguished traveller to make the trip to San Francisco on the tanker it was necessary to find something for him "to do," and as polishing brasswork and scrubbing decks carried no particular appeal it was decided that his lordship would make a good paymaster for the crew, although wages were distributed at specified times and places whether there happened to be an official paymaster standing around or not. Accordingly a new office was created on the spot, while the perplexing problem of caring for Lord Herschell's valet was solved by transforming that useful personage into a steward. Thus master and man became shipmates, a condition which existed until San Francisco was reached and the valet resumed his usual duties of preparing his master's bath and arranging his clothes.

"And here we are, feeling none the worse for our experience," said Lord Herschell when the Prometheus reached San Francisco. "The vessel rolled and pitched a bit coming up the coast, but it did not seem to disturb my physical being. Captain Thalem's larder was a generous provider."

He Made a Good Paymaster.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE NEW NEIGHBOUR

"How do you like your new neighbours?" asked Mrs. Camuel of her friend, Mrs. Easterlie.

"She's a fine little woman, but she's going to spoil every husband in the entire neighbourhood if she remains here long enough."

"Heavens! You don't mean to say she—"

"Certainly not! She is a perfect lady and would not flirt with any man. She thinks her husband the finest man in the world."

"Perhaps he is."

"And you with a husband of your own to say such a thing as that! I have often wondered if you and Mr. Camuel got along as well as you—"

"We get along as well as some other people I could mention."

"Meaning me and my husband, of course. We have our spats on the nights when he comes home overworked and cross. I won't stand any of his growly bear business from any man. A man should at least bring home sunshine with him when he comes from town."

"That's the way I look at it. Jack Easterlie and I quarrel occasionally, but on the whole we get along as well as our neighbours. But we were talking about Mrs. Braynerd. In what way do you suppose she will go about spoiling our husbands? I don't expect that she can spoil either of them—much."

"That's the truth! But the danger lies in the different manner in which she handles her husband."

"Well, her husband is a smaller man than either of our husbands, and we couldn't begin to handle ours."

"I did not mean it that way. Take, for instance, last night. An old friend of Mr. Braynerd's came into town and went out there for supper. He had only an hour and a half to train time and Mr. Braynerd went to the train with him, telling his daughter Marjorie that he would be right back and assist her with her school problems."

"That was no more than he should have done."

"Of course not. But when he got home he found a note the size of an office letter-head hanging on the doorbell. The note read: 'Robert, come right along down to Warburton's. They telephoned for us, and then Mr. Warburton came after us when he found that you were out.' It was signed with Mrs. Braynerd's name and the names of the children."

"Hmm! Id like to see my husband stand for a trick like that!"

"Same here. I'll bet Jack's language would blister the paint on the house if I should do a thing like that."

"But the worst is yet to come. When he got to Warburton's he found a similar note on their door, reading: 'We have all been invited over to Mr. and Mrs. Cleavage's to meet some friends of theirs from Cleveland. Come on over.' And that was signed with the name of Mrs. Braynerd and the children."

"The idea."

"Right there is where my husband would have got Cleavage's on the telephone and read the riot act to me."

"Same here. But what did Mr. Braynerd do?"

"The Braynerds remained at Cleavage's quite a while, then they went back to Warburton's, and when they got there they found that Mr. Braynerd had turned the note over and written: 'I have gone home. All of you come up there.'"

"And did he roast his wife when he got her home?"

"He was not there. When they arrived home—the Braynerds, I mean and the Warburtons with them—they found a note saying: 'I have decided to go around to Cleavage's. Come around there.' And when they got to Cleavage's they found a note saying 'I have gone back home.' So they all dragged their weary feet around there. And there they found that Mr. Braynerd had gone to the delicatessen store and rustled up a Dutch lunch, and the lunch and Braynerd and the Cleavages were awaiting them. And they had a grand little luncheon."

"And didn't she give him a piece of her mind?"

"Not a piece. And he didn't give her a piece of his mind. Wasn't that ridiculous?"

"Indeed it was. But do you know, I believe the whole neighbourhood needs spoiling just the way the Braynerds are spoiled."

"Doesn't it? I hope she'll stay. She may begin spoiling my husband as soon as she likes."

"Mine too; and my husband has a wife that a little of that sort of spoiling would improve some."

"That's the truth."

WAS TROUBLED WITH BOILS AND CARBUNCLES.

There is no more frequent source of illness than that arising from bad blood, for when the blood becomes impure, it is only natural that boils, pimples or some other indication of bad blood should break out of the system.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still at the same time are very painful, and the only way to get rid of them is to cleanse the blood of the impurities. Cleanse it thoroughly by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and reliable blood medicine that has been on the market for nearly forty years.

Mr. James Wilds, Plaster Rock, N.B., writes:—"I was greatly troubled, a few years ago, with boils and carbuncles, and the doctor told me I was in a bad condition. My appetite failed me, I began to lose strength, and was pretty well run down when one of my friends recommended Burdock Blood Bitters. After using three bottles I began to feel like another man. My troubles soon left me, and to-day I can certainly give Burdock Blood Bitters a high recommendation to my friends."

TORTURED WITH RHEUMATISM

Could Not Walk, Until "Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured Him

CHATHAM, ONT., April 3rd. 1913.

"I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery into the Royal Engineers, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioner of the British Government. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure, left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legs swelled up, making it impossible for me to walk. My bowels were so constipated that I only had one passage a week until I got to using "Fruit-a-tives". They cured me of both the Rheumatism and Constipation. In my regular employment, I walk thirty miles a day and enjoy perfect health. No more Rheumatism or Constipation. You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter if it will be advantageous to "Fruit-a-tives".

Darby and Joan.

The meaning of Darby and Joan is one of connubial faithfulness and love, as exemplified by Darby and Joan—husband and wife—in an eighteenth century ballad, appearing in the Gentleman's Magazine, March, 1735, entitled "The Joys of Love Never Forgot; a Song." Author Henry Woodfall had been apprenticed to John Darby of Bartholomew Close, England, and his employer and wife formed the hero and heroine of the song.

FELL IN A FAINT

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Avon's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

An Inch of Rain.

An inch of rainfall is equivalent to 600 barrels of forty-five gallons each to the acre. This amount of water weighs over 113 tons. Think of hauling it to the farms in wagons holding a ton each! That seemingly slight air and clouds are capable of handling this enormous amount of water is one of the marvels of meteorology. One inch of rain is not such a heavy rainfall, either.—Farm and Fireside.

Why She Couldn't.

"Oh, I couldn't love him."

"Why not?"

"He wears a wig. The very ideal"

Then the dear creature removed two rats, some puffs, a coronet, a braid, a pompadour, a switch and sat down to peruse a novel.—St. Louis Republic.

HER OLD CAKE RECIPE.

It Has Never Failed, It Is Claimed, to Give Satisfaction.

Sarah Knowlton is a woman who has made cakes all her life and always has used the same recipe, wedding cakes, special cakes, holiday cakes, party cakes and everyday cakes, simply because the cake which she made for her own wedding in 1862 was so delicious that all the guests wanted one like it, and this desire has been passed on to their children and friends. She keeps many cakes on hand, so that her customers may have their cake a day, a week or a month old, as they like. Each cake weighs about one and a half pounds and is labeled with the date of its baking. They are kept in stone jars wrapped in waxed paper. Here is the recipe:

One cupful each of sugar, butter and molasses; one cupful homemade jelly or strawberry preserves, one cupful buttermilk, half a cupful strong coffee, two eggs, one grated nutmeg, two teaspoonfuls cinnamon, one teaspoonful cloves, two teaspoonfuls saleratus dissolved in half a cupful boiling water, two pounds raisins, one pound cleaned currants, one pound chopped candied fruit (lemon, orange, citron), six cupfuls flour measured before sifting.

Mix the fruit thoroughly in the flour. Cream butter and sugar, add the eggs, milk and coffee, then the flour containing the fruit. Beat thoroughly and add the spices.

Turn into well buttered pans and bake at least one hour in a slow oven.—New York Post.

Japan's Troublesome Volcano.

Sakurajima is one of the volcanoes created, according to the old Japanese calendar, in a single night. A specific date—718 A. D.—has even been assigned for the event, but it is quite evident from its appearance that the cone is really a very ancient one. Sakurajima's form is rugged and weather beaten. Time has furrowed its sides, and the forces of denudation have perceptibly increased the steepness of the upper part of the cone by the removal of all the lighter ejected materials. This circumstance has given rise to the legend that the northern peak of the island—separated from the rest of the summit ridge by a slight depression—is inaccessible. As a matter of fact, it presents no serious difficulty.—London Graphic.

Castle Under the Sea.

Among certain of the Japanese there is a belief that somewhere under the sea there is a wonderful castle in which the beautiful queen of the fishes resides. Sometimes they think this castle rises to the surface and is visible to mortal eyes—a belief that probably had its origin in the phenomenon of the mirage. When the castle appears, the superstitions believe, representatives of all the finny tribes hasten to it to pay homage to their ruler. Some time ago, in honor of the "fishy" queen and her subjects, the fishermen of Futami made a number of gigantic fish of canvas and bamboo, painted in gorgeous colors, which were towed in procession through the water, while noon crowds watching the curious spectacle from the shore.—Wide World Magazine.

The Geese.

The goose, which for some unknown reason has become an emblem of idiocy, but which is really a wise bird of good habits and one of the most profitable for the fancier, was probably the first fowl to be domesticated by man Homer, 1,200 years before the Christian era, speaks of the geese, in which he was greatly interested, and the hieroglyphics of Egypt prove that at his time they had been tamed for centuries.

Curious Old Cure.

Tablets of the Babylonians and Assyrians of the seventh century before Christ disclose a peculiar treatment for headaches. Certain drugs were administered, and then the physicians were directed to "strike the patient several times on the cheek, roll him on the ground and at the same time tell the stomach to be good."

Radway's Ready Relief

Chas. H. Billings, of 305 W. 17th St., writes: "For years I have been suffering from asthma and bronchitis. A week ago I purchased a bottle of Radway's Ready Relief and have taken a teaspoonful in water before retiring each night. The relief I have experienced is marvellous. I most heartily indorse R. R. R."

CURES ASTHMA

The specified for this disease are the Ready Relief, the Resolvent and Radway's Pills. The Relief must be rubbed on the chest and throat until a burning sensation is produced, and the Pills must be taken frequently, to keep the bowels thoroughly open. The Resolvent must be given at short intervals, in small doses, and a dessertspoonful on retiring followed by a teaspoonful of the Resolvent whenever a paroxysm occurs. RADWAY & Co.

Painful Effects of Chronic Rheumatism Quickly Routed by Rheuma

Painful Effects of Chronic Rheumatism Quickly Routed by Rheuma.

If your nerves are all crippled from attacks of Rheumatism. Neuritis can easily get a strong hold on the nerves. This most painful disease is one of the hardest known to expel, but RHEUMA can reach it if given a chance. This testimony is positive proof:

"Last March I was so crippled with Neuritis in left limb I could walk scarcely at all. Tried all remedies I heard of and had two physicians. Nothing did me any good until I used RHEUMA—$2.00 worth of your medicines surely cured me. —Mrs. C. E. Hayes, Russell, Ky.

JACOB A. RIIS DIES.

Widely-Known Publicist Was Sixty-Five Years Old.

BARRE, Mass., May 27.—Jacob A. Riis, author and social worker, died at his summer home here yesterday after a lingering illness.

Born in Denmark in 1849, he came to New York in 1868 and became police reporter on The Sun, in which capacity he came into touch with the "submerged" population and became interested in social reform. He did much for the parks and playgrounds movement. His writing was chiefly along lines of civic and personal betterment; he also wrote a biography of Roosevelt.

DYSPEPTICS WARNED BY GERMAN PHYSICIAN

Prof. Riegel, World-Famous Authority on Stomach Diseases, Points Out Lurking Danger.

Franz Riegel, Professor of Clinica Medicine in the University of Giessen, pronounced the world's greatest authority on diseases of the stomach, makes the positive statement that pepsin must not be used in treating acidity of the stomach. Millions of people are taking all sorts of dyspepsia tablets because they contain pepsin which affords slight temporary relief. But every dose contributes to serious harm in time. What is needed is something to neutralize the excess acid. The best thing for that purpose is ordinary bisurated magnesia. You can get it at any drug store for a few cents. Take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water after each meal. You will get immediate and complete relief with no danger or bad after effects. Authorities agree that acidity is the cause of nearly every form of stomach disorder, and if not checked it is likely to lead to stomach ulcers and cancer.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

DAILY FASHION HINT.

No. 6,653, Lady's Shirt Waist.

In this model we have one of the latest styles, showing a sleeve which extends to the neck edge and produces the yoke effect. The fronts are quite full and gathered where attached to the front edge of the sleeve extensions. The collar is of unusual shape and the sleeve is finished with a handsome cuff. These waists are made of chiffon, voile, batiste and many other semi-sheer fabrics.

The waist pattern, No. 6,653, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2¼ yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

EDUCATION GROSSLY STUPID.

English Educational System Strongly Criticised by Criminologist.

Dr. Albert Wilson, the eminent criminologist, lectured at the International Club for Psychical Research recently, and there was some curiosity as to two exhibits on the table until the lecturer explained that one was a half of a human brain preserved in formalin; the other an ape's.

Dr. Wilson's subject was "The Physical Basis of Psychic Manifestations." He apologized for the length of the title.

He referred to forcible feeding, and said that, by the simple plan of introducing food into the hollow of the cheek, the "greatest refinement of torture" could be avoided. Some applause greeted this announcement.

In introducing a series of microphotographs of brain sections, shown to the audience by limelight, Dr. Wilson remarked that unfortunately we had in this country been in such a state of barbarism for the last forty years that instead of turning out useful people from our schools we produced people with starved brains or brains crammed with useless information and fit only for blind-alley employment.

"The way we have educated children," he said, "is so grossly stupid that there are no words in the English language bad enough to describe it. Young children with bright, cheerful faces, can be seen in London alleys who later grow tired-looking, and then quite exhausted. They have no thinking brains; but they might have been useful citizens. Starvation or education by the school board brought about this state of things.

"Lovely cells!" "nice," or "good-looking brains!" were some of the expressions used by the lecturer to describe his illustrations of the brain of a child of five years.

The audience laughed; but were thoroughly appreciative when the significance of the photographs was explained by comparison with others of healthy and unhealthy adult brains.

"It is no wonder we want to hang this sort of man," remarked Dr. Wilson, as a murderer's brain section was exposed to view, "but it is obvious that he should be treated as an undeveloped child and kept in a lunatic asylum."

Beer From the Bank of England.

The Bank of England has the right, in common with some other old-established businesses, to sell beer by retail. This power was granted by Charter in 1694, and it has never been taken away from it. The bank could, therefore, if it chose, start in business as a public-house to-morrow, or it could send round a special "Bank of England" brand of, say, bottled stout, delivered in its own drays at your door, with a facsimile of the chief cashier's signature on the label of each bottle as a guarantee of purity. The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's Cathedral can also lay claim to a similar privilege, with the right, in addition, to brew their own beer. Paul's brewhouse formerly stood at the corner of the entrance to Doctors' Commons from the Churchyard, and an average of between sixty and seventy thousands of gallons of "strong ale" were brewed there every year. The sale of this, however, was confined to the Cathedral precincts.—Sheffield Weekly Telegraph.

ATTENTION MOTHERS

If You Have or Know of a Delicate Child Read This Letter.

"My little daughter Louisa, aged 9 years, has always been delicate, anaemic, had no appetite and seemed listless, and we could not seem to find anything that would help her, until we were advised to give her Vinol. She started taking it six weeks ago and inside of two weeks she showed a marked improvement both in appetite, vim and looks. Being so well pleased with the results, I continued giving it to her, and words fail to express my gratitude, and faith in Vinol both as a blood maker and body builder. As my child was an anaemic for so long makes the reason all the stronger for me to recommend it to others in similar condition." Geo. E. Munro, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Vinol restores health and strength in conditions like this because in a natural manner it increases the appetite, tones up the digestive organs, enriches the blood and strengthens every organ of the body.

Every bottle of Vinol is guaranteed to give satisfaction or money refunded.

MILITANTS HAD BOMBS.

Magistrate In London Confronted With Elaborate Exhibit.

LONDON, May 27. — The suffragette prisoners arrested by the police during a raid on a west-end flat on May 21 were brought before the Magistrate yesterday, and after seeing the exhibits he took such a serious view of the case that he refused all offers of bail. They were charged with conspiracy. The five women who had previously refused to give their names yesterday identified themselves in the court as Mrs. H. F. Alice Hall and Miss Emmeline Hall, Grace Roe, Julia Jamieson, and Ellen Armes. The exhibits seized in the flat included a new shrapnel grenade of ingenious manufacture, coils of fuse, and plans of hous with instructions how to reach them, and as to the usual movements of the police in the vicinity.

Memorandums were found in the flat regarding payments to militant suffragettes and also concerning travelling expenses, including the journey from Paris to England of Miss Christabel Pankhurst.

Emmeline Hall and Grace Roe became so uproarious in the prisoners' enclosure during the hearing that they had to be removed, and during the process kicked and shrieked at the top of their voices. Emmeline Hall shouted:

"I have been forcibly fed twice daily, and am nearly dead as a result."

She seemed half demented as she struggled with the police. Her hat was torn off, her clothes disarranged, and her hair dishevelled

"You beasts!" she shrieked as she was carried out of the court to the cells.

One development of the women's war occasioned much comment yesterday. This was the announcement of Mrs. George Fred. Watts, widow of the Academician, that she feels compelled in consequence of the outrages committed by the militant suffragettes to close to the public the collection of her husband's paintings and sculpture.

CREWE WILL WAIT.

He Will Not Present Home Rule Bill To Lords Until June 23.

LONDON, May 27.—Political writers yesterday on both sides anticipate little towards peace in the promised amending bill, and the minds of the members of Parliament are rather turned towards their constituencies.

Lord Crewe has announced he will not put down the second reading of the Home Rule bill in the Lords before June 22, so there will certainly be a breathing space of a few weeks, except for what may happen outside of Westminster.

The Standard (Conservative) claims to have reliable information that the Liberal party agents having gone over the ground with a view to the possibility of an early election, predict 35 Liberal gains and 28 Liberal losses, provided the Liberals came to an arrangement with the Laborites to avoid triangular contests and also commence an aggressive campaign concerning "the army plot to thwart the aspirations of the democracy."

BECKER GETS CHANCE.

Whitman Offers Him His Life In Exchange for Revelations.

NEW YORK, May 27.—District Attorney Whitman, it was stated yesterday afternoon, is ready to recommend commutation of the death sentence in the case of Becker.

This is contingent upon a complete confession on the part of the former head of the "strong arm squad," that shall involve all "men higher up" in the police "system," with whom he divided graft collected in the Tenderloin.

Winnipeg Unemployed Riot.

WINNIPEG, May 27—Twelve hundred unemployed, mostly foreigners, paraded Main street yesterday and gathered on a corner to hear a harangue from one of their number. A policeman who sought to arrest the speaker was knocked down and his teeth knocked out. A riot call was turned in, the crowd dispersed and three arrests made.

Flower and Tree.

Tea plants at the age of seven years yield 700 pounds of tea to the acre.

The cinchona tree, from which quinine is obtained, grows at an elevation of 7,000 to 10,000 feet in the Andes.

Although many plants close their leaves and flowers at the approach of rain, lettuce flowers open their widest at such times.

In the United States there are more than 200,000,000 apple trees of bearing age, about 20,000,000 pear trees and more than 16,000,000 cherry trees.

Seek Royal Trophies.

The tentative program for the international horse show, to be held in London beginning June 4, indicates that the coming exhibition will be conducted upon more elaborate lines than in the past. Close to $70,000 will be offered in prize money, cups and plate.

The trophies include the King George V. and King Edward VII. cups, two of the most valued horse show prizes in the list. Both France and Russia have now two legs each on the King Edward cup, and rivalry for this prize is extremely keen since a third victory by either country will give permanent possession of the trophy.

CHILDREN IN LINE.

London's Salvation Army Congress Will Be Unique Affair.

One of the features of the world's congress of the Salvation Army, to be held in London in June, will be the presence of many thousands of children representing all nations and all belonging to the Young Soldiers' brigade.

Among the young "soldiers" at the congress will be a contingent from Dalny, Manchuria, territory recently wrested from Russia by Japan. This field is now under the direction of local officers, and the work among the children has prospered.

Another contingent of children will go from Tokyo. They will wear their native costume and will sing Salvation Army songs in their native language. India will also send a contingent. They will be robed in their native costumes and walk in the big parade with other Asiatics. Chinese children from Hong Kong, Foo Chow and other parts of the Celestial republic will likewise attend.

Every section of Europe will send delegations, and so will Australia and New Zealand. The New Zealand officers are trying to lend additional variety to the congress by taking with them a contingent of Maori children. There are few of these aborigines in existence to-day.

Juvenile Swedes, Norwegians, Danes, Germans, Dutch, Finlanders, Swiss, Russians, Italians, French and Slavs will attend by the hundreds, attired in costumes of the ancients of their respective countries. They will bring singers, and many of them will perform on musical instruments peculiar to their people. A children's bagpipe brigade will be Scotland's specialty.

An Audacious Hoax.

A plausible adventurer has succeeded in making the Mayor of Londonderry, the Town Clerk, and a large number of prominent residents the victims of an audacious hoax.

A few weeks ago a visitor arrived in the city, took rooms at the leading hotel, waited on the mayor and other members of the Corporation, and intimated that he was the son of an American millionaire, engaged in walking round the world to win £20,000. He produced what purported to be greetings from the Provost of Wick to the Mayor of Derry.

A document with the Corporation seal affixed, signed by the Mayor, the Town Clerk, and Alderman Andersen, was handed to the visitor, who next held a levee, when he told the company that his walk ended in Bombay, and one condition of victory was that he must provide himself with a wife before the globe trip terminated.

A sensation was caused when the Derry police visited the mayor and other residents concerned with documentary and photographic proofs officially supplied that they had been hoaxed.

The Derry people who have been duped are indignant; others who escaped victimisation are highly amused.

Air Brakes For Aeroplanes.

A highly-ingenious device is about to be embodied in a new British aeroplane now nearing completion. A difficult problem, which has always confronted the aeroplane designers, has been that of enabling machines to land at a reasonably slow speed and yet fly as fast as possible. The necessity for this provision may be gauged from the fact that the modern aeroplane, with its full load, weighs the better part of a ton, and that the usual flying speeds range from sixty to eighty miles an hour. Accordingly, Mr. A. V. Roe, the well-known designer, has adopted the expedient of providing his latest biplane with what may be termed "air brakes." These consist of flaps hinged to the rear of the planes, capable of being turned at right angles to the direction of flight, with the object of enabling the pilot to reduce his speed materially preparatory to alighting.

Saves Dogs From Torture.

The second reading of a bill, the object of which is to prohibit all experiments on dogs, either with or without anaesthetics, passed the British House of Commons recently by 122 votes to 60.

Sir Frederick Banbury argued that the dog is one of the best friends man has had in the world for thousands of years.

"We have taken the dog into our lives," he said, "and we have altered his nature, had made him a sensitive being, quite different from the ordinary animals. This friend of man should be exempt from being put to torture resulting from these experiments."

ENJOY FUNERALS.

Scottish Writer Tells of Regular "Guests" Who Never Miss.

The typically Scottish funeral of the old days has been banished for good, says a writer in The Weekly Scotsman. Only in very exceptional cases does one read of "scenes" at an interment. The fashion of sending round the whisky and bannocks and cheese has not been altogether abandoned in lonely country districts, where hearses are still unknown, but it is seldom that the bounds of decency are overstepped. It was not always so. There are many cases on record of funerals lasting two and even three days, partly as the result of snowstorms and partly due to the too rapid and continuous passing of the whisky.

One can see in all the cities and towns of Scotland long strings of mourning coaches in the wake of a hearse. And in these days, nothing is easier than to become a "guest" at a funeral, more especially at a funeral of some leading citizen. All that is required to be done is to study the obituary advertisements of the daily or even weekly papers, to find announcements inviting friends of the daily or even weekly papers, to find announcements inviting friends of the deceased who instead being present to intimate to a certain coach-hirer their intention, so that carriages to the requisite number may be in waiting. A post-card or telephone call is all that is necessary, and any name can, and often is for that matter, given, for the posting establishment takes only count of the number of mourners who are expected to be present, and does not trouble about anything else. Besides it is always possible for a man with a black coat and dress hat to find room in the mourning coaches, for everyone who promises to come do not put in an appearance.

While standing at St. George's Parish Church, Glasgow, where many of the large funerals start from, I was surprised the other day when an official of a hiring establishment, pointing to a gentleman just getting into a mourning coach, whispered, "Do you see that old chap? He has a perfect craze for them, and never misses an opportunity when there is an open invitation in the newspapers. And he is one of the cheeriest old fellows I have ever met. He told me one time when I remarked to him that he must have assisted in the laying down of hundreds of the citizens of Glasgow, that it cost him nothing, and was always a nice change. Imagine speaking of a funeral as a 'nice change.'

"Six summers ago I was engaged at a big posting establishment in the Perthshire Highlands. At the funeral of a local notability, to which there was an open invitation in the advertising columns of the newspapers, there was an extraordinary turnout. It took us all our time to get the necessary number of coaches, for the churchyard was a good distance away, and the mourners could not have walked the distance. There were refreshments served, and I noticed that the country people were quite as unconcerned as if they had been going to a fat stock show."

Mounts Strange Steeds.

About forty miles from London, in the village of Ampthill, there is an old mansion and estate run by a dealer in animals, wild and domestic. He breaks into harness all kinds of beasts, llamas, yaks, ostriches, zebras and other animals. Some he trains to draw carts, others to carry a rider on their backs. He is a familiar if extraordinary sight on the streets of the village.

AS BRITISH SUBJECTS HINDUS CLAIM THEY SHOULD BE ALLOWED INTO CANADA

The Present Situation Causes Serious Thought--Dr. Sing Asks For Royal Commission to Deal With Validity of Order-in-Council.

PREMIER'S POSITION

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 27.—The Hindu situation at Victoria is giving the Government here cause for very serious thought. Dr. Sunder Sing, turbaned and blandly smiling to plead the cause of his brethren on a quarantined vessel, is asking for a royal commission to investigate as to the validity of the order in council. This, he declares unconstitutional on the ground that British subjects could not be excluded from the Dominion. The question came up in the Commons this morning. Premier Borden informed Hon. Frank Oliver that the law would be enforced. Mr. Oliver said he presumed that there would be an appeal to the courts.

"Would the government permit such an appeal?" he asked.

"The government does not control the courts of the land," replied Premier Borden.

"If there was an appeal by way of habeas corpus, would the government resist?" asked Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Premier Borden said that the government would undoubtedly be represented, and if it was thought that it was not a case of habeas corpus, it would certainly resist.

HAMILTON MAN WAS APPOINTED

Manager of the Hydro-Electric and Waterworks Utilities

At the meeting of the Water Commissioners last night, Mr. C. L. Howse, E.E., of Hamilton, was appointed manager of the Hydro-Electric and the Water Works System of Peterborough, at a salary of $2,400 a year. There were in the neighbourhood of sixteen applications for the position, mostly from men of outside towns and cities, but Mr. Howse was given the preference. He will begin his duties as head of the two utilities on the first of July.

Mr. Howse has been connected with the Hydro-Electric Department of Hamilton, and the Commissioners believe that they are fortunate in securing so experienced and thoroughly capable a man for the position.

LETTER ON THE MARKET QUESTION

Millbrook, May 22, 1914.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Seeing an item in the Peterborough Examiner of a lady losing 5 lbs. of butter on the market last Saturday by a woman taking it and not paying for, and seeing that the farmers have to wear a tag to show their name and address, I think that some of the people of Peterborough who purchase on the market should have a tag writtten, with the word danger, on them.

Hoping this item will find a place in the daily paper.

Yours truly,
Cavan Blazer.

A SUCCESS

The Poverty Social, held on Monday evening, May 25th, in the Keene Town Hall, under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian Church, was quite a success.

A large number were present. The proceeds amounted to over eighteen dollars, the fee being from two cents as high as twenty-five cents, according to the costumes of the wearer. The prizes for the costumes, which were most suitable for the occasion, were given to Miss Jennie Davidson and Mr. David Teare. Mr. David Armstrong very ably filled the position as Chairman. The programme for the evening was as follows:

Chairman's address.
Song by Mr. George Weir.
Reading—Miss White.
Vocal duet—The Misses Drummond
Dialogue—"An Old-Fashioned Quilting Bee" by six ladies.
Promenades.

Lunch was served after the programme and the event was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

T.A.S. APPLY TO THE COUNCILLORS

Of North Monaghan for Improvement of Road into T. A. S. Park

WILL VISIT GROUNDS

A delegation from St. Peter's T.A.S. composed of Rev. Father McColl, Jas. Drain, P. Kane and C. A. Kelly waited on North Monaghan's Council on Monday.

Rev. Father McColl asked Council to do something with the road leading into the T.A.S. Park so that the same would be in passable condition for vehicles to drive into the park. The reverend gentleman explained that a number of lots had been sold and that if the road were put in proper condition, that he thought quite a number of cottages would be erected in the near future. He also made a suggestion that the best way to improve the road might be to drain the same on the north side of the concession line to the river. By so doing the excavation for the drain would help the turn pike of the roadway, especially in the low, wet places.

P. Kane also spoke in regard to this road. He explained how that people driving and desiring to go to T. A. S. Park had been trespassing on Mr. McDonald's property by not being able to drive into the same over the public highway. Arrangements were made with Mr. Kane that the North Monaghan Council, together with the T.A.S. delegation meet at 2 o'clock Saturday next at the Dominion Bank Chamber and proceed by automobile supplied by the T .A. S. delegation to view this road and see what is best to do.

LIGHTNING STRUCK WEDDING AUTO

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 27 — An exciting wedding trip was experienced by George Foster and Florence Grant, two prominent Berlin (Ontario) young people, who reached here in an automobile at 6 o'clock this morning and were married at the residence of the groom's aunt, here, Mrs. Redferne. They left Galt, about seventy miles away, at midnight, their car being driven by a chauffeur named Atchison. During the trip the auto was struck by lightning and there were other incidents which were very exciting. Relatives insist it was no elopement, but just an unusual wedding journey.

POLICE COURT

This morning was the first appearance of a local man in the court. He pleaded guilty to being under the influence of liquor for the last couple of days, and as he was in a shaky condition he was remanded till Monday in Castle Nesbitt to gather himself together.

Another man, who was charged with being, drunk in this morning's police court said that he had came to the station of his own free will. He also interfered in the arrest of another man so Magistrate Dumble assessed him $2.00 and costs, amounting to $4.60.

John Donoughue; here again? Yes, said John, but let me explain.

You are charged with vagrancy. What do you say to that?

John laughed the idea to scorn, but his Worship was of the opinion that six months in the Central Prison would do the old-time offender more good than anything else.

John said he had the chance to go out to the bush to-day, and as he promised to do so, the hearing was adjourned for a week. If Donoughue returns at the end of that time, he will will be a case for the Central, but if he keeps away, no action will be taken.

The two young lads who were charged with taking goods from Maniece's grocery store in East City, will be left alone, if they conduct themselves properly, as the money has been paid back.

TWO YEARS AND LASHES

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 27—Two years in the Penitentiary and twenty lashes, was the sentence meted out to Peter Cuneo, an Italian, for assaulting and beating his wife, Margaret, a Canadian woman. In court, Mrs. Cuneo said the fight was the result of her refusal to submit to do wrong. She was terribly bruised and cut.

Won Big Pool

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., May 27—W. C. Townsend, aged 28, a cable operator, here, won the $20,000 international pool on the Derby. This is the first time it has come to Canada.

MR. GRAHAM'S QUESTIONS

Seeks Enlightenment as to Whether the Trent Canal Powers Will Be Handed Over to the Province

REVIEW OF SITUATION

OTTAWA, May 26—The Trent Valley Canal, construction estimates caused some concern on the part of Hon. Geo. P. Graham regarding the Hydro-Electric system of Ontario.

"One of the large insurance companies is financing to a certain extent the Seymour Power Company," He said "and there is a question of the rights of the Power Company being taken over by the Hydro-Electric system of Ontario. The Seymour Company have a network of wires, and are distributing power in the east quite largely. It is, of course, immaterial to the people who contribute the power so long as they get it at a fair rate, and under the old arrangement with the Seymour Company, in order to safeguard the people, their rates were placed under the Board of Railway Commissioners. The Ontario Government have contended that the right in these powers is vested in the provinces, generally speaking, and the Dominion took exception to that contention. Voluntarily some six years ago the Ontario Government gave up to the Dominion all its rights in these dams, and were delighted to get rid of them because they had no revenue from which to pay for the care of them."

Mr. Sharpe — "Only the supervision."

Wanted to be Rid of Them.

"The order-in-council is quite sweeping," Mr. Graham proceeded, "and it shows they wanted to get rid of them. A little later the only power the Ontario Government then claimed they leased to one Culverwell, at the rapids in the vicinity of Campbellford. Later, Culverwell's rights were cancelled and the Ontario Government desired to have the power vested in them. The Trent was in a different position from almost any of the other waterways in the Dominion, and the title, owing to the peculiar conditions existing as to riparian rights and other circumstances, was vested in the Dominion.

"I would like the Minister to inform the House how much power has been developed over and above these now owned by the Seymour Power Company, how much more are expected, and what this Government proposes to do with these powers. In other words, do they propose to hand them over to the Province of Ontario? I am not arguing they should or should not, but we ought to know what is to be done with these powers that are being developed as incidental to the construction of the Trent Canal."

Cost of Canal.

Replying as to what the total cost of the Trent Valley Canal would be, Hon. Dr. Reid said approximately about $16,000,000, and up to the end of last year there had been expended $12,464,,651, which included the Rice Lake and Ontario divisions. If that part from Simcoe to Peterborough were deepened it would cost considerably more.

FOOD PRICES GOING UP.

Official Reports Based on 272 Commodities Shows It.

OTTWA, May 27.—A report issued by the Department of Labour on wholesale prices in Canada in 1913 shows that the index number for 272 commodities stood at 135.5, an advance of 1.1 over 1912. The report also shows that, making a calculation in retail prices of the weekly expenditure of a typical family of five on thirty-six staple articles and upon rent, there was an increase of 1.7 per cent.

In some food prices a decline was shown, but meats, for example, "reached a general level higher than ever previously experienced." A fall was shown in the grain and fodder group. There was also a decrease in the case of dairy products, liquors and tobaccos, and in sundry commodities grouped under the head of "other foods."

DEATH OF MR. J. H. SIMMONS

A great many people who had the pleasure of meeting Mr. J. H. Simmons, of New York, during his visit last summer to Peterborough, will regret to learn of his death in New York. Mr. Simmons married a well-known Peterborough girl, Miss Edie Douglas about ten years ago. He was a "Southerner," with the typical suavity and politeness, urbanity and chivalrous attitude to women of that section of the United States people Mr. Simmons' death was the after result of a street accident some time ago. He was run down by a vehicle and suffered a slight fracture of the skull, and though apparently recovering, a turn for the worse came and death resulted a few days ago. In accordance with Mr. Simmon's wish his body was cremated.

AMERICAN HORSE WINS THE DERBY

"Durbar Second" Owned by H. B. Duryeas, at 100 to 6, was First Home in the Famous Class

ROYALTY WAS THERE

Special to The Examiner:

EPSOM, Eng., May 27—In the presence of the King and Queen and a brilliant throng, Durbar Second, owned by H. B. Duryea, of the United States, this afternoon won the $30,000 Derby. The suffragettes made no disturbance. H. Cholmondely's "Hapsburg" was second, and H. J. King's "Peter Hernit" third. Thirty horses started. "Kennymore" was a 2 to 1 favourite. None of the favourites in the betting came within the money. The preliminary odds on Durbar Second were 100 to 6, and the final betting, 29 to 1, 33 to 1, on Hapsburg, and 100 to 1 on Peter Hermit.

Mrs. Pankhurst Is Released

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., May 27—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the suffragettes, was again released from jail to-day, having been on a hunger strike since she stormed the gates of Buckingham Palace last Friday. She is very weak.

Cooler Weather Promised Now

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 27—Most of Ontario was this morning deluged with cooling thunderstorms which broke one of the hottest waves on record for May. In Toronto it was as dark as night for some minutes, ending in a terrific hail and rain storm. Considerable damage is reported in some parts of the country. Cooler weather is promised from now on.

Six Are Drowned

Special Wire to The Examiner:

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., May 27—Caught in a heavy gale the schooner Abana, with Captain Lanigan and five men aboard, foundered in the Straits off Cape Traverse. The bodies were washed ashore this morning.

THE OLD SONGS AND THE NEW

Stephen Foster and Ragtime Music

The modern ragtime music — so-called, may be considered but a temporary aberration. A few years ago the popular airs were taken from the sketchy music of the vaudeville artist. These have given way to variations on the plaintive negro airs of the old south and will in turn lead to something else that happens to catch the popular fancy.

But the simple songs of our fathers—the beautiful music and the heart-stirring words will again come into their own. And when they do the great American balladist, Stephen Foster, will be recognized as one, who perhaps more than any other, caught the spirit of his time, and rendered it into music and words that were sung by millions of his country men and women.

Foster was born in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, July 4, 1826, and received his education in the Public Schools. When only sixteen years of age, he wrote his first song, while clerking in a little store in Cincinnati. It was called "Open the Lattice, Love," and was soon followed by "Uncle Ned"—which at once caught the popular ear and was sung all over the country.

Then came "O, Susanna"—popular with the minstrel troupes—and for which he received a hundred dollars. His "Old Folks at Home" was published in 1850, and brought him five hundred dollars from the then famous Christy minstrels. For copyrights of this song he received, first and last, nearly $18,000.

Among his most popular productions were "Old Black Joe," "Old Kentucky Home," "Old Folks at Home," and "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming." These touching and beautiful compositions are all to be found in "Heart Songs"—that wonderful song collection how being offered by this paper for six coupons and the cost of distribution. We believe this to be one of the most remarkable presentations ever offered to our readers—and it has our hearty endorsement back of it. A reference to the coupon printed in this issue will give information as to the terms upon which it may be had.

PLAN WAS NOT FAVOURED BY COMMISSIONERS

Proposal to Place Civic Work Under Supervision of One Engineer Did Not Appeal to Them

MATTER DISCUSSED

Last night the Water Commissioners held a brief session during which they were waited upon by a deputation from the City Council consisting of Mayor Buller, Alds. Johnston, Duncan and Anderson. The chief topic under discussion was the suggestion of the City Council, that was made at the last meeting of the Water Commissioners, to place City Engineer Parsons at the head of the Hydro-Electric, Waterworks and City Engineer's department.

As before, the Water Commissioners did not think the scheme was a feasible one. While conceding that City Engineer Parsons was an unusually good engineer, they thought that the duties that would fall upon him, or any man, in the new office, would be so voluminous that they could not receive instant attention. Ald. Anderson had been won over in favour of the proposition since the last meeting, when the opposed it, but last night he seemed to side with the rest of the Council in favour of the scheme. Mayor Buller and Ald. Johnston advanced the reasons which have been published before, for having the three departments under one head. There was so much tearing up of the streets to be done that there should be one man who would have authority in the matter. He would decide just what course it was right to take if a water main clashed with a sidewalk or a sewer.

The Water Commissioners, however, were unanimously against the scheme and definitely announced the fact last night that after due consideration they were not prepared to co-operate with the Council in the matter. There will, therefore, be no reorganization, and the departments will jog along as heretofore.

The proposed organization of the Engineering Departments is as follows:

Chief Engineer Hydro-Electric Dept.	$ 3,000
Electrical superintendent	1,500
Waterworks superintendent (Board of Works Department)	1,500
Asst.-Engineer, pavements, etc., 6 months	600
Street Commissioners	1,150
Bookkeeper	900
Draftsman	900
Stenographer	480
	$11,530
City salary list is now	$ 6,500
Estimated cost of running P. P.U. Commission Engineering Dept. is	$ 7,780
Total	$14,280
Estimated combined cost	$11,530
Saving per year if combined	$2,750

THE DUKE AND THE VETERANS

It has been arranged that the Veterans of '66 and '70 will take part in their military capacity in the reception of His Royal Highness, the Governor-General of Canada on the occasion of his flying visit to Peterborough, on June 3rd. This is a very proper thing to do. It will be an honour to the veterans to do honour to the son of the Queen they so loyally served; and it should be gratifying to the Governor-General to meet the men to whom he owes his "job." He wouldn't have been Governor-General of this fair Dominion if the veterans had not saved Canada to itself and the Empire.

It is understood that the veterans of the Imperial service, of whom there is a large number in the city, are anxious to join the Veterans' Association on the occasion. Lt.-Col. Miler authorizes the Examiner to say that the Imperial veterans will be cordially welcomed by the Canadian veterans, and both the Imperial and the Canadian veterans are requested to muster in Central Park at 9.30 o'clock on Monday, June 3rd, to assist in the reception and to parade for review by His Royal Highness.

Mr. W. McCracken's Cousin Killed

Mr. Wm. McCracken, Manager of the Gordon-Davies Company's store in this city, received the following telegram this morning from his brother-in-law, James White, of Sudbury: "William McIntyre was instantly killed last night."

The deceased was a cousin of Mr McCracken. No details of the tragedy were given.

COMPLETE PROGRAMME FOR THE RECEPTION TO THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

Official Itinerary of the Visit to Peterborough of the Governor-General—Route of the Drives and Details of Reception.

BUSY THREE HOURS

The programme arranged for the visit to Peterborough on June 1st of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General, is as follows:

The Royal Party will include the Governor-General, Their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia, Miss Yorke, Lady-in-Waiting to Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught, Hon. Katherine Villiers, Lady-in-Waiting to Her Royal Highness the Princess Patricia, Lieut.-Col. E. Farquhar, D.S.O., Governor-General's Secretary, Captain the Hon. G. Boscawen and Capt. G. Graham, Aides-de-Camp, Major Sir Edward Worthington, M.V.O., Medical Officer, and Mr. Arthur F. Sladen, C.M.G., Private Secretary.

At the C.P.R. Station.

The Governor-General and party will arrive at the Canadian Pacific Railway station at 10 o'clock a.m. Immediately on arrival they will be received by His Worship Mayor Buller, Alderman A. H. Stratton, Chairman of the Reception Committee, Col. E. B. Clegg, senior officer of the Peterborough garrison, Col. the Hon. S. Hughes, Minister of Militia, the members of Parliament, Mrs. Buller, Mrs. Stratton and Mrs. Clegg. The members of the City Council and the members of the Reception Committee who are not Aldermen, with their ladies, will be present at the station and will remain with the Royal Party on the drives and while they are in the city.

Inspection of the Guard.

A Guard of Honour one hundred strong from the 57th Regiment, under the command of Captain McLean, will be drawn up in the yard north of the station, with the 57th Regiment Band, and will be inspected there by His Royal Highness. Space on the platforms at the station will be reserved for the Royal Party and in the yard for the guard.

The First Ride.

After the inspection the first ride will be taken. This is laid out to take half an hour, which wil give time for people who are at the station to see the arrival to go to the Central Park and be there when the Governor-General arirves at the Park. The route of this drive will be as follows: From the C.P.R. station along George street to Crescent street, through the Little Lake cemetery, Crescent street to Romaine street, Romaine street to Aylmer street, Aylmer street to Lansdowne street, Lansdowne to Park street, Park street to Townsend street, Townsend street to Stewart street, Stewart street to Hunter street, Hunter street to Park street, Park street to Gilmour street, Gilmour street to Monaghan Road, Monaghan Road to Weller street, Weller street to Park street, Park street to Brock street, Brock street to Reid street, Reid street to McDonnel street, McDonnel street to Aylmer street, Aylmer street to Hunter street, Hunter street to George street, George street to Central Park, about seven miles.

At the Central Park.

At the Central Park the Collegiate Institute Cadets, the Boy Scouts, and the Veterans will be drawn up. The children of the Public and Separate Schools will also be present in the space reserved for them. Upon the arrival at the Central Park the Governor-General will inspect the Cadets, etc. The party will then go to the platform which will be erected, and as soon as they are on the platform the school children will sing The National Anthem. The address from the Corporation of the City of Peterborough will be read by the Mayor, and His Royal Highness will reply. The school children will then sing "O Canada." Following this the members of the City Council, the County Council and other public bodies and the city, county and government officials and their ladies will be presented to Their Royal Highnesses.

Those to be presented will bring with them two cards with their names.

After the reception Their Royal Highnesses will spend ten minutes in the Armouries where they will be received by the officers of the garrison and the Daughters of the Empire.

The Second Ride.

A ride will then be taken, the route of which will be as follows: From the Central Park along George street to Argyle street, Argyle street to Water street, Water street to Inverlea street, Inverlea street to Dennistoun avenue, Dennistoun avenue to Smith street, Smith street to East Nicholls Park and through the Park and to Concession street, Concession street to McFarlane street, McFarlane street to the Trent Canal, along the Canal to the Lift-Lock.

Inspection of Lift-Lock.

The Lift-Lock will be inspected and Their Royal Highnesses will be taken over the lock in the Government steamer Bessie Butler.

Return to the G.T.R. Station.

From the Lift-Lock the Royal Party will proceed along the canal to Maria street, Maria street to Burnham street, Burnham street to Hunter street, Hunter street to Water street, Water street to Brock street, Brock street to George street, and George street to Hunter street. The party will go west on Hunter street, and if Charlotte street can then be used, by way of Aylmer and Charlotte streets to the Grand Trunk Station, but if Charlotte street is not then ready for use, by way of Stewart street and either Charlotte or King streets to the Grand Trunk station.

Decorate! Decorate!

While it is expected that flags will fly in all parts of the city, it is hoped that the residences and places of business along the streets through which Their Royal Highnesses will pass will be well decorated for the occasion, and that they will be given a right royal reception.

MORRIS McINTEE SEVERELY SHOCKED

Both Hands Were Severely Burned But He Released Them in Time

CAUGHT LIVE WIRE

PORT HOPE, May 27—Morris McIntee of Peterborough, an employee of the Seymour Power Co., had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday morning. McIntè was working at the wires on Pine Street when he removed the wrong plug. Both hands were severely burned and he was fortunate in being able to release his hands before being seriously injured.

Installation Of Officers

Park St. Ladies' Aid Hold Meeting Yesterday

Yesterday afternoon at half-past two, the Ladies' Aid of Park Street Church met and duly installed their officers. The President, Mrs. Nicholls, occupied the chair, and gave a very interesting address. The officers installed by the Pastor, Rev. F. A. Conners, are as follows:

Hon. President—Mrs. F. A. Connors.
President—Mrs. Nicholls.
Vice-President—Mrs. Moore.
Rec. Secretary—Mrs. B. Martin.
Fin. Secretary—Mrs. J. Stainer.
Treasurer—Mrs. A. Merritt.
Pianiste—Mrs. S. Thomas.
Auditors—Mrs. O. S. Matchett and Mrs. F. Thomas.

A Warning To Young People Under Eighteen

Police Chief Thompson has lately received a great many complaints about young people, under eighteen years of age, driving automobiles. This condition exists chiefly among those who have purchased automobiles recently. The law fully sets forth that no person under the age of eighteen may drive a motor-driven vehicle, and a breach of this law, makes the offender liable to a heavy fine. The Chief has intimated his intention of strictly enforcing this law, and it is possible that in the near future there may be some prosecutions.

The Protestant Federation at Young's Point

A delegation from the Protestant Benevolent Federation of Canada, Peterborough branch, journeyed to Young's Point recently to attend a meeting of the branch at that Village. A large gathering of members and adherents met in Charlton's Hall.

Speeches were delivered by Aldermen W. J. Johnston and Geo. Duncan; also R. J. Winch and J. Runnett. Other addresses by local members made the meeting a huge success. The branch at Young's Point is progressing favourably, the membership increasing at every meeting. At the close of the meeting a very successful banquet was given, after which the usual toast list was run off.

The branch at Hall's Bridge is holding a large gathering in the early part of June at that centre. Delegations from Peterborough, Young's Point and Lakefield are expected to be present to help along the work.

PURE MILK.

The future of any nation depends upon infant life and the care of the health of those will go to compose the population of a country. The hot weather is coming when infant mortality, especially in cities, runs riot. A great deal of this is due to ignorance of mothers as to the proper care of their children, and a great deal is due to impure or infected milk. It is a scientific fact that milk from tubercular cows will transmit consumption to human beings. And it is an actual fact that tuberculosis in cows is frequent. We, therefore, should be protected in the matter of milk — a universal article of food. Yet we, in Canada, have no legislation providing protection of the people from the danger of milk from tubercular animals. The detection of this infection in cows is easy—the application of the tuberculin test. Women suffragettes may struggle for the vote and suffragists may make themselves criminals in the interests of votes for women, but they are neglecting something that touches the main spring of nationhood—the health and the life of our citizens. A great deal of the tuberculosis among children is directly traceable to tuberculosis milk. If we are anxious to gain a high plane of civilization we shall not neglect a matter that has to do with the future welfare of our nation.

HOME RULE.

Home Rule for Ireland at last—justice after centuries of wrong and waiting. The measure was carried in a House of six hundred and twenty-five members, with no doubt many absentees, by a majority of 77. The only doubt, which is scarcely a doubt, is respecting the present government remaining in ojce a month after the bill reaches the Lords; and of that there is a moral certainty, and in due course the bill will receive the royal assent. The Lords, according to the Parliament Act, cannot kill the Home Rule bill; and the king, who assented to the Parliament Bill, will have no excuse, if he has the will, to refuse the royal assent. The attitude of Ulster may seem embarrassing, but it is not likely that any opposition to Home Rule will take a more serious form than sporadic rioting. The majority of Ireland must rule, and the vast majority of the Irish people are in favour of Home Rule; and even in the province of Ulster half the members sent to the Imperial Parliament voted for Home Rule. It is not likely that half of the quarter of the total population of Ireland will be allowed to defeat the will of the great majority of the whole people. Ireland will hereafter have home rule as we have it in Canada. According to the terms of the bill there is no danger of what some persons profess to dread—disability of the religious minority, and that is the main objection of the Irish opponents of the measure. As we in Canada do, the people of Ireland will govern themselves, and though, as in Canada, the people sometimes will make mistakes in selecting their rulers, there is a moral certainty that under Home Rule Ireland will prosper as she never has prospered before. At any rate, under divine Providence her destiny will be in her own hands.

WE TOLD YOU SO

In the month of April, 1913, the total revenue of the Dominion amounted to $12,148,655. In April, 1914, the total revenue stood at $9,848,998. In other words, there was a decrease of $2,299,657, or more than 18 per cent. The greater part of the decrease came in the falling off in customs revenue, an indication of a continued drop in Canadian trade. For months past there has been a great and steady decline of Canadian trade, and the April figures indicate that this accompaniment of Conservative rule continues markedly evident—Brantford Expositor.

BRITISH BY-ELECTIONS.

To offset the impression sought to be created by Unionist successes at by-elections, the figures of the last seventeen contests in the Old Country have been compiled and they show a majority of 21,926 in favour of Home Rule, the totals being: For, 93,806; against, 78,751. Of course the majority includes the Labour as well as the Liberal vote, and in justification of this course, it need only be pointed out that the Labour candidates are all Home Rulers and would go further than the Liberal government have gone in putting down the playing at war in Ulster with a strong hand. While it is certain the next general election in the Old Country will be a titanic struggle — all the forces of monopoly and privilege being lined up for a last and supreme fight — it is likely that the Tories are in for a surprise. By-elections in England, contrary to the rule in Canada, oftenest go again the government.— Ottawa Free Press.

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE IN THE LORDS.

The rejection of Lord Selborne's Woman Suffrage Bill by the House of Lords illustrates the profound anti-feminine feeling of the Unionist party. The Bill was an extremely conservative one — so much so that while a Liberal suffragist could easily oppose it on this ground, no Conservative could oppose it on any ground but hostility to the suffrage. In spite of this, in spite of good whipping-up by the Bill's Unionist friends, and in spite of the overwhelming superiority of the Unionist party in the House, the Bill was easily rejected; indeed, its fate was never in doubt. The Unionist peers, both those who voted against and those who stayed away, showed in a striking degree how little the opinions of a few clever Unionist leaders on this question represent the feeling of the Unionist rank and file — a demonstration none the less cogent because a few Liberal peers, like Lord Weardale, spoke on the anti-suffragist side, or went into the Lobby against the proposal.—London Chronicle.

WHERE HONOUR IS DUE.

Mr. Brewster tries to dodge the fact that the Whitney government was driven into the adoption of the Workmen's Compensation Act by the demands of the Liberals and Labourites. The truth cannot be thus evaded.

The workmen of the province have been urging for years for a modern Workmen's Compensation Act modelled on the British act, and Mr. Proudfoot, Liberal M.P.P., introduced a bill in the Legislature in the ye ar 1910, following the lines of the British act, but amended to meet the conditions in Ontario. This bill he withdrew on the assurance of St. James Whitney that a commission would be appointed.

So that the introduction of the Proudfoot bill preceded the appointment of a commission.

It is true that Mr. Rowell did not enter the Legislature until 1911, and therefore could not have prompted the government's action, but he did stir up the government, session after session, for its inaction in not introducing a bill until nearly four years after the appointment of a commission.

During all this time who were the agitators in behalf of a proper Workmen's Compensation Act? Was Mr. Brewster one? Well, hardly. Or Sir James Whitney? Not a bit of it. The Labourites and the Liberals made the clamour.

If further evidence along this line is needed, let Mr. Brewster take note of the action of the District Trades and Labour Council of Toronto to recognize, by a popular subscription of $3,000, the efforts of two of their members in securing the legislation for which the Whitney government now seeks to take the sole credit.—Brantford Expositor.

LABOUR INTERESTS.

In the immediate vicinity of an election, the Conservatives pose as great friends of the Labour interests. But everybody hasn't the greatest faith in these professions. Mr. Allan Studholme, the only Labour member in the Ontario House, does not support the Whitney government. He is an honest and conscientious man, not a partizan, but a throughpaced Labour member. The symapthy with his ambitions for the amelioration of Labour conditions of Conservatives is not marked. Recently, while Mr. Studholme was advocating in the House the eight-hour day, Sir James Whitney's Conservative supporters walked out of the chamber. Friends of the Whitney government claim that that government has abolished the contract system of prison labour. The Ross government had made a beginning of abolishing this system. When the Conservatives came into power, Hon. Mr. Hanna thought the contract system was a fine thing, reversed the policy of the late government, and made the celebrated contract with Charlotte Taylor & Co. for the manufacture of woodenware, by which prison labour was let to this firm at the abnormally low price of 30 cents per day—with nothing to pay for rent, taxes, fuel, light, etc. It was the strong condemnation which this contract excited which led Mr. Hanna to investigate prison methods elsewhere and then, and not till then, did the present government inaugurate its present policy. Mr. Hanna, instead of gaining glory from his dealing with the prison contract labour system, has been blackened very much in the estimation of honest men through his prostitution of it to partisan purposes. It was Mr. Hanan who tapped the pockets of Mr. George Taylor, a prison contractor, for $300 for the Conservative campaign fund, and it was the refusal of the government to permit investigation of the evident crookedness connected with this incident that has put the stain on Mr. Hanna's political character, which will never fade till thoroughly investigation—if it can do so—removes the stain.

$600 Stone Crusher For North Monaghan

The North Monaghan Council reappointed the road commissioners of last year.

Mr. Bradburn, township treasurer, notified the Council that Mr. McIntosh, tax collector, had over-paid the amount of roll by $30.11. Moved by Messrs. Young and Robson that Mr. McIntosh be refunded the $30.11.

By-law No. 602 for a grant of $600 from the Department of Public Works, Ontario, was given a third reading, and on motion of Messrs. Forster and Young.

Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Robson that the clerk write Messrs. Peck and Bennett and thank them for their influence in securing for the township the sum of $600 toward the purchase of a stone crusher.

Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Robson that the reeve, Mr. Young and the clerk be a committee with full power to act for the purchase of a stone crusher for the township.

Monday, May 25th, was a gala day in Norwood. In spite of the unfavourable weather quite a large number from out-of-town congregated to witness the various entertainments of the day. The calithumpian parade started out at about one o'clock with showers of blessing pouring down upon them. Each float was indeed exceedingly good, there being about twenty altogether.

Shortly after the arrival of the calithumpian at the grounds, the rain ceased and the lacrosse match between Havelock and Norwood began. The game was a very exciting one, and resulted in a score of 9 to 4 in favour of the home team. Father Kelly acted as umpire. After lacrosse the Norwood High School and the Lakefield High School played baseball, and again the Norwood boys were victorious, the result being 11 to 10.

About one hundred and ten dollars were taken in at the gate, and from the sale of ice cream, etc., the I.O.D.E. realized over $20.

In the evening a concert was given under the auspices of the Local Chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, and the Norwood Rifle Club, by the Deloro Orchestra, assisted by Mr. Roy Pipher, of Port Hope, and a ladies' quartette. Mr. Pipher was heartily applauded each time and cheerfully responded to the encores. The programme was as follows:

Overture—Raymond. (A Thomas) Deloro Orchestra.

Vocal Number—Mr. Roy Pipher.

Melody of Peace—(Carroll Martin).

The Lost Chord—(Arthur Sullivan).

Cornet Solo—W. B. Horwitz.

Vocal Number—Forget Me Not. Ladies' Quartette (Mrs. E. C. Squire, Mrs. H. Nichol, Misses B. Pearce and L. Hugill).

(a) Humoresque (A. Devorak). (b) Gray Days (Noel Johnston). Orchestra.

Operatic Selection—"Faust." (Gounod).

Part II.

Morceau—After Vespers. (Neil Moret).

Selection—"Echoes of the Opera." Arranged by R. Recker.

Vocal Number—Mr. Pipher.

Potpourri—"Strains from Killarney." Arranged by Recker.

March—"The Whip." (Lampe).

"God Save the King."

The proceeds of the concert were over $80.00.

HASTINGS NEWS

Examiner Special:

HASTINGS, May 25.— Schools were closed on Monday, 24th, in honour of Victoria Day.

Quite a number of our citizens went to Campbellford or Norwood, monster celebrations being announced for the day.

Empire Day was duly celebrated in the Public schools by suitable songs and recitations in keeping with the occasion, all of which were designed to encourage in the youth that feeling of patriotism which is so desirable.

The weather during the past week was like that of summer days and a most delightful shower came to gladden the earth, and now everything is looking very promising.

We are informed that the present week will see the farmers practically through with the root crop and all seeding operations.

Mrs. C. Jones spent Saturday in Peterborough.

Mr. J. Breene of Lindsay, was in this district on Monday in the interests of the J. Deere Plough Co., of Toronto.

Miss Lizzie Laing spent the holiday with her parents in Peterborough.

Mr. J. J. English has purchased a fine automobile for himself and family.

Dr. Black of Warkworth, accompanied by some lady friends, motored to Hastings on Saturday.

Miss Ida Lynn of Peterborough, spent the week end with friends here, the guest of Miss Mabel Carter.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunter have moved their household effects to Toronto, where they purpose residing.

Miss Bunner of Campbellford, was the guest of Miss Margie Anderson for Sunday.

Miss Florence Carter spent the week end with friends in Peterborough.

Mr. Jas. Buck has followed suit by purchasing a fine Ford auto, and is thoroughly enjoying it.

The Elections, The Churches, The Bar And The Boy

Are the clergy of Ontario and the organized temperance forces of the Province "sinning away their day of grace?" This is the charge made in a letter recently published in The Peterborough Examiner, which a reader sends to The Globe with the request that some comment be made upon it. The writer says that a prominent Peterborough man, upon being asked to allow his name to be submitted to a Liberal convention, refused on the ground that "a majority of the temperance electors in the Province would not vote against their party in favour of Mr. Rowell's policy." He added:

"If the temperance people of this Province were really and sincerely in favour of the abolition of the bar then you would find: That there would not be a minister of the Gospel who would not openly and fearlessly advocate the abolition of the bar. There would not be a church in the Province without its own separate active organization to work with a firm determination to elect the Rowell candidate regardless of party or self-interests. There would not be a single church in this Province without an enthusiastic organization of its lady members, who would unitedly and heartily canvass every adherent of their church and others to vote for the candidate pledged to support the abolition of the bar. There would be a central organization in each riding of all its moral and religious forces to work and vote for the candidate pledged to abolish the bar. And lastly, there would be a representative central organization of all the religious and moral forces in the Province, who would see that in every riding of the Province local organizations were formed by every church to make one grand determined effort to elect the candidate pledged to abolish the bar."

The remainder of the statement is not in very good taste. Bitter reference is made to designing hypocrites who stand up in the churches and preach sermons on saving boys from the bar-room, and who vote for the party that is in league with the brewers and distillers, while poor Rowell, misled, humbugged, and deceived, is ploughing his furrow alone. In that part of the interview reproduced above, however, there is material for serious thought. It is generally understood that the election will be over in little more than a month. How many ministers of religion in Ontario who usually support Conservative candidates have openly declared that on this occasion they will vote for candidates pledged to abolish the bar? How many Sunday school superintendents will break with their party when it comes to a choice between the bar and the boy?

The Globe has far more belief in the honesty of purpose and moral earnestness of the church-going points of Ontario than the Peterborough man who refused to be a Liberal candidate because he distrusted clergymen and temperance workers, but if there is to be a real campaign in the Province next month for the abolition of the bar, and not a sham fight there must be vastly more activity than has yet been shown. Every licensed hotel will be a centre of influence against the Rowell candidates. How many churches will be active centres of influence for the men pledged to destroy the saloon? The Globe would welcome two or three hundred twenty-word letters from Conservative clergymen and temperance workers throughout Ontario who are willing publicly to announce that in the great and critical struggle now begun against the bar they are for principle rather than party, and are not ashamed or afraid to let it be known. Send along your name. That will be the best answer to the Peterborough critics's assertion that the clergy and temperance workers of Ontario are sinning away their day of grace.—The Globe.

A NOTICE TO TEMPERANCE ELECTORS

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—We will appreciate it if you will give prominence to the following in both your daily and weekly editions:

It having come to the attention of the officers of the Citizens' Temperance Committee and to the officers of the County of Peterborough Temperance Association that an effort is being made by supporters of both political parties to secure pledges of support from temperance electors for possible political candidates, the officers of both Associations desire to request supporters of the temperance cause to refrain from pledging their votes or influence until the candidates of both parties are finally in the field and their respective attitudes on the temperance issue have been fully and definitely ascertained.

THE GURNEY OXFORD GAS RANGE IS NOTED FOR WHAT IT WILL DO AND WHAT IT WILL SAVE

No Housewife Should Miss This Series of Talks

THE HOUSEWIFE who Cooks with Gas doesn't have to "lay the fire." She simply turns on the gas and touches a match to it.

She has no uncertainty as to whether the fire will "go." She doesn't have to wait until the fire burns "up." She has no coal to carry, or ashes to throw out.

She does'nt burn fuel between meals when the fire is not required. She turns the Gas off. She doesn't light the whole fire if she only requires one burner. She lights what burners she wants, no more.

In fact it is only when you "Cook with Gas" that you understand what economy and satisfaction in the kitchen really means.

The Gurney Foundry Co. are Canada's Largest Makers of Gas Ranges. Their Gurney Oxford is noted for what it will DO and what it will SAVE.

This Company has carried on a series of experiments to find out how to cook a meal in its proper order. The result of these experiences will be given in a series of talks called Kitchen Engineering. It means preparing a meal from soup to dessert, in the proper order, each dish ready as required.

These talks will be given in the Turnbull Store during the week of June 1st. Every housewife is invited to attend. Admission will be by ticket which we will send you free on request, and at the Afternoon Lectures, tea will be served to visitors.

We want you to come and hear these Lectures. They will be helpful in your daily work. They will cut down the time and trouble of cooking. They will be interesting and instructive.

We give below the Place, Dates and the Time:—

PLACE: The New Turnbull Store Fourth Floor

DATE: Wednesday, June 3rd; Thursday, June 4th; Friday, June 5th; Saturday, June 6th

TIME: Afternoon, 4 to 6; Afternoon, 4 to 6; Afternoon, 4 to 6; Wed. & Fri. Evening 8.15

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Every Christian Should Vote For Candidate Who Supports The "Abolish The Bar" Policy

So Says Rev. R. Pogue in Course of a Strong Sermon on the Duty of the Church Member in the Present Political Crisis.

He said in part:

"I need not take up your time in justification of the discussion of the subject announced from a Christian pulpit. One result of the failure of the pulpit, rightly to relate the teachings of Christ to questions of public life in the past, is that people have come to regard religion and politics as two distinct departments of life. The average politician looks upon it as a kind of impertinence for a Christian minister to touch on political matters at all. And the average Church member takes the same view of the matter. I prefer to take the view which that great preacher from the Old Land, who recently died so suddenly on his way to Toronto (the Rev. Syvester Horne) took. Sir R. Nicoll, writing this week about him, in the British Weekly, says that the thing which was peculiar about him, was that he could not draw any distinction between his politics and his religion. He believed that nothing could save the State except that Christianity which was its only bulwark. To him every political question was at its roots a religious question. The relation of the Christian minister, as well as the Church member, should be one of direct, personal, living interest in civic and national affairs. The laws of a Christian nation ought to be Christian. But who is to make them such unless Christian men and women unite to send none but Christian men to Parliament, to make our laws? It is a criminal neglect of duty when professing Christian men wash their hands of politics and refuse to take a direct interest in the political life of the community, and so permit men to be sent to Parliament who are neither Christian in their lives or ideals. The Christian Church ought to dictate the terms of righteousness to the nation, and speak with a voice of such authority in our political conventions that none but Christian men would be nominated to represent us in parliament. It is the duty of the individual Church member, as a member of the State, with a voice in its government, to use his influence, his voice and his vote to make the principles of the Gospel of Christ the laws by which his country is to be governed. All this should be clear to all and should need no proof. It goes without saying that as the highest ideals that exist for the individual, as well as for the nation are those found in the principles of the New Testament. The members of Christ's Church should never rest until those ideals are made the laws of the nation of which he is a subject.

See, first, how the application of what I have said would correct the evils of partyism. The curse of this and every other country where it exists, is a blind and unreasoning submission upon the part of a large portion of the electors of the community to a particular party. In proportion, as a community is intelligent and Christian, will these elements unite, and come together, and stand together, against the evil and vicious elements in the community. What are politics? Politics is the science of Government; and Christian politics is the science of right government. Politics is the department of ethics that has to do with the government of a country; and Christian politics is the department of ethics that has to do with the Government of a country according to the principles of Jesus Christ. It follows that the Christian voters of a country where great moral questions are submitted to them for consideration and to be voted upon, cannot split their votes and be found in opposite camps. Surey there ought not to be any difference of opinion among Christian electors regarding the abolition of the traffic in intoxicating liquor.

And that leads me to say a few words on the application of the principle with which I have been dealing to the present situation in relation to that traffic. Why has not the traffic received its death blow in this country long ago? There is but one answer: Because when the majority of Christian people have gone to the polls in the past they have left their religion at home. Here, for example, is a traffic which is regarded as the nation's greatest enemy, as humanity's greatest foe, as the greatest enemy of progress, of industry, of labour and of the Church of Jesus Christ that exists. What ought to be the relation of Christian voters to that evil? Should there be any possibility of difference of opinion as to what should be done? If all thought aright, and prayed aright, and read their Bibles with open minds and obedient hearts, would there be any such thing as Christian people dividing their votes in a great political contest, where the liquor traffic was the supreme issue There would be no possibility of any such division. And, more: if we were earnest and sincere, if we really lived the principles of the Holy Faith which we profess, long before election day we would bring such influence to bear upon both parties that neither party would insult the Christian intelligence, or do violence to the moral sentiments of the Christian people of the community by nominating a man who did not stand for the total abolition of the liquor traffic. I would, therefore, urge upon all Christian voters who hear me, Conservative and Liberal alike, that you leave this place this morning with the earnest purpose that so far as you are concerned you will make it perfectly clear to your party this week that they cannot depend upon your vote unless the man whom they bring out is, first of all, a temperance man, and unless he stands for the total suppression of the liquor traffic.

If both candidates will pledge themselves to do this then there will be no cause for any to break from his party affiliations. But unless the Conservative convention do this and unless the man nominated pledges himself to support the "abolish the bar policy" there is only one course open to the Christian Conservative voter, and that is to cast his vote for the party which is pledged to the policy of the abolition of the bar. I do not see how you can in any other way be true to the Christian principle which I have tried to enforce in this sermon."

FOUND HAY FEVER CURE?

Toxin Remedy of Western Physician Proves Successful.

KANSAS CITY, May 26—A cure for hay fever?

Out of the despised ragweed, the olved and feared golden rod and the honey-bearing Spanish needle — the polen bearing trio that set the world to sneezing— is made the remedy that was proposed as a cure to-day before the convention of homeopathic physicians of Missouri in session at the Hote Baltimore.

Dr. E. J. Burch of Carthage, Mo., a widely known homeopath, made the announcement. It caused a sensation at the closing session of the convention.

The remedy, he explained, was the result of his wife's severe case of hay fever. He conceived the idea of a toxin from the weeds that cause the trouble and after many experiments prepare da toxin which he used as a hypodermic injection. That was ast summer. His wife was completely relieved of all symptoms, he reported, and out of twenty who took the toxin either as a cure or as a preventive, nineteen cass were successful.

To Give it to Science.

"I am not announcing this as a cure," he said. "I certainly hope that it will prove as successful on further trials as it has so far, and if it proves the cure we have sought so long, I want the entire medical fraternity to have it.

"The process of preparation requires great care. The pollen must be gathered eary in the morning before the sun rises, for the toxin found in the pollen in the heat of the day is a different thing from that found in early morning or ate night. I shook the pollen from the ragweed, two varieties of glden rod and two varieties of Spanish needle on to a plate of glycerin and prepared and strained a toxin with water that I injected into the bodies of the patients. It carried the active poison or principles of the pollen. For a cure I used four doses two days apart.

"For a preventive I began before the time for the patient's hay fever to appear and used an injection each week for five weeks.

"The toxin has shown its virility by hastening the hay fever season of paients in an overdose."

First Budget From Rice Lake Many Down For Holiday

HIAWATHA, May 26.— The feeling among the old fishermen is that the present summer will be a good one for bass and 'lunge. It may be only a conjecture, but these old timers say that the low water this spring is bound to protect the spawn because of the shallowness of the creeks and the fact that the fish returned to deeper water for spawning. It is believed that there was no loss of spawn. Hence in addition to the claim that fishing will be good this year it is also believed that there will be very little loss from his year's spawn.

City Fathers Down.

Quite a party spent the holiday and week end at the cottage of George Duncan, the Peterborough alderman, on Hetrick's Bay. They came down in Al Haskill's new boat and in the party were Messrs. Duncan, Haskill, Lou Dobbin, Will Martin, Mayor Buller and others. It is not known whether they tried any fishing or not, on account of the season still being closed, but they certainly had a big time. However it is too early in the season to go into details. We want to see the people coming down to the lack, and we don't want them to feel that they are being spied upon. But last year some of us down here surprised a fewof the visitors.

At Trombley's.

Mr. Jack Trombley and several friends spent the holiday at Seldom Inn. There was quite a party at the Angler's Cottage. Mr. Briscoe was one of the bunch and apparently wintered well.

Lake is Beautiful.

The lake is beautiful just now, and it was expected that the Geneva would bring down quite a number from Peterborough on Monday. The morning was very wet, but the afternoon broke fine and warm. There were fifty or sixty on the boat. Now is the time to see the lake at its best.

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER JR.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

FOOD.

A great scientist once said. "Tell me what the people eat, and I will tell you what they are."

Man does not live by food alone, but without it he does not live at all.

Probably 90 per cent of all illness and incapacity for work, barring accidents, is due to insufficient food, improper food, or overeating. I do not propose to present a treatise upon food or the chemistry of nutriment, but a few general remarks upon the subject, even from a layman, may be of value, especially to young people who do not realize that the food indiscretions of youth lay the foundation of premature age and impaired faculties.

The average dinner pail and lunch basket are indigestion's accomplice. Usually they contain pie, doughnuts, or cake, and other mixtures which neither feed the body nor allow it to administer to the mind.

The quick-lunch counter is a menace to health, and some time, perhaps, we shall be sufficiently civilized to legislate against it.

Thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands, of people confine their lunch to a piece of pie or some "medley" of food, washed down with a cup of coffee or tea, and then they wonder why they don't feel like working.

Half of the workers eat a hurried breakfast, swallowing food whole, which should be masticated, and then rush for a train or run half of the way to the factory or office.

Good nourishing food in itself is not sufficient. Much depends on the way it is eaten, and more than very moderate exercise should not immediately follow a meal.

The human body may be likened to an engine or boiler, and every engineer knows that the uncared for machine wears out a dozen times more quickly than it would if it were given proper attention.

You cannot run the body any more than you can run an engine without constant care; and if you don't give it this attention, you have no right to expect it to perform its functions.

I should advise everyone, whether he works for a living or not, to consult a reputable physician and ask him to prescribe the foods best adapted to one's individual case.

Be very frank with your doctor. Tell him your life's history and your occupation, that he may be able to advise you intelligently. This does not mean that you will be obliged to diet or discard all of the foods which appetite craves.

You can't do your work properly, you can't be on good terms with yourself and with the rest of the world, unless you are properly nourished and your digestion is normal.

Don't labour under the delusion that because you have not had indigestion you are eating the proper food Indigestion is often a long time coming; but any abuse of the digestive organs, or any other part of the body, will react against you sooner or later. Nature is just, and will always exact a penalty from those who, either innocently or intentionally break her laws.

SIGN OF DECREPITUDE

When You Cease to Love a Circus!

A prominent magazine writer says: "The fact that thousands of people thronged Robinson's Famous Shows' tents proves that the love of the circus is inherent in the blood of humanity a s long as the red corpuscles exist. When a man no longer loves the smell of the sawdust arena he has surely arrived at the lean and slippery age when he fain must crouch before the fire to warm his thin blood.

"Though our locks may be grey and our foosteps slow, the tented city, the gold and tinsel, the odour of the queus, the smiling, bespangled, adorable creatures in filmy pink and cream appeal to us still, and sad will be the day when we shall cease to be thrilled by this most ancient but still modern, his altogether delightful potpourri of grandeur and nonsense, of reality and sham, the circus."

If the germs of youth are not altogether eliminated from your veins, you can satiate this normal, healthy yearning by visiting the splendid exhibition given by Robinson's Famous Shows, in this city on Wednesday, June 10.

Two performances will be given, at 2 and 8 p.m. Doors open one hour earlier, giving ample time to inspect our great educational, zoological collection.

CONCERT WAS A SPLENDID SUCCESS

WARSAW, May 27—Mr. R. Maitland of the staff of the Royal Bank spent the holiday at his home at Fower's Corners.

The Misses Cooper, Peterborough, were guests of friends here over the week end.

Mrs. N. E. Bell and children of Ottawa, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Choate.

Misses J. R. Selkirk and D. M. Hawthorne spent Sunday and the holiday in Toronto.

Miss Hazel Lindsay, Calgary, Alta., who is attending Bishop Strachan School, Toronto, and Miss Hazel Dean, Peterborough, were guests of Miss Marjorie Choate.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Nicoll and children, Battleford, Sask., are visiting Mr. Joseph Edwards.

The concert given by the orchestra of the Conservatory of Music, Peterborough, under the auspices of St. Mark's Anglican Church, on Saturday evening, was a spendid success.

An Edinburgh cabman was driving an American round the sights of the northern city. In High Street he stopped, and with a wave of his whip announced: "That is John Knox's house." "John Knox!" exclaimed the American. "Who was he?" This was too much for the cabby. "Good heavens, man!" he exclaimed. "Did you never read your Bible?"

Summary Of Provisions Of Home Rule Bill

The Irish Home Rule Bill, which passed the House of Commons for the third time yesterday, and which will become law whether the House of Lords assents or not, contained the following provisions:

A Senate of 40 members; a House of Commons of 164 members.

The Irish Parliament cannot legislate on peace or war, navy, army, or any naval or military force, foreign relations, trade outside of Ireland except certain defined taxation, coinage or legal tender.

It cannot make any law, either directly or indirectly, to establish or endow any religion, or prohibit the free exercise thereof, or give a preference, privilege or advantage, or impose and disability or disadvantage on account of religious belief or religious or ecclesiastical status, or make any religious belief or religious ceremony a condition of the validity of any marriage.

Temporary restrictions are placed on legislation on land purchases, old-age pensions, national insurance, labour exchanges, Royal Irish Constabulary, Postoffice and other savings banks and friendly societies.

The Executive remains vested in the Sovereign or in his representative.

Forty-two members still will be sent from Ireland to the House of Commons.

The Judicia committee of the Privy Council to give the final decision as to the constitutional validity of any act passed by the Irish Parliament.

The Irish Exchequer to defray the cost of the Irish administration, except for reserved services mentioned above.

The Imperial Exchequer to pay an annual sum to the Irish Exchequer, starting at $2,500,000, and eventually, after six years, becoming a permanent payment of $1,000,000 annully.

Work Started This Morning

On New Turn-out on George St. That is the Second Step to Ten Minute Car Service

WHICH IS NOW ASSURED

Work was commenced this morning to lay the new turnout of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company on George Street, between Antrim and Smith Streets. The material is being unloaded nearby and a squad of labourers are at work making ready for the actual construction of the extra eet of railway. The street car company have received permission from the Board of Works to lay another turnout on Romaine Street, and in a short time this also will be in working order. The other turn out needed to insure a ten-minute service, is a long one, at the corner of Charlotte and George Streets and it has already been built.

Now that the Company have received permission from the City for all the work, the ten minute service is promised for the near future.

It will be good news to residents who find the George line of the Company a convenience when operating according to schedule, to learn that at the beginning of next week, and very probably on Monday, the through trips of the George Street cars will be resumed. The George Street service has been demoralized for a long time now, being interrupted by long stretches at McDonnel and King Street. This was caused by the paving operations.

WHAT MEANS THE SPRING?

What means the spring to you?—
The tree, the bloom, the grass;
Wide fields to wander through;
A primrose path to pass;
Bright sun, and skies of blue;

The songs of singing streams;
The rippling riverside
Awakening from dreams;
Fair-browed and azure-eyed—
Oh, thus the springtime seems.

COLD-BLOODED PATRIOTISM.

With the possibility of a permanent naval policy being laid before parliament next year" a naval campaign is announced for the province of Quebec. What will it be? One thing is certain, and that is Jean Baptiste will not be told, as he was during the general elections of 1911, that his sons will be shot down on British war ships. Any danger of that sort of sacrifice is prevented by the Borden naval programme, which proposes to make a cash gift to the mother country, while leaving her to provide the men necessary to man the ships thus acquired. This is a pretty cold-blooded sort of proposal to emanate from a party which professes to monopolize all the patriotism there is in the country, but it is exactly of the character above stated.—Brantford Expositor.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Spring Housecleaning — We are passing through the annual round-up in many households and in some parts of the country it is all over with and peace is drawing near. It is true that the women of the household still call the men down if they walk in without thoroughly cleaning their shoes or if a coat or hat is carelessly left where it should not be. It is also true that mother is still nursing a lame back and aching muscles, but she is so glad to know that it is over and everything clean and in order that she is comparatively happy.

Now, let me tell you something about housecleaning. There now, never mind, I know I am a man and am not supposed to look at such things from the woman's viewpoint, but I am just egotistical enough to say that I know better than some of you, and I will also say that what I know about the matter I learned from a most excellent housekeeper who never found it necessary to do what most women call "spring housecleaning." Why? Well, in the first place she found that the greatest trial was process was followed by colds, sore threats, child ailments and a great amount of physical suffering on her own part as well as great inconvenience to the entire household. How did she avoid it? By simply keeping clean all the time. In the first place she found that the greatest trial was to to take up, clean and relay the carpets so she took up every carpet in the house and made them into rugs. Then shep inted and varnished all the floors and after that she got a vacuum cleaner. A little work daily and a thorough use of the vacuum cleaner once a week has from that time on kept her house in just as perfect condition all the time as it was formerly after the spring housecleaning.

There are few things about a home that are more insanitary than a carpet that has been down for several months. A good vacuum cleaner, however, used weekly will make it more sanitary than an ordinary beating if done once a month, and I have never known a housekeeper to take up carpets monthly.

No, I have no interest in the vacuum cleaner business. I am simply telling you of something that saves work for women and makes homes more sanitary. An ordinary sweeping with a broom simply raises the foul dust in great clouds and it settles on everything in the room including the woman who does the sweeping, and she breathes into her lungs enough foul germs to infect a dozen people if they were suseeptible to disease. On the other hand the vacuum cleaner collects the dust and enables one to take it out of the room and dump it into a receptacle filled with water so that it will trouble us no more. A little wiping of the window and door caps, baseboards and picture frames, and the house is cleaned in a few hours. It is true that the floors must be wiped up and the kitchen scrubed, but it is infinitely better and greater economy to have this done at least once a week than to pay out many times the amount of the cost for help in doctors' bills. I know many mothers who refuse to keep hired help on account of the expenses, work themselves down and then suffer in addition to paying a doctor's bill that is greater than would have been the wages of a competent servant or cook.

There is no economy and nothing to be gained by continuing to live in your own home without the modern conveniences. Suburban homes can be made and kept modern and sanitary at much less expense than the city home. The time is coming when the owners of farms and country homes will be the real owners and aristocrats of this country. The telephone, the auto and the picture shows have changed and will still more change the social condition of farm life and scientific housecleaning will improve the health of all people when ia takes the place of spring housecleaning.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor,—I wish some advice in regard to a lump on my left wrist. It has been sore for nearly a year. It is right on the wrist joint about as large as a half dollar, and is puffed up and swollen all around. If I work it pains me and gets larger. I have tried many liniments and bandages but no cure. One doctor says it is a wen. Would be glad to get your advice.—Mrs. M. R.

The trouble seems to be what is known as a Cystic tumor or a Ganglion, which is frequently noticed on the back of the wrists, sometimes upon the upper part of the foot. They may become quite large, much larger than what you mentioned. They are sacks containing a thin or viscid fluid or jelly-like substance. The simplest way to get rid of these tumors is breaking them with a sharp blow. It can be quite easily done, the patient's wrist being flexed over the operator's knee. At other times they are punctured or squeezed sharply against the bone. In a few cases they may recur and then a rubber bandage should be worn for some time. If the diagnosis of wen is correct have it cut out. It's a simple operation. They are not dangerous.

The Market

Regarding Saturday's reference to the market and the statement that the attendance was below the average for this season of the year, Sanitary Inspector Spence stated that at fifteen minutes to ten o'clock he had counted the number of buyers and sellers present and found that there were little more than twenty-five of the former and one hundred and twenty-five farmers. Mr. Spence's review tends to give support to the idea that the attendance of farmers did not contribute to the condition which was remarked upon by a citizen who stated that the attendance was small for this season of the year. Mr. Spence even claims that every Saturday there is a surplus of produce which is sold to the merchants.

Letter Received.

The following letter has been received in regard to the market question and illustrates a catering for the farmers' trade which the Peterborough market must contend with:

Peterborough, May 26th, 1914.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have read with considerable interest your articles regarding the management of the Peterborough market, for I was for years a patron of it. But becoming dissatisfied with the conditions prevailing I have for the past three years sent all my produce to a large departmental store in Toronto and have received better results than I ever did while attending Peterborough market. I have been supplied with boxes and crates regularly; also the price to be paid for the following week, so you know what you are going to get. Some times I keep my stuff for a week or two if I think I will do better by so doing. I have less trouble selling my produce and get prompt returns. I am better satisfied, so much so, that it would take very strong inducements to go back to the market. If farmers would try this plan I am sure they would never again climb those awkward stairs to the market and put up with offensive officiousness.  The Examiner is to be commended on its pluck in trying to revive a dying institution which should be an advantage to both farmers and city people if managed properly, but when people can't sell or buy without so much dissatisfaction they had better quit dealing, and I think that the way matters are now, the farmers could stay away from the market without any serious loss to themselves. All farm produce can find a ready market easily without going near Peterborough.

Yours,
Mrs. F. M. Walsh.

SIDEWALKS ASKED FOR

A deputation composed of the following gentlement waited upon the Monaghan Council and urged that sidewalks be built as soon as possible on the subdivision known as the De Laval Gardens: Messrs. C. H. Pennefather, C. J. Carroll, Herman Wilson and Victor Wilson composed the deputation.

Mr. Pennefather said gentlemen in Hamilton had been induced to purchase this property but that the sale of the same had been held up on account of not having sidewalks built. He urged that Council take immediate action and have plans and specifications prepared and tenders asked for as soon as possible.

The petition calls for sidewalks to be built on the north and south side of King George street from Lock street to Park street, on the north and south side of Wilson avenue, from Lock street to Park street.

Moved by Messrs. Forster and Young that the above mentioned sidewolk petition be left in the hands of the clerk to report on and to see that the same is according to law and if so, proceed to advertise for tenders immediately.

MEDIATORS MET ROYALTY

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 27.—Just one official, the local United States' consul, was on hand to welcome the ABC mediators and United tSates and Mexican delegates with their beautiful senoritas and gay children, when they arrived here this morning. The visitors are quarteded at the King Edward hotel, and in the afternoon saw the city and were motored up to Craigleigh, the beautiful grounds of Sir Edmund Osler, where they were presented to the Duke and Duchess and Princess Patricia, who received them in a most gracious manner at a garden party. Although on a pleasure side trip, the mediators have not suspended business. At three o'clock this afternoon they had a short "conversation" with United States' delegates, relative, it is understood, to the proposals to admit Carranza's Constitutionalist envoys as parties to the conference.

BIG LOAD FOR A TRACTION ENGINE

ENNISMORE, May 26—On Monday, May 25th, Mr. M. F. Conway passed through this Village on his way to Gannon's Narrows, with his twenty-horsepower traction engine, pulling six waggons loaded with his saw-milling machinery. This was the ongest train to pass through Ennismore in a number of years. Mr. Conway has finished cutting lumber at Mr. W. H. Crough's woods and intends cutting during the most part of the summer at Gannon's shore. He also has his shingle mill running at Mr. Crough's and has a lot of shingles to cut.

Sunday Schools Have Over 19,000,000 Scholars Enrolled

Interesting Data Produced at Otonabee Sunday School Convention Held Yesterday

The Otonabee Township Sunday school convention was held at Coldsprings Union S. S. yesterday afternoon and evening. The convention opened with the president, Mr. S. Armstrong in the chair. After the opening exercises, which consisted of singing hymns and choruses by the children of Coldsprings, the meeting was led in prayer by Mr. Borland, the Provincial S. S. representative, and Mr. S. Matchett, superintendent of River Road Union.

Then the President, Mr. S. Armstrong, reviewed briefly the work of the past year. He stated that it was a pleasure to see every Sunday school in the township, with the exception of Hiawatha, was represented. After summing up the progress of each school he thought Coldsprings led in advanced methods, Villiers the best attendance and Hiawatha the best results, the pupils there giving the brightest answers. At the conclusion of his remarks the financial report was read, but the sec-treas., Mr. Stanley Braden, and it was satisfactory in every respect. The reports of the departmental officers were read, and every one showed excellent progress. The reports of the different schools were read, after which primary work was taken up, led by Mrs. E. D. Lewis of Peterborough, who gave an interesting talk on primary teaching, illustrating it with crayon drawing. She urged the teachers of children to use the blackboard more, even though one may be only a crude artist.

Mr. Harold A. Waite, of Toronto, addressed the meeting, taking for his subject, "The Attitude of the Youth Toward the Sunday School." In his opening remarks, he said we already knew the attitude. What we wanted was a solution to it, so as to turn the youth toward the school. There were 400,000 boys and girls in Ontario, and of this number only 80,000 were enrolled in the school. Where were the other 320,000? It is to these that we would have to turn our attention now. He said it could be done by organization of the different classes in the school and doing something for the pupil that would interest him and hold him there; also by service and leadership. What the boys and girls need, and in fact the older people as well, he said, was summed up in Luke, 2 chap. 52 v. "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man." Wisdom stood for our mental make-up, stature our physical, favour with man our social life, and favour with God our spiritual life.

Vastness of Sunday Schools.

In his evening address, Mr. H. A. Waite, speaking on "The Greatest Educational Factor of the Day," said that Sunday school work is in progress on nine continents, and in 191 countries. There are over 19,000,000 scholars enrolled, with 2,624,000 officers and teachers. In North America there are 17,000,000 scholars and 1,600,000 officers and teachers. Sixteen hundred new scholars are received every week. There are thousands of additions daily to the church. In 1913 there were 17,530 conventions held. The Sunday school is the greatest educational factor because it reaches all ages.

It has a place for the baby, for the child of five and for adults. Through its Home Department it interests the sick, the aged, and those who cannot attend services. The Sunday school touches all interests. It provides for temperance, missionary, social and home interests. It aims to create loyalty to the nation and to the church. It seeks to introduce all life to Christ and to make all life Christian.

Officers Elected.

At the conclusion of the afternoon session tea was served in the basement of the Hall. Between the sessions the Nominating committee met and elected officers for the ensuing year, and decided on the place of meeting for next year, which will be at Indian River. The following officers were elected:

President—Mr. A. Gillespie.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. Borland.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. Stanley Braden.
Supt. of Missionary and Temperance—Miss Mary Hambridge.
Supt. of Elementary Work— Mrs. Thos. Rose.
Supt. of Secondary Division— Mr. Herbert Peters.
Supt of Adult Bible Classes— Mr. Patterson.

The evening session commenced at 7.30 p.m. After the opening exercises the new president was introduced, and after thanking those present for the honour that they had conferred on him, Mr. Gillespie, the president-elect, called upon the Rev. Mr. Cragg of Mark Street Church, who spoke on mission work in the Sunday school.

GUARD WILL PARADE IN REVIEW ORDER

Erie Counted Slowly To-day

RIVERSIDE PARK, May 27.—The thunderstorm at noon to-day left the diamond in a sloppy condition, but with the aid of gasoline and sawdust the grounds were in pretty good shape when the fourth game of the series opened. Both teams were out for blood, the Yanks to get an even break on the series, and the Petes to grab three out of four. Swartling, the Petes' new first-baseman, was in uniform, but will not break into the game. Brown, the Buffalo International Leaguer, who pitched the opening day game at Erie against the Petes, was the Yanks' pitching selection, while Manager Blount pinned his faith on Schetler.

The teams were as follows:

Erie.	Peterborough.
Dawson, m.	Blount, m.
Dunn, lf.	Byrne, 3b.
Gygli, 1b.	Welsh, lf.
Schaeffer, 2b.	King, 2b.
Harris, rf.	Wilcox, rf.
Behan, ss.	Fox, 2b.
Wiltse, 3b.	Gorman, 1b.
McNeal, c.	Kelly, c.
Brown, p.	Schetler, p.

First Innings.

Erie—Dawson walked. Dunn grounded to Schettler, Dawson going to second. Gygli died on a roller to King, advancing Dawson to third. Schaeffer was passed. Harris beat out an oller to Schettler, Dawson scoring. Behan hoisted to Blount. One run, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Blount flied to Duns. Byrne singled over short. Welsh fanned after two or three long fouls. King forced Byrne at second, Behan to Schaeffer. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Second Innings.

Erie—Wiltse grounded to King. McNeal singled through short. Brown singled to left. Dawson grounded to Fox, advancing the runners. Dunn flied to Blount. No runs, two hits, no errors Peterborough—Wilcox singled to right. Fox fanned after two attempts to sacrifice. On the hit and run play Gorman singled to right sending Wilcox to third. Kelly drove a liner into Wiltse's hands, Gorman stole second. Schettler fanned. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Third Innings.

Erie—Gygli fanned. Blount made a pretty running catch of Schaeffer's fly to short centre. Harris singled over short. Behan grounded to King. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—Blount died on a smash to Behan. Byrne was passed. Welsh forced Byrne at second, Schaeffer to Behan, Welsh stole second. King grounded to Wiltse. No runs, hits or errors.

Fourth Innings.

Erie—Wiltse flied to Wilcox. McNeal was hit by King's batted ball. Brown hit into a double play. Schettler to King to Gorman. No runs or hits, one error.

Peterborough—Wilcox drew a pass. Fox sacrificed, Brown to Gygli. Gorman popped one to Wiltse. Kelly singled to right, scoring Wilcox. Kelly stole second. Schettler fanned. One run, one hit, no errors.

Fifth Innings.

Erie—Dawson flied to Welsh. Dunn scratched a hit when King fell in fielding his slow grounder. Dunn stole second, going on to third when no one covered second for Kelly's throw. Gygli singled to right, scoring Dunn. Gygli was out stealing third. Schaeffer doubled to left. Harris flied to Welsh. One run, three hits, one error.

Peterborough — Blount walked. Byrne bunted a fly to Brown in trying to sacrifice, and Blount was doubled up, Brown to Schaeffer. Welsh grounded to Behan. No runs, hits or errors.

Sixth Innings.

Erie—Behan grounded to King. Wiltse bounced a hit off Byrne's glove. McNeal singled over second. Brown cracked one which Schettler knocked down but could not recover in time to make a play. Gorman grabbed Dawson's high one. The first-baseman also nailed Dunn's high foul. No runs, three hits, no errors.

Peterborough—King fanned. Wilcox grounded to Gygli. Fox died on a roller to Schaeffer. No runs, hits or errors.

Seventh Innings.

Erie— Gygli doubled to left centre. Schaeffer sacrificed, Schettler to Gorman. Harris hit to Schettler and Gygli was out at the plate. King lost Behan's grounder, Harris going to third. Wiltse singled over second, scoring Harris. McNeal grounded to Schettler. One run, two hits, one error.

Peterborough— Gorman singled to right. Kelly was safe on Behan's fumble. Schettler hit into a double play, Behan to Schaeffer to Gygli. Gygli robbed Blount of a hit by a sensational one-handed pick-up, Brown covering the bag. No runs, one hit, one error.

Eighth Innings.

Erie—Brown grounded to Schettler. Dawson died the same way. Dunn flied to King. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Byrne grounded to Behan. Welsh hit to Schaeffer, who made a one-handed pick-up, but threw wild, Welsh going to second. Welsh had the throw beaten any way. King drove a liner right into Dunn's hands. Wilcox was passed. Fox died on a foul to McNeal. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Ninth Innings.

Erie — Gygli grounded to Fox. Schaeffer fanned. Harris singled over second. Harris stole second, went to third on Kelly's high throw. Behan fanned.—No runs, one hit, one error.

Peterborough—Gorman died on a smash to Schaeffer. Kelly singled to left. Dunn went back and grabbed Schettler's hard smash. Blount was hit. Byrne died on a smash to Behan. No runs, one hit, no errors.

WE SHOULD BE CHANGED

The Lord shall give that which is good; and our land shall yield her increase.

Righteousness shall go before Him; and shall set us in the way of His steps.—Psalms 85; 12-13.

One could never imagine the wonderful fairy story than that which for the past weeks has been unfolding in real life about us. The great pity is that these wonders are so often taken as a matter of course, that we pay no attention to them.

It seems as if our eyes must be open to the marvellous, reviving, life-giving power that is now and has been at work, re-creating and awakening the life of nature, that has seemingly been dormant through the winter months.

A few months ago there was a snow-covered lawn, now a green grassy one; a few weeks ago bare brown branches, now they are bursting forth with their new, dainty, feathery leaflets; a few days ago—

"Such a starved bank of moss,
Till that May morn,
Blue ran the flash across,
Violets were born."
—Browning.

It seems as if we ought to be changed also. This fresh, invigorating, arousing power must work a change in ourselves, which every one of us needs. Are we all leading a Life Beautiful to the best of our ability? Are we as noble, as pure, as helpful as we have often longed to be? Whose fault? Not God's, but ours. Some one has said that man cannot and God will not prevent our leading noble lives.

May we prayerfully examine ourselves to discover what it is that is preventing us from being true to our own highest ideals. We can not possibly have all the daily worries, the petty cares, great anxieties, serious faults, and besetting failings drop out of our lives, but with God's help and through His power, our own strength and determination may be so revived and quickened that we can rise above them into a new life, as beautiful as the new world of Nature around us. —I.H.N.

—Farm and Dairy.

A CRITICAL TIME

Dr. Malte, of the Dominion Experimental Farm, who led in the discussion of Prof. Zasits' paper at the O. S. G. A. Convention, said he believed it to be a critical time in the history of farming in western Canada, as farmers were going in more for stock raising they would want a fodder plant they could rely on. Alfalfa would furnish this need. The variegated kinds were the only ones worth trying out. The so-called Baltic strain was identical with Grimm's, and simply bears the farmer's name who got Grimm seed to start with.

Dr. Malte thought it would be possible, by applying the C.S.G.A. methods of selection, to improve both the capacity of alfalfa plants to produce seed and its fodder yielding qualities. Hybrids in plants, like hybrids in animals, have a tendency to sterility. He had observed this in the examination of alfalfa plants.

A Single Alfalfa Plant

This old alfalfa plant, dug from an alfalfa field on the Iowa Agricultural College farm, shows why this crop can withstand drought better than any other common farm crop. Do you know of any other farm crop that has such a root system as is here illustrated?

Some were pistillate and some staminate. Plants which produced seed well would give progeny that would be good producers of seed.

NOT HIS CHOICE

It was at an "At Home," and a certain bachelor, noted for his charming manners and polished wit, was the hero of the evening.

Several ladies gathered together were having a friendly talk when one of them remarked:

"I wonder how it is that Mr. Singull has never been married?"

One of the ladies made up her mind to ask the gentleman in question for his version of the story, and as soon as an opportunity offered she went up to him and engaged him in talk.

"Now, do tell me, Mr. Singull, are you unmarried from choice?" she asked.

"Oh, yes," said he, too readily, she thought.

That sounds somewhat unchivalrous, doesn't it?"

"Perhaps, so, madam, perhaps so! But it was the choice of the lady, not mine.'

JEWELLERY BUSINESS HAS CHANGED HANDS

It has been announced that the Schneider Bros. have bought out the jewellery business that was formerly owned by Mr. F. Clarke. It is stated that the Schneider Bros. intend to conduct the two busines at present. There have been some negotiations commenced by Mr. A. W. Cressman to buy the present Schneider property, but to the present time no arrangements have been made as to the transfer.

OBITUARY

ELIZABETH MURTY.

The death occurred on Tuesday, May 26th, of Elisabeth Murty, at her residence, 390 Brock Street. The deceased lady was 87 years of age and was born in Ireland. She came to this country when a young girl, and has resided here ever since. She had made a large circle of intimate friends during her lifetime, and those of her associates who knew her kindly, and cheering disposition, will greatly regret her demise. Her husband predeceased here nearly 50 years ago.

She leaves to mourn her loss, four sons and one daughter, all of whom reside in Peterborough. The sons are Anthony, James, Michael and Charles, and the daughter is Miss Mary A. Murty.

The funeral will be held from the above mentioned residence to-morrow morning at nine o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

Paving Completed To-day

To-day Foley and Gleason, the contractors for the street paving, will have finished paving George Street, from Charlotte to McDonnel, and are making rapid progress on the other sections under contract, so that the City will present a good appearance for the visit of the Duke of Connaught.

PROBABILITIES.

Fresh southerly to westerly winds, very warm, with thunderstorms. Thursday, moderate winds, fair and not quite so warm.

Oatmeal Gems.

Soak two cups of rolled oats in two cups sour milk 15 minutes, then add one egg, little salt, on tablespoon sugar, 1½ cups sifted flour and one teaspoon soda disolved in a tablespoonful of water. Beat well and bake in gem pans. This makes 15 or 18 and they are very nice.

To Raise $4,500 In Four Days

Last evening there was a conference of the business men and the young men of the Y. M. C. A. to further the plans for raising $4,500 for the Association between June 1st and 4th. This money is to wipe out outstanding bills from 1913, the current expenses till next January and the necessary repairs to the Y.M.C.A. building. The work is divided among twenty-five business men and twenty-five young men. Mr. G. A. Gillespie has charge of the business men while Mr. P. M. McCarroll is supervising the work for the young men.

No doubt the people interested in Y.M.C.A. work will meet the efforts of these men and help to carry out the good labours of the local Association.

A Big Value at $3 a gift at 98c

Think of it, the four hundred most enduring songs ever written, all collected and bound together between two covers. Scores of them have been out of print for years but never forgotten, and handed down from mother to child and then to the child's children. Many of them would not be in the book if some one had not preserved in the family bible, or in the old scrap book, words and music clipped from some magazine or newspaper long since dead and brought forth yellow with age to lend their mite to making "HEART SONGS" the song book of the American people. Alone and unaided you could not gather together the songs in "HEART SONGS" in a lifetime. It took four years and the contributions of 20,000 people to do it.

Tracey's Fine Pitching Gave Petes Third Game of Series

Homesters Played Snappy Ball in the Field and Did Some Timely Hitting That Gave Them a 5 to 1 Victory—Only Five Sailors Reached First Base—A Warm Reception for Dorbeck in the First.

With Tracey twirling beautiful ball, and the Petes out-playing Erie in the field and at the bat, Manager lount's aggregation grabbed the third game of the series from the invaders yesterday by 5 to 1. The homesters virtually put the win over in the first innings when four solid smashes and a fielder's choice gave them two runs. Two would have been enough to get through on as Tracey had the Yanks in hand all the way, allowing only four singles and showing perfect control, not a man walking. His curve was breaking nicely and he had a zip on his fast one that kept the Sailors popping them up in the air. The Petes were in behind him with a decidedly snappy brand of fielding. Fox and Byrne had beautiful one-handed pick-ups. Kelly made several fine catches of foul flies, getting one as he crashed into the stand, and King went away back into left and pulled down a fly in pretty style.

At th bat too, the Petes showed a great improvement. Welsh, the new left-fielder, hits the ball hard and has a great turn of speed, going down to first like a shot from a gun. The homesters collected eleven hits again yesterday, and gave Lefty Dorbeck a warm reception in the opening innings when Byrne, Welsh, King and Wilcox all singled in succession.

First Innings.

Erie—Wilcox muffed Dawson's fly to right. Dunn bunted a pop fly to Kelly in trying to sacrifice. Dawson was out stealing, Kelly to King. Gygli flied to Blount. No runs or hits, one error.

Peterborough — Blount fanned. Byrne singled over third. Welsh singled over second and Byrne went to third when Dawson fumbled. King drove a bullet over third scoring Byrne. Wilcox beat out a roller to third, filling the bases. Fox hit a slow roller to Schaeffer and Welsh beat the throw to the plate. Gorman flied to Dawson and King was doubled at the plate. Two runs, four hits, one error.

Second Innings.

Erie—Schaeffer died on a high foul to Gorman. Fox made a sensational one-handed pick-up of Harris' smash and threw him out. Behan grounded to King. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough — Kelly fanned. Tracey drove one over Dawson's head for three bases but was called out for cutting first. Blount flied to Dunn. No runs, hits or errors.

Third Innings.

Erie—Wiltse grounded to Tracey. Welsh made a pretty catch of McNeal's high one to left. Dorbeck fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough — Byrne lifted to Gygli. Welsh died on a grounder to Behan. King flied to Dawson. No runs, hits or errors.

Fourth Innings.

Erie—Fox made a fine play on Dawson's hard smash. Kelly gathered in Dunn's high foul, smashing into the grand stand but hanging onto the ball. Gygli singled to right, the first hit off Tracey. Gygli stole second, Kelly dropping the ball. Schaeffer singled through short, scoring Gygli. Schaeffer was out stealing, Kelly to King. One run, two hits, no errors.

Peterborough — Wilcox doubled over Dunn's head in left. Fox sacrificed, Dorbeck to Gygli. Gorman hit to Wiltse and Wilcox was out at the plate. Kelly beat out a slow one to Behan. Tracey singled to left, but Gorman was out at the plate on Dunn's good throw. No runs, three hits, no errors.

Fifth Innings.

Erie—Harris fanned. Byrne made a grand stop of Behan's bounder and threw him out. Wiltse flied to Wilcox. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough — Blount walked. Byrne sacrificed, Gygli to Schaeffer. Blount went to third on Dorbeck's needless throw to second. Welsh drove a sacrifice fly to Dawson scoring Blount. King popped to Behan. One run, no hits, one error.

Sixth Innings.

Erie—McNeal flied to Blount. Dorbeck singled to right. Dawson died on a high one which Kelly grabbed. Dunn hoisted to King. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—Wilcox died on a roller to Dorbeck. Fox grounded to Gygli. Gorman hit to Wiltse and was safe on the pitcher's interference, when Dorbeck touched him as he ran to back up the base. Kelly grounded to Wiltse. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Innings.

Erie—Gygli cracked a liner into Blount's hands. Schaeffer perished on a roller in front of the plate, fielded by Tracey. Harris died on a foul to Kelly.

Peterborough — Tracey fanned. Blount grounded to Dorbeck. Byrne died on a smash to Wiltse. No runs, hits or errors.

Eighth Innings.

Erie—Behan grounded to Tracey. King made a fine catch of Wiltse's high fly to left. McNeal also died on one to the shortstop. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Welsh hit to Behan. He had the throw beaten and went to second on Behan's overthrow. King laid down a perfect bunt and reached first easily. Wilcox grounded to Behan and was out, King going to second. Fox hit to Schaeffer and Welsh scored. Gorman hit a sacrifice fly to Dunn, King coming home. Kelly singled over second. Fox stopped up at third, and when Dorbeck intercepted Dawson's throw to the plate and got Kelly off first, Fox made a break for the plate and was thrown out. Two runs, three hits, one error.

Ninth Innings.

Erie—Dogbeck singled to right. Dawson fanned. Dunn flied to King. Gygli flied to Welsh. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Wilcox Won In 11 Seconds

As a result of an argument over their prowess as runners, a matched race between Outfielder Wilcox and Third Baseman Byrne of the Petes was pulled off at Central Park this morning and aroused considerable interest among the local players. The distance was 100 yards and Wilcox won by three feet in 11 seconds. Manager Curly Blound holding the watch. Byrne shot ahead at the start, but the outfielder came strong in the last fifty yards and breezed home a winner. Several other arguments as to sprinting ability may be settled the same way in a day or two. Meanwhile Knut Belting claims the long distance championship.

BASEBALL

In the Public School League, yesterday, on the King Edward grounds, the King Edward team beat Centrals by 26 to 6.

Bartley of King Edward had a home run with three on bases. He also had a three-base hit to his credit.

Batteries: King Edward — Bartley and Braund; Central—Frost and Mahood.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

Hamilton Herald: For assaulting Umpire Evans during the Saturday game between the Erie and Ottawa clubs in the capital on Saturday, Catcher McNeil of the Sailors, and Manager Smith were handed the stiffest fines ever clapped on by any minor league organization. McNeil, who dealt Evans a heavy blow on the face, knocking him down, was fined $75 and Manager Smith had to part with $60. Both sums were collected before the Erie team took the field at Peterborough yesterday morning.

The trouble arose over the triple play that followed a catch of a fly ball by Shaughnessy. McNeil started the agitation by the Sailors that "Shag" had trapped and not caught the ball, and a disgraceful scene followed. Manager Smith is said to have spat in the umpires face and McNeil ran out from the bench and hit him. On receipt of Umpire Evans' report President Fitzgerald at first fined McNeil $25 and suspended him for two weeks, and handed out the same fine to Smith, with a week's suspension. Later on, though, when informed that McNeil was the only backstop the Sailors were carrying, he raised the fine and did away with the suspension.

"This sort of rowdyism has to stop in the Canadian league, and the severe penalty I handed out will do it, I am sure," said President Fitzgerald. Continuing he said: "This is not the first time that McNeil has been in trouble and it will be the last, for next time I receive a complaint about him, he will be barred from playing in the league. Its the only way to stop disgraceful affairs of the nature of that in Ottawa on Saturday. I do not mind a player or manager showing a fighting spirit and looking for all he can get, but the umpires must be protected."

The president has lifted the $5 fines imposed on Catcher Artie Lage of Ottawa and Kelly Harris of the Erie club. The Ottawa papers played up the little affair as a great big fight, with both players rolling around the infield and battling like wildmen. It was on the strength of the accounts from the capital that the fines were imposed, but Fitzgerald learned later that it was more in the nature of a joke and the fines were lifted.

New First Baseman Has Joined The Petes

First Baseman Swartling arrived in town last night and reported to Manager Blount. Swartling comes from Pittsburg and is an experienced ball player, with a reputation as a good fielder and a hard hitter. He is a big fellow, standing well over the 6 foot mark and looks like a very welcome addition to the Petes. It is not likely that he will jump into the game for a few days, as he has been serving on the grand jury at Pittsburg and has not had a chance to get into shape. He looks fit, however, and a few days should see him in the line-up. Swartling has played with several Central League teams and was with Steubenville in the Inter-State League last season. He has had several chances to go up to the big show.

FOR AMATEUR GARDNERS

"What is the best fertilizer?"

"There is no best. It is as has been said of some sorts of whiskey: It is all good, but some is of course to be preferred. Woodashes have no superior. Stable manure in abundance is excellent, and you want salt, lime, bone-dust, nitrate of soda and so on along with it. Manure or fertilizer on a farm or garden is like money in the bank: You can't get too much of it."

"And what about cultivation?"

"That's another all-important part of the gardening business of pastime. The ground, after it has been thoroughly cleaned up, all stones removed, but weeds and litters to be spared or ploughed under, should be ploughed or spaded. There can't be too much of such breaking, loosening, stirring. Make the garden as loose as an ash heap. In fact it's not a bad plan to use some sticks of dynamite to loosen up the earth, the same as is now done by many when planting fruit trees. The loose ground is the thing to give the roots of trees and vegetables a chance to spread and penetrate downward or toward China."

"Talking about fertilizers, what do you think of liquid manures?"

"Excellent! No doubt about them, and serve two purposes in the summer or dry season. They irrigate while at the same time they furnish plant food or nourishment. Another thing in their favour is the ease with which the liquid may be applied. Take a barrel, whiskey barrel now that they are so plentiful in some quarters, and fill half up with stable or other manure and then fill with water. Let it soak well and there you are, and all you have to do is to dip it out and pour or sprinkle it on. Then you may also easily, more easily, make a liquid manure out of nitrate of soda. In small quantities in the drug store nitrate is rather expensive as a fertilizer, but it may be bought by wholesale, and is then quite reasonable. And it is little less than wonderful how nitrate will nurtle the growth of vegetation."

"And now how about planting?"

"Considerable of it should have been done already, and much is in cold frames and hotbeds and greenhouses. In them is of course out of the question with many who will be likely to take advantage of the city gardening plan as outlined by the park commission and the park superintendent, Mr. Lionel Evans, but as far as hotbed goes it is within the easy reach of anyone with a bit of ambition and disposition to do a little extra work on the side. It isnt much of a job to make an enclosure something after the fashion of a wagon bed covered with framed grass. In it have the best soil you can get or make, and get in the seeds early. Any suggestion as to hotbeds and cold frames comes rather late now, when it is even high time to be getting in seeds and plants in the open garden. Onions, peas, lettuce and parsley may go in any old time the ground is fit, and so also radishes, as well as other varieties. Any seedsman would be glad to give information, which, indeed, is generally printed on the seed packets themselves.

INHERIT THE LAND

In a recent issue of Farm and Dairy, I read with interest the article under the above caption. It is only natural that if there are men, or correctly speaking, sons, in the family, that they should inherit the land; that is, the farm or lot on which they were raised. I do not quite agree with a section of the above-mentioned article, however, in which we are told that "the chances of marriage are slim. They (the girls) have worked away all the beauty that attracts, in building up that fine farm of which their brother is now the proud possessor."

I feel that this can be honestly contradicted, perhaps even by the writer, who herself might be a blushing dairy maid, or old maid, since such pessimistic thoughts are expressed in regard to matrimony. Why should their chances of marriage be slim? I know several fine athletic young farm girls who can handle horses and pitch sheaves in as graceful a manner as they handle themselves in a ballroom. They have not worked away "all the beauty that attracts."

On perusing the article further we read that expression, "worked to death." Most farmers' wives know that in spite of the many duties that are placed upon them in addition to the daily household routine and housewifery, that they have just as good a time, if not better, than most city was an exception.

What father of a family does not think as much of his daughters as his sons? Certainly his sons are out plowing and tending stock, but are not his daughters helping their mother in the house and doing just as important a duty on the farm, namely, preparing the meals?

Yes, the daughters should be mentioned in the will and inherit some fraction of the farm, either in a pecuniary fashion or in some other way, so long as they are not forgotten. Certainly the girls should be remunerated, for when labor is scarce, as at present, and men will not leave the towns to work in the country, girls play an important part on the farm, and are as good as, if not better than, some men.

Wake up, fathers, and look to your daughters as well as sons. Remember they want a little remuneration, and are generally "on the go" whilst we men are sitting reading Farm and Dairy and other farm journals.

IT TAKES MORE THAN a piece of chalk and a tape line to produce originality in clothes.
THAT'S WHY SOME makers find their styles such a hit-and-miss proposition. True style must be genuine throughout, not a mere echo of someelse's genius.
Society Brand Clothes
have won the custom of punctiliously dressed men, simply because their style sparkles with the force and personalty of a master-designer.
ASK US TO SHOW YOU this season's models, you'll find yourself well repaid.

The "Maple Leaf" Band Discourses Sweet Music.

There are many things—like the modest violet, "born to blush unseen"—or unheard. How few people appreciate the fact that twice, weekly an Alfresco Concert, of good quality, is given outside the Royal Theatre by the Maple Leaf Band, the members of which, under the able conductorship of Mr. A. Armitage, have been brought to a high pitch of musical attainment, and this is all free gratis and for nothing! It may not be generally known that this Band is open for engagements for picnics, moonlight excursions, garden parties, and entertainments of all kinds, by arranging with the Conductor at 196 King Street.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS
Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

WORTH REMEMBERING

It is easier to put up the pea trellis before the peas come up.

Cabbage, cauliflower and kohl rabi may bet set out early in May.

Set out strawberries, raspberries and other hardy plants or shrubs.

Keep a sharp lookout for the cut worms. They will soon be active.

Plant spinach, radish, lettuce, onions, peas and other early garden vegetables.

Start a few muskmelons, cucumbers and watermelons in pots or boxes in the cold frame.

The hop vine, wild cucumber, cardinal climber, and morning glory are good annual vines to use as screens.

Pergolas or summer-houses may be made not only beautiful but useful by growing the wild grape or Beta grape over them.

Use plenty of manure in the garden. Good cultivation and plenty of plant food is responsible for most of the "good luck."

Many flowering annuals, such as petunias and portalacas, may be sown in the open ground as soon as it is well warmed.

Early May is not too late to set out a few King raspberries, Senator Dunlop strawberries, Beta grapes, or Perfection currants.

Prune gooseberries and currants in May if it has not already been done. Take out old, weak wood and any new shoots that are crowding.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN SAWYERS.
The death occurred this afternoon, at 1.30 at the Hospital of Mrs. John Sawyers, after an extended illness that occasioned her confinement in the Hospital during the past four years. The deceased was born in Smith Township, in 1843, her maiden name being Mary Jane Sanderson. Her husband predeceased her three years ago. She is survived by five brothers: Michael of Lakefield, James of Saskatchewan, Frank of Peterborough, Edward of Smith, and William of Asphodel; and one sister, Mrs. J. McKee of Smith.

The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

ARTHUR STANLEY WILSON.
There passed away on Sunday last Arthur Stanley Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wilson, Ops, after a short illness of two weeks, death being due to typhoid fever.

The deceased young man was well and favourably known throughout the community and his death is sincerely regretted. He was in his 23rd year and is survived by his loving parents and the following brothers and sisters: John, George and William, in Ops; Mrs. Thos. Endicott, Ops; Mrs. Wood, of Hall's Bridge; Miss Mildred Wilson, of Peterborough Normal School; Miss Ruby Wilson, teacher at Hall's Bridge, and Jennie, Pearl and Etna, at home.

The late Mr. Wilson was born in Ops township, in the same home in which he died.

MICHAEL HOLLAND.
Last night about ten o'clock the death occurred in Enismore of Mr. Michael Holland, after an illness of several months. Deceased was 39 years of age, and was very well known in Ennismore, where his death will be deeply regretted. He was born in that township and resided there all his life.

He is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Holland, as well as four brothers, Daniel, John, James, Joseph and William, and one sister, Miss Kate, all of Enismore.

The funeral will be held to-morrow morning at nine o'clock from the family residence Lot 7 Con. 8, Ennismore, to St. Martin's Church and cemetery.

MISS ELLEN PLUNKETT.
The death occurred yesterday morning, early, of Miss Ellen Plunkett, a very well known and highly esteemed resident of Keene after a lingering illness. Miss Plunkett's disease was a painful one, but during the years she suffered she bore the pain with extreme fortitude. She was 39 years of age and passed away at the Nicholls Hospital.

The deceased lady was born in the County of Fermanagh, Ireland, but came to Canada a number of years ago. For years before her death she resided with her aunt, Mrs. William Plunkett, Keene. During her residence in that Village she won many friends who will be sorry to learn of her death.

The late Miss Plunkett is survived by two brothers, William and Mark, and three sisters, Mrs. Humphries, Mrs. Stark and Mrs. Gainor.

The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of her aunt, Mrs. Wm. Plunkett, Keene, to Fife's Cemetery.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKET

Latest reports point to holiday dullness, with bullish specialty activity in the absence of important developments. The current debate in Congress regarding the administration on anti-Trust measures may bring prominently before the country through the efforts of the opposition party in Congress. The fact is that political attacks on the corporations are "killing the goose that lays the golden business egg." We regard this as very important. WHY ARE VOLCANOES?

Japan's latest horror calls attention to recent studies as to the origin and the nature of volcanoes. It cannot be said that much which is definite has been learned since the San Francisco disaster, but new theories which work fairly well with observed phenomena, have been promulgated.

According to the latest theories the Nebular Hypothesis of Laplace has been set aside. Solar systems arise from the contact or near contact of two suns, the planets and their satellites being built up out of old material. It is now claimed that the earth is neither a molten mass nor compressed gas, but solid material of about the weight of steel built up during a cataclysm unknown millions of years ago; that the sun is a composite of two colliding suns; that the moon was never a portion of the earth, but was captured by the latter, and that the great spaces occupied by our seas are not the result of material sloughed off, nor of mere krinkling of the earth's surface, but the result of hard bumps from other celestial bodies.

If these theories are correct, it involves a restatement of the principles of seismology. It is held that the molten lava in no case extends far below the surface of the earth; that these interior lakes are a result of the original cataclysm, and are relatively small in content.

It is true that a large portion of the earth's surface is affected by volcanic action and surface shifts, but it is held that the results would be much more serious if the whole interior of the earth were molten.

Japan is notably the greatest scene of volcanic activity in the world. Earth tremblings are almost constant, and disasters have been many from eruptions and tidal waves, but we are assured that there would be no Japan at all were it not hat the underlying lakes of lava were comparatively shallow. Things are never so bad but what they might be worse. — Philadelphia Inquirer.

We wish to call your attention to our Line of Refrigerators

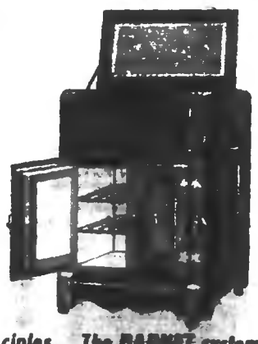
Our ICELAND is the lowest-priced Refrigerator we carry, but there is nothing cheap about it except the price. The same perfect system of circulation is to be found in the ICELAND as in the more expensive lines. The same care in construction and the same perfect-working qualities. Priced from $8.50 to $13.00.



Our NORSEMAN Refrigerators have all the necessary features that go to make up a good working Refrigerator at a popular price Outside case is made of thoroughly seasoned Northern Ash, finished in Golden Oak. Priced at $12.00 to $18.50.

Our ARTIC Refrigerators are made of Northern Ash, finished in Golden Ash. The linings are pure white enamel on galvanized steel. The enamel used is the best quality that money can buy, making it a sanitary and desirable lining. Priced from $14.00 to $22.00.

We challenge competition and comparison on the BARNET Refrigerator. They are constructed on scientific principles. The BARNET system of ventilation solves the problem of pure-air refrigeration. There are eight walls to protect the ice and maintain a low uniform temperature in the inside. Made in Ash, Birch and Oak. Linings in the better "BARNETS" are of genuine Porcelain. Priced at $14.00 to $50.00.

Relic Of Andree?

Balloon Found in Siberia May Be That of Explorer

INVESTIGATION IS ORDERED

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 28.—What is believed to be the remains of the balloon in which Prof. Salagon A. Andree ascended from Dane's Island, near Spitsbergen, July 11,1897, in an attempt to reach the North Pole, have been found in a forest in eastern Siberia, according to a telegram received at the Swedish Foreign Office yesterday from Yakuts.

A thorough investigation of the reported discovery has been ordered by the Government.

The Arctic explorer was accompanied by two scientists, and after leaving Dane's Island no report was ever received from the party.

Although traces of Andree's balloon have been reported at various places from time to time, and while even the body of the family Swedish Arctic explorer was said to have been discovered on the coast of Labrador, nothing has ever definitely been established as to what actually happened to the expedition or what became of the balloon.

Andree and his two companions, Messrs. Strindberg and Fraenkel, started from Dane's Island in the hope of being carried by trade winds to the North Pole. The explorer believed the steady current of air would take him into the polar regions in a week, carry him over the Pole and land him safely in North America.

Five buoys from the balloon have been picked up. The first found in Norway, in June, 1899, contained a note from Andree, and was thrown out eight hours after his departure. The "North Pole buoy," to be dropped when the Pole was passed, was found empty off King Charles Island in September, 1899. A third, a fourth and a fifth buoy were found at different intervals later.

Went To Death Blindfolded.

TRENTON, N.J., May 28.—To shut out the sight of the death chair and the witnesses, Raefaelo Longo, who was put to death in the state prison here Tuesday night for the murder of his cousin, insisted on blindfolding himself before leaving his cell.

Longo was married in the death house Monday night so that his wife, to whom he had been joined by religious ceremony many years ago, could obtain some property he possessed in Italy.

Kingston Resident Killed.

KINGSTON, May 28. — Ambrose Cloram, middle aged, was thrown out of his buggy when his horse ran away last night, and died in the Hotel Dieu Hospital from the injuries he received.

THIN FOLKS WHO WOULD BE FAT

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of malnutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment, for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists every where and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

No Change Is Made

C. N. R. Resolutions are Reported Without Amendment

FORMAL DIVISION IS TAKEN

OTTAWA, May 28. — The resolutions authorizing the governor-in-council to guarantee the bonds of the Canadian Northern Railway Co., upon certain conditions, including the grant of 40 per cent. of the capital stock of the company to the Government of Canada, were reported last night from the committee of the whole without amendment. At today's sitting if the report of the committee is concurred in, a bill founded upon the resolutions will be introduced and read a first time.

The Opposition have given notice of a number of amendments which will be debated and voted upon today. Hon. Frank Oliver will urge equalization of rates, and Hon. William Pugsley will ask to have limited the running rights over the Government railways now proposed to be granted to the Canadian Northern.

At yesterday's sitting Mr. Pugsley moved an amendment to section 14 of the resolutions, which had for its object the prevention of all stock watering by the subsidiary companies to be included in the Canadian Northern system.

The resolutions, as presented by the Government, limited the capital stock of the Canadian Northern Railway to $100,000,000, which cannot be increased without the consent of Parliament, but the other companies constituting the Canadian Northern system may increase their capital with the consent of the governor-in-council.

Mr. Pugsley's amendment would forbid any of these companies to increase their capital without the sanction of Parliament, and it received the support of Mr. Bennett (Calgary), Mr. Nickle (Kingston), and Mr. Maclean (South York).

Clause 14 of the resolution, permitting the subsidiary companies to increase their capital stock issues with the consent of the govenor-in-council, was denounced by Sir Wilfrid Laurier as a license to water stock indefinitely and to increase freight rates.

The Prime Minister said that he did not think at all that freight rates depended upon stock and bond issues, but rather upon physical valuations and other factors.

Solicitor-General Meighen thought it immaterial, so far as dividends went, for what amounts the subsidiary companies were capitalized. Their stock was owned by the Canadian Northern and the capital of the Canadian Northern was limited to $100,000,000. The Canadian Northern could only demand rates high enough to meet fixed charges and dividends upon $100,000,000.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley's amendment was defeated upon a rising vote. Messrs. R. B. Bennett, W. F. Nickle and W. F. Maclean supporting the amendment.

At the afternoon sitting Hon. Frank Oliver gave notice of his amendment requiring the Canadian Northern system to file a schedule of rates for Western Canada with the Board of Railway Commissioners within two months after the passage of the act bringing into force the same rates for Western Canada as those effective in Ontario and Quebec, except as for such difference as the company may be able to justify by proving higher cost of operation in the west.

WILL START ACT.

Oregan Expert Makes Preparations For Compensation Law.

TORONTO, May 28.—The highest praise of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Act is given by F. W. Hinsdale, the Washington expert whom the Government have brought over to set the machinery in motion. The staff needed to enforce it, he states, will not be large in number, and it has been phrased to give maximum efficiency with minimum labor.

The special work of Mr. Hinsdale will be to install a complete office system and enter the names of every manufacturer in Ontario, and the details of his business.

Mr. Hinsdale is secretary of the Oregon commission and was released to Ontario for two months by special permission, in the hope that interchange of work would prove beneficial to the operation of both commissions.

WAGES FOR JAIL-BIRDS.

Hon. Mr. Hanna Prepares To Enforce Recent Legislation.

TORONTO, May 28.—The Ontario Government, in a new policy of conducting industrial farms in the province, is about to do away with the privation and want suffered by wives and families of men sent to jail for idleness. By a series of regulations arranged for at the last legislative session and now put into working shape, the earnings of a person sentenced to an industrial farm will hereafter be applied to his own maintenance and that of his immediate dependent relatives. His wages will also be used to pay for his transportation to a place of employment on his release.

The main object of placing these institutions on a new basis of efficiency is to provide open-air employment and moral and physical reformation methods for persons otherwise lying in idleness in a common jail. Jail maintenance will also be cut down materially by making the industrial farms self-sustaining.

The principal clause states that any person convicted of being drunk and disorderly in a public place within three months after a conviction for a similar offence may be committed for an indeterminate period not exceeding two years.

It is made clear that every one sent to a farm must be prepared to work.

As rewards to those who work there is set aside a two-hour period in the evening for recreation, and minor privileges are distributed on the same basis. The day on the farms beings at 6.30 and ends with lights out at nine.

Hon. Mr. Hanna expects the venture into this field after a two-year successful experiment at Fort William to revolutionize the system of police court sentences for old offenders.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

There is no truth in the report that the Duke of Connaught will become Lord Lieutenant of Ireland on leaving Canada.

Yesterday was the hottest May 27 in the history of the New York Weather Bureau. The mercury reached 91, and two deaths and many prostrations were reported.

Lieut. Charles Becker, his counsel says, will confess to nothing, and there will be no activities in his behalf other than the preparation and furtherance of his appeal.

Wm. Rockefeller insists that he is not physically able to testify before the U. S. Interstate Commerce Commission; that his voice will not permit him to go on the stand.

With ancient rite the coffin containing the body of the late Empress Dowager Haruko of Japan was placed yesterday in a grave at the Imperial mausoleum of Monoyama.

Olaf Singlason and Wilde Larson, Swedes, were killed by an explosion of dynamite at Cedar Rapids, Que. A spark from a steam shovel set fire to a newly-opened box of dynamite.

A severe cold wave spread over Southwestern Europe yesterday. Several inches of snow fell in some places in southeastern France, while heavy rains were reported from other regions.

The reports received by the Post-office Department, indicate that the parcel post service is being very generally patronized, especially in the large centres, and the results are fully up to anticipations. The system is proving profitable.

HE WANTED TO DIE.

But Neither Water Nor Train Would Kill This Chap.

TORONTO, May 28. — Twice within an hour last evening did Alfred Blyth, who gives his address as Swansea, attempt to commit suicide, but on both occasions was miraculously saved from death, and finally was lodged in No. 3 police station, charged with attempted suicide.

About 8.30 Blyth tried to drown himself by jumping into the lake off Strachan avenue, but was pulled out in the nick of time by two men rowing along the lake front.

Saved from a watery grave, Blyth hit upon an idea to end his life on land, and selected the railway tracks just north of the Parkdale subway. A cattle train was just pulling in, travelling about six miles an hour, and Blyth threw himself down flat on the tracks right in front of the cowcatcher. A bump from a bar underneath caused him to cry out loud and the engineer crammed on brakes and brought the train to a standstill. Upon investigation he found Blyth pinned underneath the train, his head projecting over the steel rail, and the rear wheel just touching him. Before Blyth could be hauled out from under the engine the men had to jack up the rear wheels. Blyth was unhurt.

Ulsterites Win Election.

LONDON, May 28. — All eyes in Ulster were turned on the Tyrone county council elections yesterday, and there is great jubilation among the Ulsterites who have secured a narrow majority of one.

Voters crossed from Canada and the United States. When a Glasgow steamer with six Nationalists and one Unionist voter was delayed off Moville, it was alleged that the casualty had been planned. But the voters reached the booths just before closing time. The register, being a local government one, included women voters. Ulster remains as quiet as the grave.

Tug Caught Fire.

KINGSTON, May 28.—The tug Umbria, owned by Fallon Bros., contractors, caught fire in the harbor yesterday. The captain felt it unwise to keep the engines going on account of the fire, so he let the tug drift to Belles Island while playing a stream of water on her, and thus the craft was saved.

German Filibuster Lands War Munitions for Huerta

U. S. CAPTAIN OUTWITTED

VERA CRUZ, May 28.—Gen. Funston announced yesterday afternoon that late on Saturday the Hamburg-American liner Bavaria landed at Puerto Mexico, 1,500,000 rounds of ammunition and 3,327 rolls of barbed wire, all consigned to the Huerta Government. The information was given to Funston by an American who was a passenger on the Bavaria. He arrived here on Sunday, immediately sought Gen. Funston, and gave him a complete story. When the Bavaria arrived here Tuesday and Capt. Stickney, collector of the port, went aboard, the captain of the Bavaria told him that he had lost his manifest. Capt. Stickney demanded a full explanation, and informed the captain that the vessel would be held pending the outcome of the investigation. However, the vessel has not yet been seized.

Finally, following positive demands of Capt. Stickney, the captain of the Bavaria admitted the landing of the ammunition, some of which has already reached Cordova. Whether or not the ammunition reached Mexico City has not been ascertained here so far. The ammunition was all consigned originally to Vera Cruz, but this port being closed, the German ship sneaked into Puerta, Mexico, and managed to land before detection. Capt. Stickney, it is stated, will inflict a fine upon the German captain for coming to Vera Cruz without a manifest.

Huerta Played To Quit.

MEXICO, CITY, May 28.—Reports reaching here yesterday through private sources declare that President Huerta has specifically committed himself to turn over the Government to a commission composed of prominent members of the various factions in the republic, such as has been suggested at the Niagara Falls peace conference. He is also said to have agreed to relinquish power to any successor which such a commission might select.

The report further says that Huerta's determination has already been communicated to the Mexican delegates and probably directly to the Washington Government.

CHARLES SCADDING DEAD.

Late Bishop of Oregon Was Great-Grandson of John Scadding.

PORTLAND, Ore., May 28. — The Rt. Rev. Charles Scadding, D.D., Anglican Bishop of Oregon, died here early yesterday of pleuro-pneumonia. He broke down while presiding at the diocesan conference several days ago. He was 53 years old.

The ancestors of the late Bishop Scadding settled in York County in 1792. He was a great-grandson of John Scadding, who came to Upper Canada with Lieut.-Governor Simcoe.

Born in 1861, the late prelate graduated at Trinity College, Toronto. He was ordained deacon in 1885 and priest in 1886, in the former year becoming curate of St. John's, Buffalo. He later became assistant to Rev. Dr. Rainsford at St. George's Church, New York, and was successively rector of Christ Church, Middleton, N.Y.; Trinity Church, Toledo, Ohio, and Emmanuel Church, La Grange, Ill. He was consecrated third Bishop of Oregon in 1906.

HE LEFT $20,000,000.

Late Lord Strathcona's Estate Pays Death Duties of $4,189,190.

LONDON, May 28.—The personal property left by the late Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, former High Commissioner for Canada, amounted to $23,257,010. This was disclosed when probate was granted yesterday.

The precise value of the real estate left by the testator, who died in London January 21, this year, was not made public, but the fact that the duty paid amounted to $4,189,190 indicates that his entire estate, real and personal, had a total value of $27,28,000. Most of his holdings were railway, bank and steel stocks.

The household effects in Lord Strathcona's Grosvenor Square residence have been valued at $130,000, and his pictures at $80,000 more. His lordship's interest in the Hudson Bay Company amounted to $1,240,000, and in the Anglo-Persian syndicate to $240,000. His interest in Baring Brothers is valued at $220,000.

Electrical Inventor Dead.

LONDON, May 28.—The death occurred yesterday of Sir Joseph Wilson Swan, inventor of the first incandescent electric lamp. He was 85 years of age and was born in Sunderland, Eng., and in 1879 succeeded in solving the problem of producing incandescent light and thus making possible the general use of electricity for lighting purposes. He was the inventor of many other electrical devices, including a miner's safety lamp and an electric meter.

Detective Burns Acquitted.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 28. — Judge Hill dismissed the charge of contempt of court brought against Detective W. J. Burns and his assistant, Lehan, who had removed Anna Carter, a colored witness, from the jurisdiction of the court, but later had returned her. Lehan was fined $100 for violating city ordinances governing private detectives.

Expects Lynching Bee.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the British novelist, accompanied by Lady Doyle, arrived at New York yesterday on the White Star liner Olympic. He is on his way to Canada.

Conan Doyle said that England had stood all that it could from the militant suffragettes, and that he anticipated a wholesale lynching bee.

"The English Government," he said, "follows public opinion, and thus far public opinion has not demanded the entire suppression of the suffragette. But it is on the point of doing so, and when the English mob is thoroughly aroused, it is not a respecter of sex."

MODERN KRYPTOK BIFOCALS

Do you wear the old style conspicuous cemented Bifocal lenses, or do you wear the modern KRYPTOK Invisible Bifocals? How often you see people wearing a very conspicuous sort of Bifocal Glasses—the kind with divided lenses for near and far vision.

KRYPTOKS do away with this.

They are light solid lenses with perfectly even, unbroken surfaces. There is no dividing line which keeps you ducking and dodging to see over, nothing but a beautiful clear lens through which you read and look afar with equal facility.

We have the EXCLUSIVE right to sell these lenses for this City and vicinity.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By LOUIS TRACY

"Yes," she said composedly. "It was hardly necessary, but I wanted to dispose of my last doubt; though in my own mind I was sure of the ground already. My father went straight to Denver on receipt of that letter, and, of course, chanced to travel by the same train as Hugh Marten, the man to whom the whole amount of the mortgage was little more than a day's income. Marten was gracious, the lawyer-man adamant. Within a week I was told of a new suitor and of my father's certain and complete ruin if I refused him. . . . Ah, me! How I wept! . . . When did you post your first letter, Derry?"

"Two days after I arrived at the Placer mine," he replied unhesitatingly. The chief revelation in Nancy's story was her crystal-clear knowledge of facts which he flattered himself, he had kept from her ken. Then his heart leaped at the thought that she had known of his love fro mthe night they met in the dining-room of the Ocean House. But he checked back the rush of sentiment; for she was demanding his close attention.

"And I wrote on or about that same date," she went on. "My father—Heaven forgive him!—stole your letters to me; but the scheme for suppressing my letters to you must have been concocted before you went to Sacramento. Such foul actions are unforgivable! I, for one, refuse to be bound by the fetters which they forged. I come to you, my dear, as truly your wife, as unstained in soul and body, as though Hugh Marten had never existed!"

A sudden note of passion vibrated in her voice, and Power realized, by a lightning flash of intuition, with what vehement decision she had severed already the knot which seemed to bind her so tightly. He fancied it was her due that he should endeavour to relax an emotional strain which was becoming unbearable.

"It's a mighty good thing we are Americans," he said. "Here divorce is neither hard to obtain nor highly objectionable in its methods. We—at any rate, I—must consult some lawyer of experience. The laws differ in various states. That which is murder and sudden death in Ohio is a five dollar proposition in Illinois; but the legal intellect will throw light on our difficulty. Meanwhile——"

He stopped awkwardly, aware that, although she was apparently listening to his words, they were making no impression on her senses. A sudden silence fell, and the hitherto unheeded noises of the night smote on his ears with uncanny loudness. To leisured plash of waves so tiny that they might not be dignified by the name of breakers swelled into a certain strength and volume as his range of hearing spread, and the faint cries of invisible sea-fowl now jarred loudly on the quietude of nature. A pebble rolled down the cliff, and he could mark its constantly accelerated leaps until it reached the shingle with a crash which, even to a case-hardened pebble, betokened damage.

"Meanwhile——" prompted Nancy, in a still, small voice.

So she had followed what he was saying. What was it that he meant to say? Something about the rocks and shoals that lay ahead before he could take her to some safe anchorage. Nevertheless, he shied off at a tangent, and chose haphazard the one topic which his sober judgment might have avoided.

"I was about to utter a banal remark; but it may as well be put on record and dismissed," he said. "It is fortunate that I am a rich man. Mere weight of money can achieve nothing against us; while the possession of ample means will simplify matters in so far as we are concerned personally."

"Were those really the words on the tip of your tongue, Derry?"

"Well, no," he admitted.

"Are you afraid of hurting my feelings?"

"You are right, Dear. As between you and me there should be no concealment. We have to face the immediate future. We must consider how to surmount the interval, short though it may be——"

"Interval! What interval?"

"You cannot secure a divorce without some sort of legal process, and the law refuses to be hurried."

"Ah, yes. Divorce—law—they are words which have little meaning here and now."

"But they are all-important. Awhile ago you spoke of your Paris friends, and there are others, like Mrs. Van Ralten, whose sympathies and help will be of real value in years to come. You see, I want to hold your pretty little head higher as Mrs. John Darien Power than you ever held it as Mrs. Hugh Marten."

"That will cost no great effort, Derry. If we have to pass through an ordeal of publicity, we can surely use the vile means for our own ends, so that our friends may know the whole truth. . . . Derry, if you were not such a good and honourable man, you would not be so dense."

In his anxiety to follow each twist and turn of her reasoning he had crept nearer, and was now on his knees, having imprisoned her hands in his, and peering intently into her face. In that dim light her eyes shone light faintly luminous twin stars, and he laughed joyously when, to his thinking, he had solved the doubt that was troubling her.

"It will help any that all the world should know that I, the aforesaid John Darien Power, have been, and I am and will ever remain frantically in love with a lady heretofore described as Nancy Willard. I shall mail a signed statement to that effect on the Casino notice-board to-morrow," he vowed.

She gently released her hands, placed them lovingly on his cheeks, and drew him close, so that he could not choose but yield to any demand she might make.

"Derry," she said, kissing him with that soothing air of maternity which is a woman's highest endowment, "though I am going to say something dreadfully forward and bold, I shall risk all lest I lose you, and, if that happens, my poor heart will break and be at rest forever. Even now you do not see whither I am leading you. You never would see unless I spoke plainly. My love for you may be fierce—and terrible; but I am only a weak woman, a woman just emerged from girlhood, and I want to be saved from myself. If, for your dear sake, I am to cut adrift from the past, I cannot be left alone. My your side I can face the storm, but I shudder at the thought of protests, appeals, influences perhaps more potent than I imagine in my present new-found mood of hatred of the wrong which has been done me. Derry, why, do you think, I have asked you to leave Newport early to-morrow?"

Stirred by a common impulse, they both stood upright. All at once she seemed to be unable to bear his burning gaze any longer, and her head sank on his breast. He had thrown a protecting arm around her shoulders, and he felt her ample body quiver under a sob which she tried to restrain.

"Nancy," he whispered, "am I to take you with me?"

"Yes," she said brokenly.

"You mean that we are to be a law unto ourselves, and thereby make divorce proceedings inevitable? I must put it that way, dear one? I must understand?"

"Yes, Derry. You must understand. There is no other way."

He held her so tightly that he became aware of the mad racing of her heart, and a great pity stirred his inmost core. How she must have suffered! What agony was this forced discarding, one by one, of her maidenly defenses! Though he had been blind and deaf solely because of the depth and intensity of his love and reverence, he could utter now only a halting plea that would explain his slowness of perception.

"Forgive me, Dear," he murmured. "I can find nothing better to say than that—forgive me! I was so absorbed in my own dream of happiness that I gave no heed to the means. But I shall never again be so thoughtless."

"Thoughtless!" She raised her sweet face once more, tear-stained and smiling. "You thoughtless, Derry? Women thank God for that sort of thoughtlessness in men like you!"

And with that, before he could forestall or even divine her intentions, she had withdrawn from his embrace, and had run lightly up half a dozen of the Forty Steps.

"Come!" he cried, with an alteration of manner and voice that was almost stupefying to her hearer. "We have been here an unconscionable time, and just think how awful it will be if our cabman has taken home his tired horse! Of course, even at the twelfth hour, I have loads of things to pack." And, since I don't know where I am going, the task of selecting a reasonable stock of clothes is too appalling for words. Oh, don't gaze at me as if I were a ghost, Derry! I am now about to flit away into space. You will have another half hour of my company; because, let that poor horse do his best, we sha'n't reach our respective habitations till long after eleven o'clock."

Yet she was neither excited nor hysterical. A great load had been lifted from her heart, and her naturally gay temperament was asserting itself with vital insistence. There was no possibility of drawing back now. Nothing but death could separate her from her lover. Nothing but death! Well, that separation must come in the common order of things; but a bright road stretched before her mind's eye through a long vista of years, and her spirit sang within her and rejoiced exceedingly. No shred of doubt or hesitation remained. She had passed already through the storm, and though its clouds might roll in sullen thunder among distant hills, yet awhile, the particular hilltop on which she stood was bathed in sunlight.

Above all else, despite her complete trust in Power, she thrilled with the consciousness that her love contained a delicious spice of fear, and that is why she climbed the Forty Steps in a sort of panic, so that he marvelled at her change of mood, and discovered in it only one more of the enchantments with which his fancy clothed her.

The driver regarded them as a moonstruck couple, since that sort of moon shines ever on fine evenings by the sea. He was obviously surprised when the lady's address was given, because he expected a return journey to one of Newport's many boarding-houses; but any suspicions he may have entertained were dispelled when he witnessed a polite farewell in the presence of a pompous butler, and heard Nancy say:

"I am going straight to my room to write that letter to my father. Then I shall finish packing. What time is the train—nine o'clock. Good-night, Derry! Sleep well!"

If he thought at all about the matter, the cabman might well have imagined that no young lady in Newport that night had used words less charged with explosive properties; yet no giant cannon on the warships swinging to their moorings in the bay could have rivaled the uproar those few simple sentences might create. Moreover, he heard the gentleman address the butler by name, and witnessed the transference of a tip, accompanied by the plain statement that the giver was leaving Newport early next day. Indeed, once he had deposited his fare at the Ocean House, the man probably gave no further heed to one or other of the pair who had some foolish liking for a prolonged stroll on the cliffs overlooking the Atlantic, nor, to his knowledge, did he ever again see them, or even hear their names spoken of.

(To be continued.)

Persia's Sorrowful Tree.

There is a tree in Persia to which the name "the sorrowful tree" is given, perhaps because it blossoms only in the evening. When the first star appears in the heavens the first bud of the sorrowful tree opens and as the shades of night advance and the stars thickly stud the sky the buds continue gradually opening until the whole tree looks like one immense white flower. On the approach of dawn, when the brilliancy of the stars gradually fades in the light of day, the sorrowful tree closes its flowers and ere the sun is fully risen not a single blossom is visible. A sheet of flower dust as white as snow covers the ground around the foot of the tree, which seems blighted and withered during the day, while, however, it is actively preparing for the next nocturnal festival. The fragrance of the blossoms is like that of the evening primrose.

For Husbands.

A clergyman took down a small volume.

"This is called," he said, "the 'Instructions of Ptah-ho-Tep.' It is one of the very oldest papyrus writings known. It gives, among other things, advice to husbands, and that advice is as good today as it ever was. Listen."

And he read:

"'If thou be wise furnish thy house well.

"'Woo thy wife ever and never quarrel with her.

Thought Nothing But Death Would End Her Misery.

WAS TROUBLED WITH Heart Disease.

Mrs. J. D. Talbut, Owen Sound, Ont., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from heart disease, and leaking valves. I have had resource to every kind of treatment I could think might help me, including the skill of several doctors. I suffered so for years that at times I have felt that nothing but death could end my misery. I was advised by a friend, who had suffered untold pain and misery, just as I had, and had been cured by Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, to give them a trial, so I decided to do so. I am delighted with the result, as I am now completely cured, and can eat and sleep as I have not done for years.

You are at liberty to use my name at any time as I am convinced they are the best pills on the market for any form of heart disease."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AFTER SUFFERING TWO LONG YEARS

Mrs. Aselin Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Minneapolis, Minn.—"After my little one was born I was sick with pains in my sides which the doctors said were caused by inflammation. I suffered a great deal every month and grew very thin. I was under the doctor's care for two long years without any benefit. Finally after repeated suggestions to try it we got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking the third bottle of the Compound I was able to do my housework and today I am strong and healthy again. I will answer letters if anyone wishes to know about my case."—Mrs. JOSEPH ASELIN, 628 Monroe St., N.E., Minneapolis, Minn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy we know for woman's ills. If you need such a medicine why don't you try it?

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

When the Worm Turned.

Recently a man omitted to hand his tailor a few chunks of silver in exchange for good togs, and after writing a reasonable length of time the tailor party sued for the amount of the bill.

Thus it was that he found himself on the witness stand one day with the insistent lawyer for defendant trying to establish the point that his client had three months in which to pay for the goods and that that time had scarcely elapsed.

"Now, sir, Mr. Tailor Man," mercilessly continued the lawyer, "had I bought those clothes instead of my client, would you have summoned me into court at this early stage?"

"No, sir," was the prompt rejoinder of the witness.

"Good!" smiled the lawyer, with a satisfied air. "And why not, please?"

"Because," came the answer of the tailor, "in your case it would have been a cash transaction."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Proper Authority.

Always careless in his attire, "Labby," or Mr. Labouchere, at Cambridge, used to go about in a very ragged gown. One day the master of Trinity, Whewell, came across him and said, "Is that a proper academic costume, Mr. Labouchere?"

"Really, sir, I must refer you to my tailor," was the reply.

Blindness and Deafness.

Blindness is more common in men than in women of Great Britain, the proportion, according to the last census returns, being one in every 1,316 males and one in every 1,424 females. As regards deafness, however, the position is reversed.

Move Forward.

GHOSTS OF THE TOWER

ANCIENT STRUCTURE SHOULD HAVE LOTS OF SPOOKS.

Imaginative Sentries Have Reported Queer Manifestations and Traditions Are Extant of the Appearance of the Phantoms of Sir Walter Raleigh and One of Henry VIII.'s Queens.—Swift's Story.

At times, some will tell you, when a wind whistles about the turrets and barred gates of the Tower of London, and out of a break in storm clouds the moon peers down, searching with a silvery light the baileys and sally-ports and prisoners' walks guarded by these high walls, the dark shadow of an axe steals across the blood-soaked plot of ground on Tower Green and stands gaunt and erect, silhouetted against the Norman keep, says The London Telegraph.

Sir Walter Raleigh's phantom is said to have been seen flitting noiselessly about the cells and passages of his long captivity. Suddenly the white figure of a woman has appeared upon the execution ground, and as suddenly vanished — assigned to one of Henry VIII.'s queens.

A sentry, watchful and alert, has fancied that he has heard proceeding from the dungeons of the White Tower, muffled by the immense thickness of the walls, the agonized cries of Guy Fawkes, stretched in torture upon the rack. In all such stories necessarily there must be a large element of imagination. Indeed, considering its crowded past, the ghosts of the Tower of London are remarkably few. One especially stands out in circumstantial detail.

Of these, one happened—properly a ghost happens—to none other than the keeper of the crown jewels. Late in life, when in his 83rd year, Edmund Lenthal Swifte committed to paper the narrative of his eerie experiences, thinking that it should not pass with him to the grave.

He was a man of some distinction, who held his post from 1814 till retirement in 1852, and he played a courageous part in saving the regalia during the terrible fire which destroyed the armory in the Tower in 1841. No one privileged to know him could have questioned the absolute honesty of the assurance with which he closed his story.

"To all which I have set forth," he said, "as seen by myself I absolutely pledge my faith and my honor."

The regalia in his charge was at the time kept in the Martin tower, which forms the northeast angle of the Inner Ward, and there the keeper had rooms with his family. How the spectre appeared to him is best told in his own words:

One Sunday night in October, 1817, I was at supper with my wife, our [illegible] Boy and my wife's sister in the sitting-room of the Jewel house, which is said to have been the doleful prison of Anne Boleyn and of the ten bishops whom Oliver Cromwell nobly accommodated there. The room, irregular shaped, had three doors and two windows cut nine feet deep into the outer wall. The doors were all closed, heavy and dark curtains were let down over the windows, and the only light in the room was that of two candles on the table. I sat at the foot of the table, my son on my right, my wife fronting the chimney piece and her sister on the opposite side.

I had offered a glass of wine and water to my wife, when, on putting it to her lips, she paused and exclaimed: "Good God! what is that?" I looked up and saw a cylindrical figure, like a glass tube, something about the thickness of my arm, and hovering between the ceiling and the table. Its contents appeared to be a dense fluid, white and pale asure, like to the gathering of a summer cloud, and incessantly rolling and mingling within the cylinder. This lasted about two minutes, when it began slowly to move before my sister-in-law, following the oblong shape of the table before my son and myself. Passing behind my wife, it paused for a moment over her right shoulder (observe there was no mirror opposite in which she could then behold it). Instantly she crouched down, and, with both hands covering her shoulder, shrieked out:

"Oh, Christ! It has seized me!"

Even now as I write I feel the horror of that moment. I caught up my chair, striking at the "appearance" with a blow that hit the wainscot behind her. It then crossed the upper end of the table and disappeared in the recess of the opposite window. I rushed upstairs to the other children's room, and told the terrified nurse what I had seen. Meanwhile, other domestics had hurried into the parlor, where their mistress was recounting to them the scene, even as I was detailing it above stairs.

The marvel—some will say the absurdity—of all this is enhanced by the fact that neither my sister-in-law nor my son beheld the "appearance," though to their mortal vision it was as apparent as it was to my wife's and mine.

You will notice that the agitation within the column did not result in the development of a human form, as with the apparition to the Baron de Guidenstubbe, familiar to students of the occult. This obviously was the proper course.

What might have happened but for the unseemly blow struck with the chair, denting the wainscoting, none can tell. Notes and Queries discussed the matter some 60 years ago with much learning, but the only materialistic explanation suggested was a column of fog descending a damp chimney. Mr. Swifte scornfully repelled the idea:

"As if (said he) the densest fog that ever descended could have seized one of us by the shoulder!"

Doesn't Practice as He Preaches.

Thomas Hardy, by entering matrimony for the second time, has gone a long way toward atoning for the many unkind things he has permitted his characters to say about love, marriage and women. The London Chronicle records a few: "Love making and dishonesty are inseparable as coupled hounds." "Yes," says the Parish Clerk. "Matrimony do begin wi' 'Dearly Beloved,' and ends wi' 'amazement,' as the Prayer Book says." "Men love with their eyes; women with their ears." "I like you to desert me a little now and then; love is the dismalest thing where the lover is honest." But Hardy can also say nice things, as when he assures women that the least of their lesser infirmities is love of admiration, and that fondness of jewelry need not make the higher life a failure.

Advice to English Parents.

Don't send your boy out to the colonies just because you don't know what to do with him. Satisfy yourself that he has a natural liking for an outdoor life, and that he is physically adapted for it. Don't send your boy out with unlimited money. Throw him on his own resources and let him prove his mettle. Don't pay a premium. If the boy has any good in him he should be worth his board. Don't send him to an agricultural college in England. The above advice to parents was given in a speech at a Royal Colonial Institute luncheon by Mr. W. E. Scott, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for British Columbia.

Nervous Prostration And Heart Trouble

For Three Years Doctors Struggled With This Disease, and in Vain—Cure Was Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The complete breakdown of the nervous system as in nervous prostration is usually the result of overwork, worry or "burning the candle at both ends."

There are always warnings if you will only recognize them. You find yourself easily fatigued and annoyed. Little things make you irritable. You do not enjoy your work or find yourself forgetful and lacking energy. Headaches may return about the same time each day; there may be nervous indigestion and distress caused by even the simplest food. Gloomy forebodings and hysteria are other symptoms. You may look strong and well and yet be on the verge of nervous collapse.

When threatened by nervous breakdown begin at once the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and escape such serious developments as nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis.

Mrs. H. C. Jones, South Lake C.B., writes:—"I suffered from nervous prostration for nearly three years. I had frequent headaches, had no appetite and was troubled with my heart. After consulting two doctors without satisfactory results, I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and was completely cured by the treatment. It is nearly a year since I was cured, and I want others to know of this splendid medicine. I now attend to my house work with pleasure and comfort and am glad to have the opportunity of recommending Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food 50c. a box, six for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Letter-Sorting by Machinery.

An interesting mechanical addition to the staff of the G. P. O. is undergoing a probationary period at a Liverpool postoffice. It is an elaborate mechanical device for doing a great part of the work of sorting hitherto performed by human hands. In its operation the human element is not eliminated, as the machine requires to be "fed" by hand with letters, but thereafter it both simplifies and accelerates enormously the process of sorting. The letters are dropped into a series of slots ranged compactly together, each slot representing one of the main "reads" into which, for postoffice purposes, the country is divided for the distribution of letters. From the slots the packets are spread out on to moving belts, which convey them to the stamping machine, which forms an auxiliary of the mechanical sorter. The machines are estimated to sort and stamp 500 or more letters per minute, whereas the "record" for hand stamping alone is said to be 110 a minute.

Are We Too Civilized?

The world is over-civilized, according to Sir Thomas Dewar, who says his big game hunting expedition to British East Africa, from which he has just returned, was largely due to his wish to escape from civilization, with its many barbarities.

"We dwell in a vicious atmosphere in small rooms, over here, patronise over-heated restaurants, and, though we eat three meals a day, we do only about one mile in exercise," said Sir Thomas. "Out there in British East Africa the native on one meal a day composed of water that is often half mud, and a handful of mealie flour is able to run 50 miles, live in nature's open air, and keep, as I kept during my stay, perfectly fit and vigorous. That is why I am making still another expedition — to the White Nile this time—in November."

Women Plumbers.

A recent census of England and Wales shows eighty-six women plumbers.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

Witchcraft in India.

The belief in witchcraft is widespread in India, especially among the tribes low in the scale of civilization. The ojha, or exorcist, is an important member of the community. His mummeries and incantations impress not only the lower classes, but even orthodox Rajputs and Kayasths. He is paid to denounce witches, and, with the cunning of his class, he usually chooses harmless old women whose existence is rather a burden upon the village. Some of these women, however, have an implicit belief in their powers for evil as the villagers themselves. Murder frequently follows the denunciation.

ALONE IN A STRANGE LAND.

Australia Viewed as a Great Sifter of the Human Talents.

"During the decade I spent wandering to and fro on the face of tropical Australia I saw the old order slowly changing," writes Bishop Frodsham in the Cornhill. "It has not yet quite gone, but one by one the old hands are 'crossing the great divide'—to use their own metaphor. The successful men die in their southern homes, for, as a rule, these leave the north to build themselves mansions near Melbourne or homes by one of the landlocked inlets of Sydney cove.

"The unsuccessful ones start out alone on their last journey. The busy world who follow in their footsteps quickly forget the men who found and blazed the track. When they read in the papers that such and such an 'early citizen' died at the local hospital or was found dead in his solitary camp they remember for awhile and then again forget. Yet the battered old derelict was not infrequently one whose name will live in the nomenclature of mountains, river and plains.

"One blazing summer noon I met a rough-looking man in the gray shirt and moleskin trousers so characteristic of the bush. He was leaving, as I was entering, a bush 'hotel.' We recognized each other at sight, although we had not met since the night when I sat next him at his regimental mess. I asked him to come and see me and told him he could use any cognomen he liked. But, with the smile I remembered almost painfully, he refused. He had forgotten how to behave, he said. There are many such. They meet their fate, as they met their disgrace, with a nonchalance not the least valuable asset of a gentleman.

"A man who is above the average gets on in Australia far quicker than he could do normally in the old country. But what about the feeble folk who are sent abroad to relieve their friends at home of their presence with a remittance paid regularly upon one condition—that they themselves do not return? What is the frame of mind that makes fathers send such sons to the outposts of civilisation? Is it the same shortsighted optimism as that which makes their boys so little capable of distinguishing between dreams and reality—castles in Spain and the squalid actualities of a bush hotel?"

Who properly minds his p's and q's will prefix one of the former to luck.

The wise man appoints himself chairman of the advisory board of his own affairs.

Proposed Money Lenders' Bill.

The money lenders' bill introduced by Lord Newton was read a third time and passed in the House of Lords recently. The bill proposes to make it compulsory for money lenders always to disclose their real names and to prohibit the sending out of circulars except in response to a written request. The bill is sure to pass the Commons and become a law.

The new treatment for tender skins

Many people with tender skins have been misled by the superstition that washing the face with soap and water is bad for the complexion.

"Dr. Pusey in his book on the care of the skin says: "The layer of dirt and fat that such persons accumulate on the skin is a poor substitute for a clean, clear skin and is a constant invitation to various disorders."

The following treatment with Woodbury's Facial Soap is just what a tender skin needs to keep it attractive and resistant.

See what a difference it will make in your skin

Just before retiring, dip a soft washcloth in warm water and hold it to the face. Do this several times. Then make a light warm water lather of Woodbury's and dip your cloth up and down in it till your cloth is "fluffy" with soft, white lather. Rub this lathered cloth gently over your skin until the pores are opened and thoroughly cleaned. Rinse the face lightly with clear, cool water and dry carefully.

Use this treatment persistently for ten days and your skin will show a marked improvement—a promise of that loveliness which the steady use of Woodbury's brings to a tender, sensitive skin.

Woodbury's Facial Soap costs 25c a cake. No one hesitates at the price after their first cake.

Do this today—now! Tear out the illustration of the cake below and put it in your purse as a reminder to get Woodbury's and try this treatment. Tear out the cake now. Take it to your druggist today. Begin tonight to get the benefit of this facial soap. For sale by Canadian druggists from coast to coast, including Newfoundland.

FAITH HEALING IS CONDEMNED BY CHURCH

Beneficial Only in Cases of Functional Disorders and Suicidal if Practised by Irresponsible Are Findings of Committee.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 23.

THE result of four years' investigation of faith healing and its relation to the Church has been received with considerable satisfaction alike by the clergy and members of the medical profession. The chief findings of the committee are briefly:—

"That faith or spiritual healing, like all treatment by suggestion, can be expected to be permanently effective only in cases of what are called 'functional' disorders, as distinct from organic ailments.

"Those who resort to 'healers' are therefore warned that they may thereby be postponing until too late the medical treatment which might serve to arrest organic disease.

"The committee desires to see an increased importance attached to spiritual ministrations as contributory means to recovery, but it strongly deprecates the independent treatment of disease by irresponsible and unqualified persons."

The Bishop of London commends the report to the earnest attention of the diocese, and the views of the clergy are well summarized by the Rev. F. E. Murphy, of Paddington, who, in conversation with an inquirer, said:—"I entirely agree with the conclusions arrived at by the committee. Good has undoubtedly followed suggestion in nervous diseases, but for really practical purposes and actual disorders it is almost futile. The fact is that the clergy themselves should work with the medical profession to help them when they are dealing with neurotic conditions, but not to interfere with the doctor and his work. Christian Science has been described as neither Christian nor scientific. It is a positive danger to the community, and I do not think it should be allowed to exist. We hold, of course, most strongly that bodily and mental health is influenced for good by spiritual means."

A member of the British Medical Association said:—"I believe it was Dr. that ends in death. In these words was Stephen Paget who once declared that he would like to give a Christian Scientist an overdose of some opiate to see if faith would rouse the patient from the sleep expressed a great bedrock truth and one which I am glad to realize the Church acknowledges. Coroners' courts have told a tale concerning which we have too long been unconcerned. We all recognize the inestimable value of faith. This is an essential element of success everywhere, but faith alone cannot set a broken limb or eradicate the deep laid diseases which imperil life. I myself have many times been indebted to clergymen for kindly help, but their ministrations have not interfered with the processes of medical treatment, which, after all, are a revelation of divine power."

Lord Sandwich, one of the witnesses heard by the Clerical and Medical Committee of Inquiry into the different forms of psycho-therapy and faith healing, recently suggested in the course of an address at University college that the faculty of the College Hospital should devote some part of the organization to the study and practice of mental healing.

The secretary of the hospital, asked regarding this suggestion, said that the faculty had been somewhat startled by it and had not taken any active steps to form the clinic proposed. The matter is, however, still under consideration, as the proposal is quite a valid one, but the medical profession moves slowly and it has been slow to recognize the importance of mental healing.

Mme. M. Lipinska, Laureate de l'Academie de Médicine de Paris, who is in England for the purpose of lecturing on the subject of auto-suggestion, said that in her opinion mental suggestion was invaluable in the curing of functional disorders, but she was extremely sceptical regarding the possibility of such cures as had been claimed by Lord Sandwich.

The German Crown Prince with His Wife and Children

This group of the German Crown Prince and his family was recently taken in Berlin. In the centre is the Crown Prince; seated on his knee is little Frederick, two and a half years old; just behind is standing the second son, Louis, six and a half years old; on the extreme left is the eldest boy, William, just over seven and a half years old; seated on the arm of the chair is the charming wife of the Crown Prince (the Duchess Cecilie); and at her knee is the third boy, Prince Hubert, who is four and a half years old. All four boys are wearing sailor dress.

London Hotels Stealing March on Older Clubs

Latter Behind the Times and Young Men Now Seek Gayer Life of Restaurants.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 23.

THE hotels may have to wait a while longer before they get the same privileges as the night clubs, but hotels and smart restaurants are certainly creating havoc among the older, fashionable clubs of London, that exist merely or chiefly for social intercourse.

"The reason," said a member of the House Committee of a famous Piccadilly Club, "is that the clubs are behind the times. Their buildings are not kept up to date, their furnishings are dowdy, their members lack that sense of sociability that goes such a long way to make a popular club, and they have not the means to smarten up their club premises owing to the rapid decrease in membership and the thinning of the waiting lists. There was a time when every young aristocrat was put on the waiting list of his father's club, just as he was entered for a public school, while he was in his cradle. It was an essential thing in the life of a young man, especially if he lived in the country, that his club should be one of good standing, for the reason that to all intents and purposes his club was his London address. And for this privilege he was willing to pay a large entrance fee of from $50 to $100, and an annual subscription of $105.

"Of late years, however, the young man has become more businesslike and has asked himself whether, all things considered, residence at a hotel is not a cheerful abode for a young man, as the elders resent noises and conversation, and he will go where things are more cheerful. There is no need, however, to anticipate that the London club is doomed, a relaxation of the hard conditions of membership of the best clubs would soon see them filled up. The club must become more democratic, and in that it must follow the trend of the life of the aristocracy in London."

Meals, too, are cheaper and gayer in hotels than in clubs. In a hotel one man may speak to another without the formality of an introduction, but in some clubs such an action would be regarded as improper, and resentment of it would be manifested by a cold stare or a snub.

An example of how the taste of the livelier section of society runs is shown by the success of the Savoy Hotel "souper dansant." In providing facilities for people themselves to dance, instead of merely watching the performances of professionals, the Savoy management struck a popular note, while at the Sunday "diners amusants," at which vaudeville stars are engaged for the evening, there is not a vacant table.

Royal Academy Exhibition Devoid of Works of Very Great Merit

Many Well Known Artists Missing from This Year's Show, Which Is Essentially One of Portraits, and Royalty Occupies Only a Small Place.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 23.

LIKE last year, the Royal Academy of 1914 will be remembered as a portrait academy. And let it be said at once that it is an Academy of very moderate interest. With a few notable exceptions, neither portraits, subject pictures, landscapes, nor anything else possesses more than average merit, and many even less. It is a disappointing Academy; and the reason does not seem far to seek.

Whatever merit the show possesses, is due to the works of well known artists of long standing; but the closest study of the works on the walls of Burlington House fails to discover any promising talent that can compare with the work of those artists who have maintained the reputation of British art for years past. Nor do they exhibit even anything which can be said tends to enhance reputations already made. It is with all the more regret that such artists as Messrs. J. Farquharson, Sir T. G. Jackson, W. F. Yeames, F. Bramley, F. Brangwyn and H. W. B. Davis are missing from this year's show. They can ill be spared.

While there are some works that one can sit long and enjoy, still, as one swallow does not make a summer, a few pictures of merit will not make an academy. In fact, looking around these walls, one wonders how many of the pictures were accepted by the hanging committee at all; and what sorry kind of stuff must have been the hundreds of canvases that were sent away. Truly, the future for British art looks bad, if this year's academy is any indication.

Royalty has a small place this year. The King, as Colonel in Chief of the Coldstream Guards, by Lance Calkin, is an admirable portrait. Strange to say, the picture of the King which Mr. Arthur S. Cope, R. A., has painted for the Royal Yacht Squadron does not impress one as a very happy effort. Mr. Cope has been far more successful with his portrait of the Duke of Connaught, as Master of the Trinity House. It is a noble picture, a striking likeness.

A pathetic feature of the exhibition is the work of the late Sir Hubert von Herkomer, R. A. He is represented by five canvases, all portraits, the most striking of which is a large picture of the managers and directors of the firm of Friedrich Krupp, Essen, Germany. The others are the Duke of Wellington, Colonel J. Murray Kennedy, Sir Lauder Brunton and Mr. Arthur Bourchier, the well known actor. Needless to say, each one is an object lesson of the real art of portrait painting. Every man lives again on the canvas under the magic hand of the great artist, whose place there is no one to fill.

Among the more notable portraits which are likely to attract most attention are:—Sir Luke Fildes' admirable portraits of Mrs. Romer Williams, Mr. E. A. Barton and a wonderfully "speaking" likeness of the young Scotch physician Dr. William Bulloch; Mr. William Orpen's portraits of Mr. Richard B. Fudger, of Toronto; the Archbishop of Liverpool, and of Sir Edgar Speyer, Lady Nelson, Mr. Thomas L. Devitt, Mrs. Stewart Clark, and perhaps his most successful portrait of the year: Doreen, daughter of Mr. Andrew S. Lawson, by Mr. J. J. Shannon, R. A., a truly admirable portrait of Lord Reading of Erleigh, Lord Chief Justice of England, still better remembered as Sir Rufus Isaacs, in his wig and scarlet robes, and Sir Alfred Mond, M. P., by Mr. Oswald Birley.

There is also an excellent posthumous portrait of the Right Honorable George Wyndham, by Mr. Harold Speed; the Honorable Mrs. Justice Astbury, by Arpad J. de Kappay; Mr. A. T. Newell's portraits of Mrs. Robert McAlpine, Jr., and her daughter, Sir Alfred Hopkinson, and a fine full length portrait of Lady Charles Cavendish Bentinck, standing in a black lace evening dress on the steps of a garden terrace; the Dean of St. Albans and Sir William Blake Richmond, by Frank O. Salisbury; the Marchioness of Downshire, Mrs. Arnold Henderson and Roma Caitriona, daughter of the Rev. D. Macfarlane, parish minister of Kingussie, by J. W. Waterhouse, R. A.; Sir William Turner, in his robes as vice chancellor of the University of Edinburgh, by Sir James Guthrie, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Elsworthy, Mr. R. C. Foster, Camille, daughter of Mr. Sutton Palmer, Mrs. E. Upton and an "in memoriam" portrait of Winifred, daughter of Mr. Harry White, a charming, smiling young girl, walking in the sunlight in a garden of roses. In painting this portrait Mr. Dicksee had a difficult task. He never saw the girl; he had only photographs to work from, but her parents say that the artist has caught the child's expression to the life and produced a marvellously lifelike portrait.

Besides his royal portraits, Mr. Cope is represented by Lord Haldane, Colonel Sir Clement Royds, C. B., Lord Esme Gordon Lennox, as a Major of the Coldstream Guards, and the portrait of Mr. W. Durnford, presented by Eton College.

Mr. John S. Sargent, who last year was content to be represented by subject pictures, has turned his attention once more to portraits, and one is glad to see such fine speaking works as the Lady Rocksavage and Mr. Henry James, though he has three other wonderfully fine, strong little works in "Sketchers," a man and women in a sunbathed glade; "San Germania," and "Cypresses and Pines."

The Honorable John Collier is represented by two admirable portraits of the Duke of Bedford and Lord Morley. As already mentioned by cable, Mr. Collier determined to show no more of those works which of late years have been the sensation of the season, such as "The Cheat" or "The Fallen Idol," of last year. He has gone in for a classical study instead, but his "Clytemnestra" is likely to create as much discussion as any of his former so-called "problem" pictures. Mr. Collier hates the name of "problem" picture. He denies that he ever painted one with any such intention. But one can sit and speculate on his "Clytemnestra," and weave a dream story around it, pleasant or otherwise, according to one's mood.

There is no getting away from the ambitious work of F. Cadogan Cowper, "Lucretia Borgia Reigns in the Vatican in the Absence of the Pope Alexander VI." Amid a dazzling array of scarlet clad cardinals sits the beautiful Lucrezia, haughty, proud, cruel, indifferent to the brown robed monk kneeling at her feet. Every figure is carefully painted, naturally posed, and every face seems a portrait. It is a work with much claim to distinction, but yet one prefers Mr. Cowper in his portraits of the Honorable Mr. Hanbury Tracy and Mr. Walter Carlyle, both of conspicuous excellence.

Queen Mary, Best Dancer in London, Makes Waltzing More Fashionable

Two Thousand Persons To Be Invited to State Balls Which She Will Attend, Besides Being Present at Other Functions in the Near Future.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 23.

THE two State balls which are to be given at Buckingham Palace will not be the only occasions this season on which the Queen will be seen dancing. She has already arranged to be present at two dances in the near future, and it is not improbable that this number will be added to. The King has never been much attracted to dancing, but the Queen is regarded by many good judges as the best waltzer in London.

It is this royal patronage which has already brought about the present interest in dancing. A few years ago even the most fashionable hostesses experienced great difficulty in finding sufficient men to provide partners for all their women guests. Recourse, it is said, even had to be had to the hiring of dancers. This, of course, never occurred at the great houses of Mayfair. When dancing was at a low ebb, so far as men were concerned, it was suddenly taken up by the music halls. After a while came the tango, which took London by storm. Then people began to learn the dance, and those who could not master its steps sought refuge in the waltz—since superseded by the Boston. It has only needed the stamp of royal approval to make dancing now more fashionable than it has been for a long time.

Most of the academies report that they have lately received a larger number of pupils than ever before. Inquiries show that the Boston and the "one-step" are the most popular of all dances at present, and the former has almost entirely ousted the waltz.

The programme at the State balls usually includes two polkas, two sets of quadrilles and the remainder waltzes. It is not likely that this will be varied in May and June, for these balls have with the passing of the years become institutions. The King rarely takes part in anything but quadrilles, but the rest of the family are—to use the expression of a dancing master—"ready for anything." Princess Mary is an exceedingly graceful dancer and the Prince of Wales is rapidly becoming a first rate waltzer.

For sheer enthusiasm, however, it would be difficult to equal Prince Albert, who, like all sailors, is thoroughly at home on a ballroom floor. Princess Mary is not yet "out," and has, therefore, to confine her activities in this way to a few children's dances at the palace or at the house of an intimate friend.

The Queen will dine on Derby night at Devonshire House, where there will be a small ball, in which she will take part. The King will join her in the ballroom later in the evening. In past years court mourning has almost always prevented the Queen from dancing, and she will, therefore, welcome her present opportunity all the more.

The Court Chamberlain's department is now preparing to issue invitations for the State balls, to each of which two thousand persons will be invited. Contrary to the rule in connection with courts, no applications are made by those desirous of being present. A list is prepared by the Lord Chamberlain, who then sends a card to the effect that he is commanded by the King to invite the recipient to a State ball.

Queen Mary has a very keen sense of justice, and here is a pleasant little story which illustrates it:—A short time ago a famous firm of West End bootsellers, which for years had enjoyed royal patronage, dismissed their manager for no other reason than that they considered he was getting too old. He set up for himself in a small shop in a southwestern suburb. The Queen heard of the incident, and now the old manager's tiny establishment sports the royal arms instead of the gorgeous premises of his former employers.

Amusement Features in London Soo[illegible]

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 23.

"PARIS in London," that great scheme by which a large portion of the Kingsway-Strand site, which the London County Council cleared in order to transform into the "handsomest thoroughfare in Europe," and which was to have been occupied by a [illegible] theatre, café chantant and Hippodrom[illegible] was blocked because of the prohibitive ground rent asked [illegible] Council.

The Council would probably now be glad to accept such an offer as was made by the "Paris in London" syndicate. At any rate, it is taking [illegible]ch less proportionate sum for a part of that site for another amusements scheme.

Venturous people will soon be "whirling whirl" on that site. Mr. E. W. C[illegible] gear of high speed railway fame, is preparing to erect a circular single rail track of two hundred feet diameter on a piece of ground rented from the London County Council around which a luxurious car will race at four times the speed allowed by the Board of Trade to ordinary trains on such a curve. Mr. Kearney is having the site laid out as an ornamental pleasance, with a band stand, tea pavilion, sunken gardens and a backing of realistically painted scenery, and passengers will be permitted to whirl three or four times round this route on each journey.

The car will be of novel design. The four wheels are placed one behind the other under the centre of the car, like those on gyroscopic monorail cars, and each wheel will be separately motor driven. The balance, however, is not maintained by a gyroscope, but by a guide rail above the car, along which will run small guide wheels attached to the roof.

With a view to minimizing the air resistance not only are the ends of the car tapered and pointed, which alone will reduce atmospheric resistance to about one-fifth that of the bluff ended car, but the sides are almost perfectly smooth, frameless windows with no outside sills being used.

"The model on the Strand site," said Mr. Kearney to your correspondent, "will, I hope, prove to be merely a preliminary to the construction of the high speed tube from the top of Norfolk street to the Crystal Palace." By some trains it takes half an hour to get to the Crystal Palace at present; but Mr. Kearney estimates that he will carry passengers there from the Strand in twelve minutes, including stops at six stations. Mr. Kearney makes use of the assistance of gravity wherever possible, and with a good run his cars can achieve a speed of 150 miles an hour with absolute safety, it is said.

300 MILES AN HOUR IS CLAIMED FOR AIR TRAIN

Defying All Laws of Gravity, Electrically Driven Car Can Hurtle Through Space at This Terrific Speed, According to French Inventor.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 23.

AFTER the electric train the air train. It has arrived and it is claimed to be the most marvellous invention of the age. It travels through the air without visible means of support, either above or below. At a wizard touch it is away like a flash, devouring distance at the terrific speed of three hundred miles an hour, defying all the laws of gravity, triumphant and glorious in its realization of the ideal that engineers and scientists have striven to attain ever since the time of Stephenson and his first locomotive.

There is no locomotive on the air train. It needs such antiquated things no more than it needs rails. Electricity is the driving power, but it is electricity harnessed and trained to perform the apparently impossible. It is positive, not negative to nature.

The Bachelet levitated railway is the invention to the new discovery, and it takes its name from its inventor, Emile Bachelet, an old man who has spent almost a lifetime in bringing this wonder child of his to perfection.

He is a Frenchman who has lived long in America, and the air train represents twenty years of work, twenty years of disappointments.

Several of the great railway chiefs of England have seen it, and they express themselves as amazed. The principal engineers of the post office have seen it and they, too, are amazed.

The surest sign of all that it has made a deep impression on the men who are best qualified to judge it is to be found in the fact that one of the foremost railway companies offered the inventor the use of a section of its line to demonstrate on a large scale.

The explanation of the system under which the air train is made to perform its marvellous work is that Mr. Bachelet discovered that certain metals offer a retarding influence to the magnetic force flowing from an electric coil energized by an alternating current. This retarding influence sets up "eddy" currents, which cause the reverse of magnetic repulsion. In other words, the effect of a magnetic coil on certain metals is to repel instead of to attract them. One of these metals is aluminum, and the effect of magnetic electricity on aluminum is the great factor in the working of the air train.

The car or cars of the air train are long, narrow and cigar shaped. When they are stationary they rest on a track below which, at intervals of two feet, are electric coils arranged to deliver the magnetic lines of force against the resisting aluminum of the car.

As soon as the electric influence is set in motion the coils, instead of attracting the car, push it away, with the result that the car is immediately raised and held suspended in the air clear of the track, the only connection between the car and the track being the brushes used for contact purposes.

"The cost of running," said Mr. Bachelet, in describing his work, of which a large model is now running over a special track in the North of England, "would be infinitesimal small compared with the cost of railroads of to-day. It is similar in construction and practically indestructible, and the maintenance costs would be very small, as the cars are without engines, wheels, bearings, gearings, armatures or commutators, and require no oiling and little repair or adjustments.

"The distance to be covered would not affect the running at all. No locomotive or running stock can be built sufficiently strong to withstand the shock of taking curves at a high speed, but with my system curves may be taken at a speed hitherto unheard of. There is no energy dissipated in overcoming hampering friction of revolving wheels over rubbing parts, no power exhausted in dragging heavy dead weights up inclines and no wear and tear occasioned by these or other causes. The levitated train glides evenly, suspended in the air on an invisible cushion just above the road bed, driven or impelled forward with great velocity, with no friction or physical contact practically eliminated.

"You will wonder how a car can be controlled as it hurtles through space at three hundred miles an hour. This is not so difficult as it appears at first sight. The power currents can be cut off instantaneously and the traffic on the whole length of the line brought to a standstill. Moreover, trains can be automatically automatically tracked and stopped at any station."

By the air train system it should be possible to travel from New York to San Francisco in from ten to twelve hours, from Paris to St. Petersburg in much less and from Bombay to Calcutta in about five.

Mr. Bachelet admits that such experimental work will necessarily have to be accomplished and many improvements made before his system is fully developed for the conveyance of passengers with perfect safety at lightning speed. But for the carriage of mails and parcels the system is quite ready, and the passenger service will follow.

BRILLIANT PAGEANT AT PEACE BALL

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 23.

THE great fancy dress ball in aid of the Anglo-American Peace Centenary Fund will make a brilliant wind up to the season, judging from the progress which has already been made with the arrangements. Of course, anything in the way of entertainments taken up by the Anglo-American circle in London never fails to go.

A representation of one of the caravels in which Columbus crossed the Atlantic to find the New World is to screen the organ, and from it, on the stroke of midnight, will descend Columbus and his companions to witness a pageant illustrating the development of America.

There are to be eleven processions in all, beginning with the red Indian tribes. Some of the most promising historical groups will show Sir Walter Raleigh and the Virginia settlers, the Pilgrim Fathers, William Penn and the Quakers and George Washington and his contemporaries. Finally Britannia and Columbia, hand in hand, will receive congratulations from representatives of all the great nations of the world.

The scheme for which the fund has been founded includes the erection of a memorial in Westminster Abbey, the purchase, already accomplished, of Sulgrave Manor, in Northants, the ancestral home of the Washington family, and the foundation of a chair of Anglo-American history and the endowment of prizes in schools for essays upon subjects connected with the celebration.

Confessions of Oscar Wilde To Be Published

Criticisms of Contemporary Life and Letters in Volume by Mr. Frank Harris.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 23.

SOCIETY will have a sensation between Ascot and Cowes this year. It will be caused by "The Life and Confessions of Oscar Wilde," a volume by Mr. Frank Harris. Some persons are already getting nervous about its contents.

Wilde's comments on the famous persons of his time are so unmercifully scathing that it may be safely said no more frank criticism of contemporary life and letters has ever been published. Nearly everybody of note is mentioned—Ruskin, Pater, Whistler, Beardsley, Churton Collins, Meredith, Lady Dorothy Nevill, George Wyndham—hundreds of celebrities, in fact. And the living are there, too.

Wilde talked about everybody and everything, and Mr. Harris, his great friend, has paid a tribute to his genius by sinking for the time his own self by acting as Wilde's Boswell.

A scene is described in the "Confessions" where, at Lady Desborough's (or Mrs. Willie Grenfell's, as she was then), the present Prime Minister took Wilde to task for putting so many of his sentences into italics.

A comedy scene is described at Crabbet Park (Mr. Wilfred Blunt's place), where Wilde turned the tables neatly on George Curzon. The Pro-Consul-to-be is described as he was seen through Wilde's eyes.

It is ten years since Harris, with his astonishing memory and powers of literary expression, wrote down the "Confessions" of this supreme and tragic master of conversation. For nearly that length of time the "copy" has lain in Mr. "Dan" Rider's safe in St. Martin's Court.

Mr. Rider, who is publishing the work privately by subscription, said:—"Most of the matter is already in galley proof, and subscribers ought to receive their copies about the beginning of July.

"Mr. Harris, whose work has been interfered with by ill health, is writing some fresh chapters. The book will run to about 150,000 words. It will, I think, not fear comparison with Rousseau or Benvenuto Cellini's confessions, or Casanova's memoirs.

"It is not so patchy as Boswell's 'Johnson.' Wilde is at least happier than Johnson in this—that he has a man of greater calibre as biographer. In fact, I am sure that Harris' place in English literature will eventually be higher even than Wilde's.

"Wilde could not himself have written these 'Confessions,' which, nevertheless, reproduce with fidelity his greatness and characteristic quality as a conversationalist."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Butt of The Camp

Hanging about a mining camp in the Far West was an Indian girl whose name was so unpronounceable that she was called simply Sal. She was not the typical Indian of song and story but a real daughter of the forest, which means that she was not beautiful, not over clean, and her hair hung down, coarse and straight, on her shoulders. At least it would have hung straight if it had been combed.

Sal was not popular with the campers, but she could be made useful for a very small expenditure. Men who had an accumulation of unwashed dishes could hire her for a few cents, an old piece of ribbon or some tobacco to do the job so that they could start anew with their tableware and use it all over again. A drudge like that is always sure to get all the cuffing that springs from ill-temper, and Sal had no one to divide it with. If any one lost anything she was accused of having taken it and ill-treated until it was found, which was often in possession of the owner. The Indian is proverbially revengeful, but Sal seemed unusually patient under the rough treatment she received. All wondered why she didn't stay with her people, who were settled on their reservation on the other side of the divide.

One day Sal got in the way of Tom Barton when he was stamping his way through the camp in very bad humour. He gave her a blow on the side of her head that sent her to the ground. A young and comely man called Ohio Sam, he having come from that highly civilized state, saw the incident and was so incensed at a man striking a woman that he walked up to Barton and struck the latter as he had hit Sal. Barton was too cowardly to fight, but he was proficient in cursing. As soon as Ohio Sam was convinced that he was not called upon to give the fellow any satisfaction he turned and walked away.

A coward, a mean coward, who will domineer over those he can safely impose upon though he will not stand up in open fight, will usually take a mean revenge. Sal seemed to understand this better than her champion. She kept an eye on Barton, expecting that he would manage some day to get the drop on Rowley, which was Ohio Sam's real name, and shoot him before he could draw.

One night Rowley was awakened by a pistol shot within a few feet of him. There was just light enough—it was dawn—to see two persons at the entrance of his cabin. One was Barton, with a smoking pistol in his hand; the other was Sal. It was evident that she had just knocked Barton's weapon upward. The villain retired and was not seen around the camp again.

Rowley, sensible of Sal's having saved his life, after this treated her with as much consideration as he could one of her low degree. This seemed to encourage her to tidy up a bit.

One day she went to Rowley and told him that Barton was hanging at a distance about the camp and she believed he was bent on mischief. Rowley had best avoid going out where he could be shot in the back she said. The young man smiled and said he didn't believe Barton quite so low and thought no more about the matter.

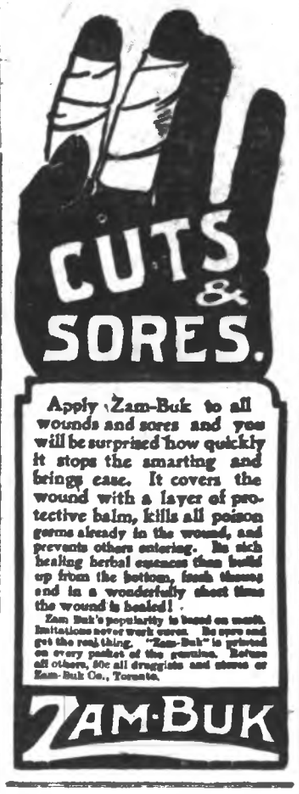
That same evening, having occasion to go beyond the camp he was walking along when he heard two shots in a wood by the path and thought he heard a woman's cry. Turning toward it, he came upon Sal lying on her back with a bullet hole in her forehead. She was dead. He made a quick examination of the place, and behind a tree he found Barton, gasping. The fellow had a bullet wound behind the ear, and died a few minutes later.

Taking Sal up, he carried her to the camp, and as the denizens gathered round while Rowley told the facts came off one by one.

Rowley sent word to the girl's people asking if they wished to show their dead kinswoman any funeral honours. They responded: "Sal no good. Sal leave her own wigwam to be white people's slave. We no want her."

Sadly he arranged for the interment of the body, and when it took place those who had not given a kind word to the Indian girl in life stood reverently about her grave, each casting in a green sprig.

Somehow Rowley was never the same man after the tragedy. He could never forgive a selfish world for ill treating one who was so unselfish. And the board he erected over her grave he simply marked "Sal."



Apply Zam-Buk to all wounds and sores and you will be surprised how quickly it stops the smarting and brings ease. It covers the wound with a layer of protective balm, kills all poison germs already in the wound, and prevents others entering. Its rich healing herbal essences then build up from the bottom, fresh tissues and in a wonderfully short time the wound is healed!
Zam Buk's popularity is based on merit. Imitations never work cures. Be sure and get the real thing. "Zam-Buk" is printed on every package of the genuine. Refuse all others, 50c all druggists and stores or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

A Sinking Fund.

"John," said the member of the Housewives' league, "what's a sinking fund?"

"A fund that isn't big enough to keep you afloat," answered John gloomily.

Reminded Him.

Waiter—Haven't you forgotten something, sir?

Restaurant Patron—I'm glad you spoke of it. My wife told me not to spend any money foolishly, and I was just going to give you a tip.

Short Shrift.

"Poor Bill has only two months to live."

"Sure, these doctors make mistakes, ye know."

"But it wasn't a doctor said it. It was a judge."

Not at Home.

Jailer (to debtor in prison)—One of your creditors wants to speak to you.

Debtor—If you're supposed to look after me you ought to see that I'm not interrupted at my meals. Tell him I'm out.

Some Flesh-Reducing Methods.

Physical exercise will do most for you to reduce your flesh. Horseback riding and rapid walking are known to promptly reduce one's weight. All may not be able to indulge in the former, but we may all avail ourselves of the latter. You may have observed that great walkers are never fat. First I advise you to eat only two meals a day—a rather late breakfast and dinner in the evening. Avoid all fats, sugar and potatoes. Avoid any between your meals, never with them, and should you feel hungry at any time, be satisfied with a little fruit. Each morning before dressing exercise by stooping and touching your toes 10 times. At first this may seem impossible, but soon you will be able to do it readily. This will reduce the waist in two months, if faithfully followed each morning and night. Take cold showers after your bath, and practice deep breathing. This all sounds very simple, but nature's ways are all simple, yet never failing. Take no drugs except when absolutely necessary, then take any salts suits you prefer. Another exercise is to stand with the feet together, arms extended, level from the shoulders, and swing the body around till one arm is in front of you while the other is at your back, without moving the feet.

If women would only realize that they can help themselves, in a great many instances, as much as a doctor, they would work more willingly to retain their health.

Health and Beauty Helps

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Mrs. A. T. B.: You are not shampooing often enough and may not use the best shampoo. Try my favourite, which is canthrox—just dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and rub briskly as you pour it on the hair and scalp. This makes an abundance of rich, cleansing lather that is very soothing to tender, itchy scalps. Rinsing leaves the scalp immaculately clean, and each strand of hair will be soft, shimmery and full of health. Canthrox shampoos are splendid for correcting oiliness, dryness or profuse dandruff. I like its drying qualities, too.

Mrs. G.: The symptoms you describe pains and aches in the limbs and small of back, loss of appetite, lack of strength and ambition, are danger signals—warning your blood is laden with poisons which will cause serious sickness if not eliminated from the system. The best dose tonic of grandmother's day is excellent to use, and can be prepared at home at little cost by dissolving ½ cupful sugar and 1 ounce hardene (which you can get at your drug store) in ½ pint alcohol (not whisky), to which is then added hot water to make a full quart. A tablespoonful before meals is the dose. The timely use of this tonic frequently saves serious ills.

Maple: Yes, you can cure your weak watery eyes with a soothing, healing strengthening eye tonic which can be made at little cost by dissolving an ounce of crystos in one pint clear water. If you will put 2 or 3 drops in each eye daily it will relieve the inflammation and soreness and reduce swelling. This crystos tonic is especially fine to make the eyes sparkle and give them expression.

Society Girl: Here is that weight reducing treatment which she told you would work without danger or inconvenience: Put 4 ounces parmelia (which you can obtain at any drug store) in ½ pint hot water. Strain when cool. Take 1 tablespoonful before meal. Keep up treatment until weight is sufficiently reduced. Parmelia is gentle in action and positive in results, and leaves the flesh and skin firm and smooth.

Girlie: It is easy to make an inexpensive hair tonic at home by mixing 1 ounce quinsacia with ½ pint alcohol, then adding ½ pint water. The scalp should be massaged once or twice a week with this quinsacia tonic. Its regular use will quickly banish the dry, scaly condition and correct excessive oiliness, and when this is done the natural colour and silky softness returns and the hair will grow in long and thick and have a beautiful sheen.

Marge: Friends tell me I have every reason to be proud of my complexion, which is the result of discarding powder and using spurmax lotion. This is inexpensive and easily made at home. Just dissolve 4 ounces spurmax in ½ pint witch-hazel or hot water, then add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine, and it is ready. Apply this lotion sparingly and rub lightly for a moment until it dries and seems to become a part of the skin, to which it gives a velvety smoothness and refined colour that is delightful.

O. T.: The wrinkles of which you speak will soon vanish if you apply almocrin cream-jelly and massage the long way of the creases. This simple treatment tends to vivify the dormant tissues, causing decreases or lines to fill out. To prepare the cream-jelly put 1 ounce almocrin (which you can get at your drug store) in ½ pint water and add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Let remain overnight before this greaseless cream-jelly is not equalled.

Fountain Pens.

It is a popular fallacy that fountain pens are quite a modern invention. As a matter of fact, an old work of reference published in 1795 contains an illustration of a fountain pen, the appearance of which is very much like those sold at the present time. Its construction, however, was somewhat elaborate and clumsy, the pen consisting of various pieces of metal which had to be screwed and unscrewed before the pen could be used.

They Didn't Chatter.

A doctor attended an old lady from Scotland who had caught a severe cold.

"Did your teeth chatter when you felt the chill coming over you?" asked the doctor.

"My dinna ken, doctor; they were lying on the table!" was the pleasant reply.—New York Globe.

To Regain a Healthy, Girlish Complexion

If you would have a clear, fresh, girlish complexion, one ounce of ordinary mercolized wax will aid you in this direction more than shelves full of cosmetics. It produces a natural beauty. This wax, procurable at any drugstore, completely absorbs a bad complexion, revealing the healthy young skin underneath. Its work is done so gradually, day by day, that no inconvenience is caused. The wax is applied at night, like cold cream, and removed in the morning with soap and water.

Another valuable rejuvenating treatment—this for wrinkles—is to bathe your face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. This has a remarkable action in smoothing out the lines and "firming up" the loose tissue.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

DAILY FASHION HINT.

No. 6,703 Lady's Combination.

This combination corset cover and drawers is cut in one piece and is gathered around the edge of the neck opening so that it may be slipped on over the head. There is a small tab which closes the crotch and is easily unbuttoned. Such garments are made of soft batiste, fine longcloth, crêpe de Chine and wash silk in white or colors.

The combination pattern, No. 6,703, is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2¼ yards of 36 or 45 inch material, with 5½ yards of edging, 5½ yards of beading and 7⅛ yards of ribbon.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Woman Arrested at Epsom.

EPSOM, May 28.—Ada Nice, supposed to be a militant suffragette, was arrested on Epsom Downs yesterday after she had discharged a pistol loaded with blank cartridges at a policeman. The powder burned through the policeman's trousers and blistered one of his legs. The woman asserted that her husband had handed her the weapon in the morning for use in case she was molested. She indignantly repudiated the suggestion that she was a suffragette. The weapon contained six blank cartridges.

'Quake at Panama.

PANAMA, May 28. — A severe earthquake shock was felt here about 10.25 o'clock Tuesday night. The disturbances lasted nearly half a minute. Reports from Gatun, Miraflores and Pedro Miguel indicated that no damage had been done to the locks there.

The seismograph record indicated that the point of origin was within one hundred miles to the southwest, the motion being from southwest to northeast and very severe.

Hasn't Cleaned the Slate Yet.

KINGSTON, May 28.—When John Ryan, alias Frank John Reynolds, walked out of penitentiary yesterday after serving 2 1-2 years for securing money from women in Toronto by fraud, he was rearrested by Chief Jarvis of Bowmanville on charges of bigamy, perjury and securing the sum of $3,000 from a young woman he married under false pretences. It is alleged that Ryan had a wife and six children in Toronto when he married a young woman in Bowmanville, and that he then sent money to Toronto to support his family.

Prince Annoyed at Slanders.

LONDON, May 28. — It is stated that H. R. H. Prince Alexander of Teck, Governor-General designate of Canada, is greatly annoyed at despatches published in the New York press, in which it was stated that Queen Mary had paid his debts and demanded his appointment to Canada from Premier Asquith, because it would save her pocket.

Victims of Lightning.

Indian Is Killed and Chatham Boy May Die.

HAMILTON, May 28. — Scurrying from the fierce rainstorm yesterday morning, a young Indian, James Smith, and others sought shelter beneath an old shack at Burlington, the property of W. C. Bell, Bryant street.

A few minutes after had a dozen had gathered, a bolt of lightning struck the structure, stunning three or four and killing the Indian.

Boy May Die.

CHATHAM, May 28. — Wilfred Meredith, the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Meredith of Chatham Township, was struck by lightning on his way to school yesterday morning. He was badly burned and it is doubtful if he can recover.

The lad and three companions were caught in a rainstorm and sought shelter under a tree. A heavy bolt of lightning struck the tree and all four boys were hurt.

Struck While On Roof.

ST. CATHARINES, May 28.—William Stevens was struck by lightning and seriously injured yesterday while putting a metal eavestrough on the roof of his house. His brother, with whom he was working, escaped injury.

UNIONIST FOR PEACE.

Earl Selborne's Speech Not Likely To Please Ulstermen.

LONDON, May 28.—Speaking at a mass meeting of Ulster Covenanters at Bath yesterday, Earl Selborne defined his attitude toward Home Rule in a way that will certainly not commend itself to the people or the supporters of Ulster in general:

"It is clearly our duty to prevent civil war, if we can," he said. "If we Unionists are confronted with the dilemma, will you have Home Rule for the moment with civil war or without civil war, our clear duty is to say, 'without civil war,' if without taking any responsibility for the policy, keeping our hands free for the future and sticking to the fundamental principle that the people only can decide. If while doing all these things we can avert war it is our duty to do so. We will, however, take no kind of responsibility whatever for the policy of Home Rule. We believe the policy bad and this particular bill infamous."

Wants Bilingual Service.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 28.—Senator Belcourt of Ottawa has come out in favor of civil servants in all departments being able to speak both French and English. He made the declaration on Senator Choquette's motion that all postoffice department employes in Ontario and Quebec should know both languages.

Senator de Boucherville argued against the amendment because it would be a hardship on postmasters in small places in Quebec where hardly anyone could speak English.

Hamel's Rescue In Doubt.

LONDON, May 28.—Neither the officials of the Hendon Aerodrome nor Hamel's father have received any confirmation of the reported rescue of the aviator. A report received from Newcastle last night said a ship signalled to a coast guard the word "Hamel" which was taken to indicate that the missing aviator was aboard the vessel.

Royal Society Fellowship.

MONTREAL, May 28.—At a special business meeting of the literary-historical section of the Royal Society of Canada yesterday morning it was decided to recommend Mr. J. Ross Robertson, proprietor of The Toronto Telegram, for election as a fellow of the society in recognition of his historical researches and literary work.

Balloon Fell Into Sea.

SWINEMUENDE, Germany, May 28.—An unknown balloon, apparently with several aeronauts on board, descended at sea yesterday, several miles off shore near here. A pilot boat was immediately despatched to investigate.

NEGLECT IS THE CAUSE OF GRAY HAIR

Easily Corrected If You Only Will.

No woman nowadays need lose the charm of her rich, lustrous hair with advancing years. Grey and faded hair destroys a woman's charm as nothing else will do.

It seems a shame that any woman should suffer the annoyance of grey hair when it is so easy to restore it to its natural colour.

Hay's Hair Health is so simple and easy to use and so sure in its results that no woman can afford to overlook it. It is not a dye, just a real tonic that brings new life and vigour and that natural coloured healthy look to the impoverished scalp and hair roots, restores the original, natural colour of the hair. It removes dandruff.

Your money will be refunded to you if it fails after a fair trial.

CURED AT SEVENTY-FOUR

Little Digesters are a Great Help to Mr. John F. Becker

The weight of years very often brings with it a still heavier burden, that of Indigestion or some Form of Stomach Trouble.

Then "Little Digesters" come to the rescue—if you give them a chance, as did Mr. Becker. Here is his letter telling what they did for him:

New Dundee, Nov. 10, 1909.

To The Coleman Medicine Co.

Dear Sirs,—

I was for a long time troubled with bloating after meals, and my tongue was always coated. Seeing the "Little Digesters" advertised I bought a box, and they took all that trouble away, but I thought one box would not be enough, so I send to you for more. They are a great help to my body.

Yours truly,

JOHN F. BECKER.

Excuse my writing with pencil, being an old man of 74."

"Little Digesters" aid the feeble stomach to digest the food perfectly. This means that you can enjoy every meal, and get the strength out of what you eat, if you take a "Little Digester" afterwards.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, May 27.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 64 cars, comprising 653 cattle, 1837 hogs, 276 sheep and lambs and 133 calves.

Butchers.

Choice loads of steers sold at $8.30 to $8.50, with a few lots at $8.60; good to choice loads of steers and heifers at $8.15 to $8.30; medium to good at $7.80 to $8.10; common at $7.35 to $7.75; choice cows at $7 to $7.50; good cows at $6.50 to $6.90; medium cows at $5.75 to $6; common cows at $5 to $5.75; canners and cutters at $3.75 to $4.75; bulls at $6.50 to $7.65.

Stockers and Feeders.

Feeders were firm, and one or two lots of short-keep steers sold at $8 to $8.10; choice steers, $7.50 to $7.80; medium steers, $7.25 to $7.40; stockers sold up to $7.10 for eastern production.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a fairly large supply of milkers and springers, the market for which has not been quite as keen lately, but the prices paid were still very high, ranging from $80 to $110 each. The bulk sold from $70 to $90 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were moderate, quality common and medium, and prices firm. Common calves at $7 to $7.50; medium at $8 to $8.50 and good at $9 to $9.50; choice calves at $10 to $10.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were a little larger, but not large enough to reduce prices, which were again steady. Heavy ewes and rams at $5 to $5.50; light ewes at $6.50 to $7.25; yearling lambs at $8.50 to $9; American yearling wethers at $9; spring lambs at $5 to $9 each.

Hogs.

The market for hogs was a little stronger. Selects, fed and watered, sold at $8.35 to $8.40; $8 f.o.b. cars, and $8.60 to $8.65 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, May 27.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 23 were 635 cattle, 535 sheep and lambs, 1228 hogs and 2060 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale consisted of 600 cattle, 400 sheep and lambs, 770 hogs and 1500 calves.

The trade in cattle was fairly good today, notwithstanding the very warm weather prevailing, and as the supply was not in excess of the requirements the tone of the market was firm with no important change in prices to note. Choice steers sold at $8.25 to $8.75, good at $7.50 to ... fair at $7 to $7.25; and the lower grades at $5.50 to $6.50. Butchers' cows brought from $5.50 to $7.50, and bulls from $4 to $7.50 per 100 pounds.

The demand for sheep and lambs was quiet.

CHURCHILL AN ACTOR.

First Lord of the Admiralty Was an Ingenious Schoolboy.

To picture the First Lord of the Admiralty, in wig and grease-paint, acting the part of Dick Dowlas, son of the illiterate shopkeeper, in scenes from Colman's "Help-at-Law," or expending his energies in inventing scenic effects and novelties for the pantomime of "Aladdin," is not an easy task. And yet in his youthful days Mr. Winston Churchill was regarded as quite the best amateur actor and stage-manager among his intimates.

It was at a private school in Brighton that he first displayed that histrionic talent which aroused the admiration of his friends—talent which was really discovered by the head master himself. This head master was rather fond of amateur theatricals, and started quite a theatre rage by organising two companies among the boys, who played a couple of dramas, entitled "The Smuggler" and "The Miller and His Men." And it was characteristic of the First Lord's originality and daring that he decided to produce a play of his own. With the true instincts of a theatrical manager, he argued that what the boys wanted was something to laugh at, and he therefore decided to leave melodrama alone and produce a pantomime—"Aladdin."

He had a scheme for making a street of real paper houses, which by a mechanical device would change visibly into the magic cave, while the Genius of the Lamp was to rise from a trap in the midst of volumes of vapor supplied by the safety-valve of a model locomotive. But the arrangements were not completed by the time the theatrical rage at the school had died out, and Mr. Winston Churchill promptly devoted himself to thinking out another school newspaper, being really too versatile to confine his attention to one hobby.

Referring again, however, to Mr. Winston Churchill's experiences as an actor, one who knew him at school says that he was a fine elocutionist and a remarkably self-possessed reciter, and an incident occurred in connection with his impersonation of Dick Dowlas which shows that even then, though he was only about twelve or thirteen years of age, he possessed a sense of humor which he did not mind turning against himself. In one part of the play Dick receives a letter from his father, who succeeds temporarily to the title of a baron, which he proceeds to read aloud to his tutor, Dr. Pangloss.

Dick (reading): "I will send my carrot! Carrot!"

Dr. Pangloss: "He! he! he! Charlot, his lordship means."

"Now when Churchill read the word carrot," says "One who was with him" at school, "he assumed the most comical expression of mystification imaginable, and, slowly putting his hand to his head, looked at the audience. Everyone who knows the color of Churchill's hair—it is not red, but there is a distinct tinge of what one calls auburn—will understand why the laugh was much more hearty than was justified by the mere words of the play."

Elderberries Scorned.

The elder has not inspired much sentiment; even its berries, transformed into wine, don't make a particularly inspiring beverage. Shakespeare scornfully refers to it as "stinking elder." Yet it should inspire a very grateful sentiment, for it heralds spring. It is about the first wild tree (if it can be called tree) that comes into leaf. Already it is showing its green, though unobtrusively, as befits a creature modest and maligned. The leaves are so dark that they don't shed light about them, as does the breaking forth of hawthorn or beech. Nor has elder blossom appealed to the poets; it is easier to sing of violet, rose, or honeysuckle. Still, one of them might spare the elder a spring song.—London Chronicle.

One Way To Look at It.

Cornish humor is often unconscious, a writer in The English Illustrated Magazine says, and proceeds to furnish a concrete example:

"Gwain to larn your boy the fiddle, are 'ee?" asked one Cornishman of another.

"Iss," was the reply.

"He wain't never play the fiddle 'tall."

"Ow shouldn't aw?"

"'Cos his head's too big."

"Ge on with 'ee. The bigger the head the more tunes he'll hold."

Thoreau's Study.

It is related by Thoreau that a traveler once asked Wordsworth's servant to show him her master's study, to which request she replied, "Here is his library, but his study is out of doors."

IN DREAD OF CROUP

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses, at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

Toronto, Monday, May 25.—The season is now sufficiently advanced for crop reporters to form an estimate of general conditions as they affect this year's crops. A report issued by the Census and Statistics Office, Ottawa, estimates that in Ontario 19 per cent of the area sown to fall wheat has been winter killed, or 113,000 acres. In Alberta the percentage killed is 15.6. Last year the percentages in Ontario and Alberta were 10 and 43.5 respectively. Taking the country as a whole, spring seeding is well advanced except in the Maritime Provinces and in Quebec, where the season is abnormally late. A rather cold spring and dry weather in many sections have led many long distance prophets to predict a short hay crop in Eastern Canada.

More seasonable weather has brought about an improved feeling in business. In the farm produce markets grains and live stock have been strong. In fact the butter market is the only weak feature in the week's trade.

WHEAT

Reports of extensive damage by the Hessian fly and continued drought in the winter wheat areas, forced quotations up early in the week. Since then favorable showers have tended to make the market easier. No. 1 Northern is now quoted locally at $1.00½; No. 2, 99c. Ontario wheat holds firm at $1.03 to $1.05.

COARSE GRAINS

Both oats and buckwheat show a tendency to higher levels. A pleasing feature of the market is the continued strong demand of American buyers for Canadian oats. All other quotations are firm: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 42½c; No. 3 41½c; Ontario oats, 39½c to 40½c; corn, 73½c; rye, 63c to 64c; peas, 93c to $1.03; malting barley, 56c to 58c; feed, 50c to 52c; buckwheat, 83c to 85c. Montreal wholesale dealers quote as follows: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 43½c; No. 3, 42½c to 43c; corn, 73c to 77c; barley, malting, 65c to 66c; peas, $1.60 to $1.70; rye, 73c; buckwheat, 87c to 88c.

MISCELLANEOUS

In many departments there have been no developments during the week. Mill feeds, hay and straw and potatoes and beans have all been marked by quiet, normal trading and quotations are unchanged from those noted in my report of last week.

EGGS

While quotations on eggs have not changed, there is a tendency to greater firmness in the market. Cool weather, and hence good quality of stock, is largely accountable for the continued large consumption. Prices throughout the country range from 20c to 21½c. One Montreal dealer has instructed his buyers not to offer above the lower figure. Toronto dealers are paying up to 22c delivered.

DAIRY PRODUCE

There is a tendency towards easier quotations on this market, and creamery prints have dropped about one-half a cent. Montreal dealers report that the quality arriving is very uneven, being a combination of hay and grass make. Dealers anticipate that when full grass creamery arrives, quotations will advance slightly. Some cream is being shipped across the border, but it is still believed that an export market must be found. The English market is on the downward trend, so there is little chance of demand from that quarter. At the same time New York and Boston have advanced a cent to 2½c, and this may open the market there. A few car loads have been shipped to the West.

The make of cheese to date is the smallest for many years. Receipts into the port of Montreal from May 1st to May 20th are reported as 26,801 boxes as compared with 48,511 boxes for the corresponding period last year. This is a decrease of 41 per cent. Most of the demand is for home trade. Some cheese has been shipped to Western points, but there is a feeling that for the export trade quotations will have to be reduced somewhat. Butter quotations on this market are: Creamery prints, 25c to 25c; farmers separator prints, 23c to 23c; dairy prints, 18c to 20c; bakers, 15c to 16½c. At Montreal choicest creamery is quoted 25c to 25½c, seconds, 25c to 25½c. For cheese quotations see "Cheese Market."

LIVE STOCK

Good steers, even heavy ones, were in great demand this past week, and in this department quotations are higher. There has been a brisk demand on somewhat light receipts all through the week. Stockers continue to be in exceptionally good demand, and the best quality show an advance of 10c. Quotations follow: Choice heavy steers, $8.25 to $8.50; handy choice steers, $8.10 to $8.35; butchers' steers, com. to good, $7.10 to $8.10; heifers, $6.75 to $8.20; butchers' cows, choice, $7 to $7.50; com. to good, $6.50 to $7; butcher bulls, $5 to $7.75; feeders, $7.25 to $7.85; stockers, $6.50 to $7.25.

Milch cows are in good demand at $65 to $100 for choice; com. to med., $40 to $65; springers, $40 to $100. Calves are quoted from $5 to $10.

The market for spring lambs is easy, with prices unsettled at $6 to $9. Other quotations are: Wether lambs, $8 to $9.50; buck lambs, $7.25 to $8.75; ewes, light, $6.50 to $7.25; culls, heavy sheep and bucks, $4 to $6.50.

Swine eased off early in the week, but are now firmer at $8 to $8.05 f.o.b. country points.

CHEESE MARKETS

Campbellford, May 19.—430 offered, all sold at 11⅞c.

Brockville, May 21.—3,200 boxes registered, largely colored. Bidding opened at 11c and was raised by sixteenths to 12c, which was raised again to 12⅛c. On the street, 11⅝c rules and, including the regulars, over 5,000 boxes changed hands. The price for the corresponding week last year was 11⅞c.

Vankleek Hill, May 21. 791 boxes white and 174 boxes colored cheese boarded; white, 11⅝c; colored at 11⅝c.

Kingston, May 21.—689 colored and 262 white boarded, 244 colored sold at 11 15-16c and 171 white at 11⅞c.

CONDITION OF ONTARIO CROPS

Following is a brief summary of Ontario crop conditions as reported to the Ontario Department of Agriculture by correspondents under date of May 15:

Fall wheat found April a trying month and it suffered severely. The area plowed up this spring will not be relatively great, as farmers prefer to drill barley in the bare spots.

Clover fields are very variable in appearance. April proving hard on this crop also.

Alfalfa has not come through the winter quite so well as clover. There is a strong desire expressed by correspondents for a harder variety of alfalfa suitable for the province of Ontario. Prof. C. A. Zavitz expresses himself as hopeful that he will soon satisfactorily meet this need.

Spring Sowing. The soil was in a splendid condition for a seed bed in the latter part of April, even heavy clays having been well pulverised by severe frosts. Cold rains early in May prevented those who had been tardy from getting to work for a week, and in such cases seeding was more or less unfinished. The general tone of the reports, however, is very satisfactory, except in the case of some from the low-lying townships of Kent and adjoining counties.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Resetting a Shoulder.

A dislocated shoulder may be replaced with scarcely any pain by the following procedure, according to Dr. Julius Caesar of Ilchester, England:

Divest the patient of his coat and waistcoat. Place him on the ground in a sitting posture. Grasp the wrist of the dislocated arm and have a third person grasp the wrist of the other arm. Raise both arms simultaneously over the head, taking care to keep them parallel and extending them upward till the patient is just raised from the ground. At this point a click is heard and felt. This is the sound of the arm bone going back into its socket.

There are some dislocated shoulders that cannot be reduced this way, but they are the rare exceptions.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, MAY 28, 1914

EXHIBITION GRAND STAND TO BE DOUBLED

Work at Fair Grounds Will be Begun Immediately — Six New Turnstiles Secured and Main Entrance to be Changed.

BIG FAIR THIS YEAR

Tenders are advertised to-day for an addition to the grandstand at the Exhibition Grounds that will double the present capacity. The addition will be of the same size as the present stand and the total accommodation will provide for a crowd of 1,600. The directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition met last night and decided to proceed at once with the doubling of the grandstand. The new section will be built immediately east of the present stand, will be contiguous with it and the two will form one large stand. The new section will be constructed of steel and concrete and will be built with a view to permanency.

Six New Turnstiles.

Six new turnstiles are on the way, five to be used at the big new George street entrance, and the other at the grandstand. This feature will be a decided asset and will offer an easy method of securing the total attendance. This, however, was not the principal object of the purchase of the turnstiles.

New Main Entrance.

The old entrance at the corner of Lansdowne and Lock street will be closed and the entrance will be located at the end of George street. Prof. Hutton, of the Ontario Agricultural College is expected in the city at any time now for the purpose of laying out the grounds and part of his work will be preparing plans for an appropriate approach at the main entrance.

Will Locate Buildings.

Prof. Hutton will determine the sites of future building to be erected on the grounds, and although none of these will be erected this year, the present old building will be moved to whatever location is decided upon for it in connection with the general buildings scheme and will be put in good condition for this year's show.

New Percheron Class.

The directors last night decided to open a new class for Percherons. They have been included in the past with the heavy draught horses, but breeders impressed upon the directors the desirability of establishing a separate class for this breed. There are quite a number of breeders of pure-bred Percherons, and the new class should make a special attraction to the owners.

Prize List Under Way.

Work on the prize list will be commenced as soon as the advertising contracts are all in. The advertising committee will commence work next week and the prize lists should be under way in a short time.

Spending $5,000.

The directors this year are spending $5,000 on the new stand, turnstiles, entrance and other features. They are out to make Peterborough the fair centre in this district. A special effort is being made this year for the reason that Lindsay Fair directors have selected the same dates as Peterborough, and the directors are not overlooking the significance of the coincidence and the necessity of making the fair the premier exhibition between Toronto and Ottawa.

SUMMER SCHEDULE

Garbage Will Be Collected Twice a Week, Commencing on Monday

Starting on Monday next the summer schedule for garbage collection comes into force. During June, July, August and September collections will be made twice a week over the same district, and on the same days as last year, namely:

Mondays and Thursdays—All south of Charlotte from Monaghan Road to the River.

Tuesdays and Fridays—All north of Charlotte from east side of Aylmer to the River.

Wednesdays and Saturdays — All north of Charlotte from Monaghan Road to west side of Aylmer.

Keep garbage dry and wrapped in paper and in a covered receptacle. Result: no smell, no flies, no discomfort.

Leave it wet and exposed to the hot sun, result: foul odours, swarms of flies; no comfort.

GIRL KILLED IN RUNAWAY

Special to The Examiner:

MADOC, Ont., May 28. — Maggie Moore, a young Irish girl, was killed here last night when a horse attached to a buggy in which she and three others were seated, ran away and threw her out, her neck being broken.

DROPPED DEAD LAST EVENING

Mr. George McClellan Was Leaving the Supper Table When He Was Seized With Heart Failure

FUNERAL TO-MORROW

Death came with startling suddenness last evening to Mr. George McClennan of 861 Water Street, who expired as he was leaving the supper table. The late Mr. McClellan had not been in good health for some time, but it was not thought that his illness was serious and his demise came as a shock to the family. A large number of friends in this City will also be sorry to learn of his death.

The deceased was thirty-five years of age and was born in Peterborough, where he resided all his life. He is well known and highly respected in this City and much regret will be felt at his death. Yesterday Mr. McLennan was around as usual and in the afternoon walked down town. He hurried home and it is thought that in so doing he became overheated, which condition was partly responsible for his death, a little later. The fact that he was not well was only made known when he arose from the supper table. He complained of a feeling of weakness and suffocation, and his mother assisted him outside, into the fresh air. But her efforts to relieve him were in vain and he died a few seconds later after he left the table. Medical attendance was summoned, but it was found that all life had left the body.

Deceased is survived by three sisters and four brothers, Gertrude and Alice of Toronto; Ida, of Peterborough; William, Thomas, Rolland and Max, all of this City. His mother also survives him.

The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon from the family residence to the Little Lake Cemetery. The service at the house will be at 3.15 o'clock and the funeral will leave at 3.30 p.m.

DOCTORS WILL HOLD CONVENTION HERE NEXT YEAR

Dr. D. Gibb Wishart of Toronto was elected President of the Ontario Medical Association for the coming year at the second day's meeting, yesterday. The Vice-Presidents in order are as follows: Dr. A. T. Stillington; Dr. J. T. I. Haliday, Peterborough; Dr. J. A. Marquis, Brant; and Dr. Francis Williams, Bracebridge. The Secretary, Dr. F. Arnold Clarkson, was reelected, as was the Treasurer, Dr. J. H. Eliott. The following representatives were elected to the Canadian Medical Association: Drs. H. B. Anderson, A. T. Stillington and Ingersoll Olmstead.

Some discussion followed on the workmen's compensation bill, and it was finally decided to refer the matter to a committee, who will bring in a report.

The whole of the morning was devoted to clinical work and there were many operations at the General Hospital for Sick Children and demonstrations at the Pathological Building.

In the afternoon an address on medicine was given by Dr. E. Libman of Mount Sinai Hospital, New York. In the evening a dinner was given at the Royal Canadian Yacht Club.

The next convention of the association will be held in Peterborough.

Team Ran Into Auto On Rice Lake Road

PORT HOPE, May 28.—An accident which might have been followed with serious results, happened near W. J. Crowhurst's, Rice Lake road, last evening. Arlie Northcutt was driving Mr. Trenouth's car, when a team driven by Mr. Louis Nixon approached and crashed into the car. The steering wheel, wind shield and mud guards were smashed and Mr. Northcut was considerably bruised. Mr. Nixon was thrown to the ground and suffered several minor injuries and the horses were scraped about the legs by the car. Mr. Northcutt claims to have been on the right side of the road and cannot understand Mr. Nixon's action in not turning out. Mrs. Trenouth, Miss Amy Trenouth and two other ladies were in the car, but escaped injury.

THE PUBLIC MUST PAY

Government's Increased Tariff Swells Retail Price of Wire Nails—$750,000 a Year From People

PROTECT MANUFACTURERS

OTTAWA, May 27.—What tilted tariffs forthwith do to the paying consumer was disclosed dramatically to Parliament to-night. Following the reporting of the C. N. R. resolutions, the House went into committee upon Hon. W. T. White's bill to amend the customs tariff act. Sir Wilfrid gave immediate notice of an amendment to strike out the provision which enabled the Government, by order in Council, to determine the amount of surtax to be collected.

Up Goes Prices of Nails.

Then came the matter of the relation between increased tariffs and increased demands upon the consuming public. Mr. A. K. Maclean drew the attention of the Government to the fact that the price of nails per keg had increased 25 cents as a result of the increased tariff upon wire rods announced by Hon. Mr. White in his Budget speech. He alluded to the matter because the Minister had given assurance that such a result would not be permitted.

Hon. Mr. White protested that the increase was not due to the tariff, because no change had been made in nails, only in wire rods. "The price is governed by supply and demand," he declared.

"And the tariff has nothing to do with it?" queried Dr. Michael Clark in mock amazement.

"We did not alter the tariff on nails," retorted Mr. White. The increase, he persisted, was due to the fact that the principal nail manufacturers had been enabled to obtain such prices for nails as the market warranted. The price of nails had been falling for the past eighteen months, and was rallying now owing to the improvement in the building trade, which he hoped would be still more marked.

How It Works Out.

Mr. Carvell protested against the Finance Minister's sophistries. The tariff on nails, it was true, had not been altered, but the tariff on the raw product which made nails had. As a result the consumer had to pay more. "I was talking to a hardware merchant in Woodstock, N.B., last Saturday," proceeded Mr. Carvell, "and he told me that as a result of the tariff he had to charge 25 cents a keg more to the public for nails. This he had to do because the wholesaler had been compelled to make the increase owing to the tariff change." Mr. Carvell said he would give the Minister the names if the latter desired.

"Why did the price of nails go down during the past year and a half?" asked Hon. Mr. White.

"I don't know as to that," replied Mr. Carvell, "but I do know that the present increase of 25 cents per keg is the direct result of tariff change."

Enlightens the Minister.

Mr. Loggie stated that he could explain for the Minister, being in the retail business himself, why the price had dropped for the past two years. There was formerly a combine of nail makers which had held up the price, and when the combine fell through the price of nails had dropped to its proper value. Now, as the result of the tariff changes made by the present Minister of Finance, the control of prices was practically and autocratically placed in the hands of two large nail rod making industries. An advance of 25 cents per keg had already been made to the public; there would shortly be a still further advance of 25 cents per keg.

$750,000 Extra Yearly.

"It means just this," concluded Mr. Loggie, "that the consuming public of Canada will pay $750,000 extra every year on the nails they have to purchase as a result of the tariff changes the Minister has made. There are one and a half million kegs of nails produced every year, and the price will be 50 cents per keg more than it was under the Laurter-Fielding tariff."

Hon Mr. White offered no reply to Mr. Loggie's arraignment.

APPEARANCE OF LOCK IS IMPROVED

Tourists or local people who travel to the Lakes via the Trent Canal this summer will receive more pleasant first impressions of the trip than heretofore. The reason for this is that Lock No. 6, at the entrance of the canal has been made to look charming through changes that it is undergoing. The house of Lockmaster Alex. Calder has been painted and flower beds are being introduced on the lawn. Where grass seed has refused to take root in the past, sod is being put down, and thus the whole appearance of the lock is improved.

GREATER ESTIMATES

Supplementary List Tabled by the Minister of Finance Shows an Increase of Five and a Half Millions

HEAVY MILITIA VOTE

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 28.—Hon. W. T. White this morning tabled in the Commons supplementary estimates amounting to a total of seventeen millions. The main estimates for the year were eleven millions less than last year, but supplementaries to-day total for the year about five and a half millions more than last year. The total main estimates were 190 millions. A new militia vote of $1,240,638 is provided for in the supplementaries, the chief item being $218,000 to complete the Connaught Rifle Range at Ottawa. The Railway Department votes include one million dollars for the construction of a railway to connect Montreal with the N.T.R., a million for the Quebec Bridge, and a million for the Welland Ship Canal work, a quarter of a million in the estimates for the Hamilton Harbour works, and $100,000 for Goderich Harbour works.

The sum of $650,000 is provided for the construction and completion of the dredging plant in the River St. Lawrence.

PROBABILITIES.

Moderate north east and east winds, fair, and a little cooler to-day and on Friday.

THAW IS ON A HOLIDAY

Accompanied by a Sheriff and Two Deputies Famous Prisoner Leaves for the Mountains

WAITING FOR COURTS

Special to The Examiner:

CONCORD, N.H., May 28.—Accompanied by the sheriff and two deputies with his secretary and waggon load of luggage, Harry K. Thaw, who has been here since September under arrest fighting his extradition to New York State, and to Mattewan Asylum, left here this morning for the mountains where he will spend the time shing till the courts give judgment. Thaw is paying the expenses of the entire party.

GRANDMASTER IS GIVING UP HIS POSITION

Examiner Special:

REGINA, Sask., May 28.—At the Orange Grand Lodge of British America, Colonel Scott announced to-day he will not continue as a Grand Master another year, despite strong solicitation. He says he cannot find time to be the County Judge of Lanark, and at the same time head of the order.

Dr. Ellis, of Fleming, Sask., is mentioned as his successor, and H. H. Morphy, M.P., as deputy.

The Manitoba school question is up to-day and will start an exciting time. Any reference to it yesterday occasioned heat.

Ontario West Grand Lodge has 40,000 members, the largest in Canada.

Title To Land Was Established

In Toronto, yesterday, as a result of an application pending the sale of the land in question, the Court ruled that Mr. Martin Coughlin alone held title to the land and could not sell it if he so desired. Mr. F. D. Kerr represented Mr. Coughlin.

Mr. Martin Coughlin, Senior, of Douro, came into ownership of certain properties in Douro on the death of his brother, Thomas. The point to be settled was whether the nieces and nephews of the deceased had any title to the land. The Court ruled, as stated above, that only Mr. Martin Coughlin had any title to the land, and that he could sell it if he wished to do so. The application was made as a sale to Mr. Ywons was pending.

OTONABEE FARMERS OBJECT TO CITY'S PLANT

Indignation Meeting Held Yesterday on the Proposed Site of City's Sewage Disposal Plant—Greatly Opposed to Locating It Under Their Noses.

MAYOR TRIED TO PACIFY

The residents of Otonabee in the vicinity of the proposed location of the city's sewage disposal plant expressed strong opposition to it at a meeting held yesterday on the grounds. The members of the Township Council were present together with many residents of McMartinville and Stewarts. Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P.P., Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., and Mayor Buller.

Mayor Buller endeavoured to assure the Otonabee people that the disposal plant would have no objectionable features. He told of what had been accomplished by the Town of Weston and stated that the grounds around that plant had been turned into a civic park. The plant is within a stone's throw of the town hall, and some of the finest residences in Weston are adjacent to it. Peterborough intended to erect a similar plant from which no offensive odours would emanate. The proposed grounds would be terraced and would be given a park finish that would in reality beautify the location.

Mayor Buller's assurances fell on deaf ears. The very association of the name sewer with the disposal plant was more than they could relish, and if the plant were to breathe the fragrance of violets or new mown hay it was not wanted, decidedly not wanted.

Mayor Buller explained the working of the tanks and the completeness of the modern diaposal methods, but apparently the Otonabee people were sufficiently aware of these facts. They had not gathered for the purpose of hearing what the plant would or would not do. Their foregathering was to impress upon Mayor Buller their hostility to the project of disposing of sewage in fair Otonabee. His Worship was told that the city should take the plant farther from the city's boundaries and the farther it was located from Otonabee the better pleased would be the residents of that township.

The meeting was virtually an indignation meeting, but the Provincial Legislature recently passed an amendment which permits the city to erect its sewage disposal plant in an adjacent municipality.

SAMPLE OF CALGARY OIL AT EXAMINER

Was Forwarded by Mr. E. G. McKeeley and is 65 Per Cent. Pure Gasoline—Was Taken in Raw State From Dingman Well

SAMPLE MAY BE SEEN NOW

Mr. E. G. McKeeley, formerly of the Examiner staff has forwarded a sample of crude gasoline, as it was taken from the Dingman well, thirty miles out of Calgary. This oil is 65 per cent. pure and is used in the propulsion of automobiles to and from the oil fields. Any persons desiring to see this sample may do so by calling at the Examiner office. The Dingman stock rocketed from $5 a share to $150 in a few hours, but is now selling at $98 a share.

The sample was brought east by Mr. Arthur Lloyd, who, with his brother, Mr. C. Lloyd, have returned from Calgary after completing a contract which they went west to begin.

Case Of Local Interest Settled

Action of Chas. Healey Against George Fife for $2,000 for Malicious Prosecution Dismissed

The action for $2,000 for malicious prosecution brought by Chas. Healey, of East City, against George Fife, has been dismissed before J. A. C. Cameron in the Master's Chambers, Toronto. Mr. F. D. Kerr acted for the defendant.

The case arises out of the fact that Fife had his horse stolen some time ago, and another one left in its place. He informed the local detectives that Healey had probably stolen the animal, and after a long chase Healey was rounded up and brought before the local courts. He was committed for trial by Magistrate Dumble, but Judge Huycke dismissed the case. The defence was that Healey had secured Fife's horse by a legitimate deal.

As a result of the case being dismissed, and the previous arrest of Healey and his trial, he brought an action against Fife for $2,000 for malicious prosecution. This was dismissed yesterday in Toronto, with costs.

THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET

A Famous Song and Its Composer

Samuel Woodworth, the son of a modest Massachusetts farmer, was born in Scituate, in that state, January 19, 1785. While the family were poor and had no luxuries, their lot was no worse than that of the ordinary New England family, and they lived in comparative comfort.

While his life was a succession of ambitions, attempts and failures, his fame rests secure on his faithful portrayal of the old-fashioned well and weather-beaten well-sweep, universally to be found in the farms of that day.

While living in New York City, on Duane Street, he came home one July day, nearly overcome with the heat, and with nothing to drink but the tepid water of the city—ice being unknown in those days in the summer months — he exclaimed to his wife: "What would I not give this moment for a long draught from the old oaken bucket hanging in my father's well!"

"Samuel!" replied his wife, "wouldn't that be a good subject for a poem?" Forthwith he sat down—the thronging recollections of his childhood crowded thick upon him—and that charming idyl of bucolic New England sprang into sheathless life and fame. The music is said to have been adapted from an ancient Scottish melody by Frederick Smith. Woodworth died in 1852.

This song, like so many of the heart lyrics of an elder day, is found in the famous song collection called "Heart Songs"—which this paper is offering nearly free of cost to its readers.

We recommend them to look for the Heart Songs coupon, to be found elsewhere in this paper to-day—and learn the terms upon which this remarkable book can be had.

Preparations For "Y" Camp

This year's Y Camp on Clear Lake promises to be a great success. It will be held from the 29th of June to the 11th of July, and it is expected that it will be the best camp in the history of the Association. The boys who go will be under competent leaders, and it will be a great outing for any boys who desire to go.

CAMBERWELL LADIES ENTER CAMPAIGN FOR RECRUITS.—In order to encourage recruiting for the army and territorial force, a "colours" campaign has been entered upon and the opening marked quite an event in the history of Camberwell borough in England, when the Guards paraded the streets in the glory of their full dress and lady recruiting sergeants were the order of the day. The photo shows the lady recruiting sergeants persuading two youths to "take the "shilling."

THE DIFFERENCE.

The Liberal and the Conservatives in the Dominion Parliament are agreed upon the desirability of developing Canadian resources and promoting Canadian prosperity and growth through the construction of transcontinental railways and other transportation media. Equally with the Conservatives, the Liberals are in favour of giving all the help necessary to complete the Canadian Northern Railway, as a necessity in the scheme of national transportation. But there is a difference: The Liberals are in favour of aiding the railway, itself; but are opposed to conferring any more largess upon the men at the head of it—Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann. The Canadian Northern must be completed by the help of the country, or the bulk of the expenditure already made upon it will be lost to the country, for the country has supplied nearly all of the 250 millions already expended upon it. The Liberals hold that before further aid is advanced the Government of Canada must be made a senior partner to the extent of controlling the completion of the enterprise. The subject will be yet fully discussed in Parliament, and while the principle of assistance is approved by both parties the Liberals will make it plain that the details must be so arranged as to amply secure the Dominion for the aid it advances; that this aid shall not be lavished to the amount of 45 million dollars to further enrich private individuals, but it must assume the form of an investment, for which the country shall have corresponding advantage.

CONSTITUTIONAL COERCION.

Opponents of Home Rule for Ireland are given to glibly quoting, in relation to the measure the "coercion of Ulster." This is a false statement of conditions. The great majority of Ireland, taken as a whole, is in favour of Home Rule, and the rule of the majority is a sound British principle. Government would be impossible if the minority were allowed to nullify the will of the majority. Ulster is only a quarter of Ireland, and if we take into account the fact that a majority of Ulster itself is in favour of Home Rule, only an eighth of Ireland, as to population, really objects to Home Rule. No one altogether blames the disaffected and disloyal section of Ulster for opposing Home Rule. As the mouth-piece of reactionary British Toryism, it is expected to oppose progress, enfranchisement and wider liberty to the subject—in a word, to oppose the principle of self-government and favour the continuation of the rule of class and privilege. The prejudices of Ulster play is an important and in its opposition. It has a fear, honestly engendered, no doubt, by its prejudices, that home rule will affect its liberties. But it should wait. Before constituting itself a rebel section of the Empire; before threatening armed resistance to the will of parliament it should have some real reason for this course; some concrete evidance that the application of Home Rule will fulfill the prevision of it prejudices. To stir up civil war on a fancy seems to be a rather wicked thing to do. As far as "coercion of Ulster" is concerned, all law, all organised government amounts to "coercion" of the lawless element of a state. If there is any "coercion of Ulster" it is constitutional coercion, sanctified by centuries of precedent, beneficent result.

SARCASM.

A veteran of he Fenian raid is dead at Winnipeg. This must be the first break in the ranks of the thirty thousand survivors of the gory struggle that saved Canada for the Empire half a century ago, when nearly five thousand took up arms for the flag.—Ottawa Citizen (Conservative.)

THE WHY OF AN ELECTION.

We have all sorts of rumours as to a general election in Ontario being held in a few weeks. Since the present Legislative term is a year and a half short of maturity, the question is naturally asked, why an election now? Because the Liberals ask the question, the Mail and Empire answers it to its liking by declaring that the Liberals are afraid of an election.

There is more probability that the fear of the electors is on the side of the Conservatives supporting the Whitney government. The situation appears to be that a progressive party in Ontario—the Liberal party—is seeking for leadership in order to benefit the country by the application of a progressive proposals are day by day and administration. The Whitney government opposes the progress implied in this programme. It sees that these progressives proposals are day by day arousing public discussion, and by their merit, as being in the interests of the country, gaining popular favour. It is therefore evident that the longer an election is postponed the better for the Liberals in relation to the popularizing of this progressive policy and the worse for the government in relation to its reactionary and static attitude towards popularly demanded reforms.

The Liberal party is seeking the leadership of public opinion and their opponents represented by the Whitney government are antagonizing their efforts. The Conservative leaders on a great many vital questions of advance legislation has been within the grasp of Sir James Whitney and his cabinet, if they had chosen. The way it has chosen to throw away its chances of leadership is thus concisely put by the Toronto Star:

> The present Government has had the opportunity to accept the leadership and has thrown it away. It has refused to reform the mode of assessment and taxation, or even to allow municipalities to encourage enterprise and discourage speculation. It has refused to appoint a Minister of Labour. It has refused to deal with unemployment by a system of labour exchanges. It has refused to inquire into the conditions of country life and the causes of rural depopulation. It has refused to abolish the bar, and it has taken no measures to carry out Sir James Whitney's promises to legislate on the treating system. It has rejected a very moderate proposal extending to married women the franchise now enjoyed by widows and spinsters.

THE GURNEY OXFORD GAS RANGE IS NOTED FOR WHAT IT WILL DO AND WHAT IT WILL SAVE

No Housewife Should Miss This Series of Talks

THE HOUSEWIFE who Cooks with Gas doesn't have to "lay the fire." She simply turns on the gas and touches a match to it.

She has no uncertainty as to whether the fire will "go." She doesn't have to wait until the fire burns "up." She has no coal to carry, or ashes to throw out.

She does'nt burn fuel between meals when the fire is not required. She turns the Gas off. She doesn't light the whole fire if she only requires one burner. She lights what burners she wants, no more.

In fact it is only when you "Cook with Gas" that you understand what economy and satisfaction in the kitchen really means.

The Gurney Foundry Co. are Canada's Largest Makers of Gas Ranges. Their Gurney Oxford is noted for what it will DO and what it will SAVE.

This Company has carried on a series of experiments to find out how to cook a meal in its proper order. The result of these experiences will be given in a series of talks called Kitchen Engineering. It means preparing a meal from soup to dessert, in the proper order, each dish ready as required.

These talks will be given in the Turnbull Store during the week of June 1st. Every housewife is invited to attend. Admission will be by ticket which we will send you free on request, and at the Afternoon Lectures, tea will be served to visitors.

We want you to come and hear these Lectures. They will be helpful in your daily work. They will cut down the time and trouble of cooking. They will be interesting and instructive.

We give below the Place, Dates and the Time:—

PLACE: The New Turnbull Store Fourth Floor

DATE: Wednesday, June 3rd; Thursday, June 4th; Friday, June 5th; Saturday, June 6th

Bone Broken By The Super-Tango

HAVERHILL, Mass., May 27.—High jinks at a dance which young men of some of the first families of this city gave to the chorus girls of a musical company were revealed when Alderman Roswell L. Wood, five times mayor, caused an investigation into the injuries his son received at the dance. Young Wood, while watching the super-tango at the dance, fell from a balcony to the floor and broke a wrist.

Most of those present, including well-known young women of the city, imbibed quite freely and the tango was among the mildest of the dances given. When Wood was injured he was spirited away by friends in an automobile. The alderman told the police that everybody else at the dance was so gay that his son was neglected for an hour.

HANNA TO HAVE CONSERVATIVE LEADERSHIP

The Man who fears the Light on the Dark spots of his record, outfoots Hon. Adam Beck in the Leadership of the Conseravtive Party—Voting Conservative next election shelves Sir James Whitney and puts Hanna in his place.

TORONTO, May 28.—If the Conservatives are returned to power at the next election, Hon. W. J. Hanna, at present provincial secretary, will be the next premier.

A return to power will give the Government so much confidence that Mr. Hanna will be placed in succession to Sir James Whitney despite the protests of Hon. Adam Beck While Mr. Beck is not on speaking terms with Mr. Hanna, and is known to oppose the Provincial Secretary, he is about the only cabinet man in the House who is not in complete accord with the Sarnia lawyer. Sir James finds he must favour Hanna also, although he has been greatly chagrined because of the unsavoriness of the charges made against the Provincial Secretary.

In His Delirium.

While Sir James was ill in New York, the newspapermen who were in the same hotel, learned from the physicians and those in attendance on Sir James that the Premier in his delirium constantly referred to the Proudfoot charges, and in some measure his illness was attributed to the manner in which these charges preyed upon his mind.

Sir James Whitney was anxious to bring his Government through to the end without scandals being revealed. While he was aware of the contributions made to Mr. Hanna, and of other things that did not come out, he was anxious to hide these from public gaze. Mr. Hanna gave the Government a black eye, and has given it several others since. Nevertheless, he is the man who runs the Ontario political machine, and Sir James and all the rest have to give in to him.

Beck Vs. Hanna.

The contest for the premiership was between Messrs. Hanna and Beck. Sir James was reluctant to trust the policy of the province to Mr. Beck, but he had to choose either Beck or Hanna. He chose Hanna, because he thought with Beck at the head of things the province would be plunged into enormous expenditures and that the Minister of Power could never be curbed. Hanna will work more along the old-fashioned methods, and is the lesser of the two evils in Sir James' opinion.

Sir James will take some sort of part in the coming campaign. Mr. Hanna will be the real leader in the fight. It is not known whether Mr. Beck will appear or not on the public platform. There have been rumours that he would split with his party over the bringing on of the election, which he thinks is premature for reasons of his own.

To Make Excuses.

Mr. Hanna plunges into the campaign to-day at Seaforth. Then he goes to Watford, Petrolea and Kingsville. This is his bid for the premiership, and his public proclamation of victory in the contest with Mr. Beck. He will attempt to answer some of the charges made against him in the Huron license matter, the Proudfoot incident, and the matter of his connection with the Imperial Oil Company, which is the branch of the Standard Oil Company.

When challenged with his connection with Standard Oil Mr. Hanna publicly declared that the company had no connection whatever with the Standard Oil Company. A few days later in a suit brought in the State of Ohio to dissolve the Standard in that state, it was made a matter of record that the Imperial Oil Company was one of the subsidiary companies of the Standard Oil Company.

Forces Party to Take Him.

Mr. Hanna has failed to inspire confidence on any issue he has touched. But he has the personal strength to force himself upon the Conservative party as the next premier unless the Liberals are able to win the battle.

TRAGEDY IN WEST

Body of Thos. Hill is Found in Well After Five Days' Search --He Had Been Shot

SUSPECT ARRESTED

HARTNEY, May 28.—The facts concerning what was undoubtedly the brutal murder of Tom Hill, aged 58, are being slowly unravelled at an inquest that was opened here last week and continued Saturday morning.

The deceased mysteriously disappeared from the farm of J. G. Baker, in the Melgund district Sunday, May 17, and it was only after five days of weary search that his body was found in an old disused well, within a stone's throw of where he was last seen alive.

The inquest was conducted by District Coroner Dr. J. A. Tolmie, while Crown Prosecutor Matheson, of Brandon, is taking charge of the case on behalf of the crown.

The Cause of Death.

The post-mortem examination together with the other details that have been disclosed thus far, indicate that the late Tom Hill came to his end through foul play, and that he was beaten on the head with a club and that he was shot in the back, and when he turned around presumably to see what was happening, received the full charge of a shotgun in his face, his dead body was then ruthlessly flung in a well, covered with rubbish, and remained there for five days until it was discovered.

The post-mortem examination was conducted in the presence of the jurymen.

A number of leaden shots in the body left no doubt as to the cause of death.

The Arrested Man.

Meanwhile the young man whose name as believed to be Harry Green, is in custody, under strong suspicion of having committed the fatal deed. He is a young fellow about 28 years of age.

He came to Winnipeg from England just five weeks ago and arrived here almost immediately after then.

He claimed to have had experience both as a butcher and as a farmer.

A letter found on him was addressed to his mother, Mrs. C. Green, Sandle Lodge Farm, Sandleheath, Salisbury, England.

When the Deed Was Done.

There is no doubt but that the awful tragedy occurred in the peaceful calm of Sunday afternoon.

The women occupants of the farm had gone to the Methodist Church, a couple of miles away, leaving the two men, Hill and Green, apparently harmoniously discussing matters at their place on the farm.

On the family's return from church, Hill could not be found, and Green failed to give any inkling as to his whereabouts.

Then commenced a five days' patient search. The whole district was scoured and it was only when hope was almost abandoned that a thought was given to an old disused well close to where the deceased had been last seen alive.

A Lonely Spot.

The scene of the tragedy is on a lonely farm in a hollow of the prairie, and so situated that it would be impossible for shots to be heard by the nearest neighbour's farm which is about half a mile away while the other farms are nearly a couple of miles' distant.

The inquest is still proceeding.

Bringing Prisoner Here.

Harry Green, the young man who is held in custody under strong suspicion of having murdered Tom Hill, was removed to Brandon jail last Saturday.

He will probably come up for a preliminary hearing on the charge of murder before Magistrate Ba[illegible] on Monday. In this case Police Magistrate Batty of Hartney would be called as a witness.

The prisoner was originally confined in a small shed which, in the opinion of Crown Prosecutor Matheson, is wholly unsuitable to hold a prisoner for any length of time.

Other men have broken jail here before, it was stated, and Mr. Matheson thus favoured the removal to Brandon.

Magistrate Gives Evidence.

Magistrate Batty, of Hartney, gave evidence of identication and the finding of the body.

Provincial Constable Ross and Davidson were with witness when the body was found.

Constabel Ross went to speak to the young man Green when he was ploughing at the time, and after a short conversation Ross took Green in charge.

Witness described the appearance of deceased when taken out of the water. "His eye and the whole side of his forehead appeared to be torn away." The well was subsequently emptied with the supposition that the gun would be found there. The fact that the part of the deceased's left forehead appeared to have been blown off, led them to make the search for a gun. The gun produced was subsequently found in the farm house, it had been missed from its place after the disappearance of Hill, but had afterwards been put back. The gun, wire netting and wood found in the well were then put in as exhibits.

The Farmer Speaks.

J. G. Baker on whose farm the tragedy occurred spoke to leaving Hill and Green at the farm when witness and his sisters went to church. On returning, witness was told by Green, "Tom has gone north and won't be back to dinner." Witness thought deceased was a quiet tempered and good natured man. Witness did not make a search as he did not think for a moment that anything serious had happened. Witness was present when the body of deceased was recovered and noted that the pockets of the clothes were turned inside out and the watch and chain usually worn by him were missing. Baker was then questioned about the gun which figured in the case. "It was my gun," he said, "but I cannot say when I used it last. I used to keep it in my bedroom. I am sure I had not used it for a year. I did not miss the gun this week but my sister told me that the gun was missing. When I heard it I said, 'Well the gun is missing is it, if it has not come back it should be returned.'"

No Quarrel Noticed.

Miss Baker, who resides with her brother on the farm testified as to the habits of deceased whom she had known for a week or so. She had not heard deceased and Green quarrelling at anytime, but understood that some little business transactions affecting the sale of clothing had occurred. On returning from church witness asked Green, "Where is Tom?" and got the reply, "I saw him going up north with a small parcel under his arm."

BEEKEEPERS' FIELD DAY

To be Held at the Apiary of Mr. T. R. White, Lakefield on Tuesday, June 9th

Next to doing a thing yourself, the best way to learn is to see it done. It is one thing to sit in some convenient room and hear a man tell how he manages his bees; it is far better to go with him into the apiary and have him show you. That is what you will have a chance to do at the apiary of T. R. White, Lakefield, on Tuesday, June 9th, 1914, at 1:30 p.m. sharp.

A qualified apiary instructor sent by the Ontario Department of Agriculture will show how to examine hives for disease, and will actually put a colony through the treatment for cure. Other manipulations will then be shown, such as finding the queen, removing bees from supers, operating to prevent swarming, etc., etc.

Prominent local beekeepers will be asked to take part and assist in the discussion of practical questions. These apiary demonstrations are being held all over Ontario, and it will be well worth your while to attend one.

Ladies are especially invited, and all are advised to bring bee veils so they can come right out into the apiary with comfort.

WARREN BITHUMINOUS COMPANY MAY FALL IN LINE WITH MAYOR BULLER'S NEW IDEA

Mr. John Fallahee, representing the Warren Bithuminous Company of Toronto, waited upon the Board of Works last night. His visit had for its object a little missionary work in behalf of the company which will likely make a bid to secure the contract for any additional paving which may be done by the city this year. Mr. Archibald of the same company lectured the Board last week enphasizing the merits of the Warren paving, and Mr. Fallahee followed up with a more technical statement of why the Warren paving is the "one and only."

One of the interesting points he brought out was the use of graded stone by which voids were reduced to 10½ per cent, the lowest, he stated of any pavement. By the grading of the stone down to small sizes and using sand the substructure is given a compactness which is not secured by using ungraded stones. The smaller stones and sand fill in the open spaces resulting when stones of a uniform size are only used.

The Mayor's Idea.

Mayor Buller enquired as to whether the company would accept a contract for the top surface if the base and gutters were laid by some local man and all the work done by local labour. Mr. Fallahee stated that if the contractor who did the work was recognized as a capable concrete man, known to be honest and could show work that he had done in the city the company would be willing to accept the work. In fact they had frequently sublet the concrete work in the past, but they had to have assurance of the ability and the honesty of the contractor.

Engineer Parsons is now engaged in drawing up specifications for the next street paving that will be undertaken in the city.

ALDERMEN ASK FOR REPAIRS IN THEIR WARDS CITY ENGINEER SAYS MONEY IS LIMITED

The Board of Works had a light lunch last night, the demands introduced being solely little items which some of the Aldermen had gathered up since last week.

Alderman Duffus wanted some of the surplus street water for a section of Weller street; he also asked that the west ends of King and Bolivar streets be put in decent condition, and mentioned Gilchrist street north of Murray. On the water question the chairman held out no promises. Regarding the two streets in the West Ward these were already slated for careful attention. Ditto for Gilchrist street.

Mayor Buller said Boswell avenue needed about 12 or 18 loads of gravel, but a question arose as to whether it was Boswell, Margaret or Maitland. His Worship finally stated that it was the street on which Mr. C. Huffman resides, which proving to be Boswell avenue, the needed repairs will be forthcoming.

Alderman Anderson put in a word for the grading and general conditioning of the street through the lot at the end of Roger street leading to the Nicholls Oval.

Alderman McIntyre came through with a little claim for something for Oxford street. This highway has been promised "that something would be done" quite a while ago, Alderman Anderson declared, and it was nearly time that the said something materialized.

Engineer Parsons rattled the skeleton of meagre finances, saying that there was very little money for all the work that could be done, and as the Engineer resides in the Chanticler Ward, there must be some truth in his statement for Oxford street is somewhere across the river.

Alderman Anderson was, however, not deeply impressed by the threat, for he asked for a sidewalk on the east side of Rogers street between Hazlett and Dufferin streets.

Alderman Green enquired into the progress of plans on the proposed bridge on Bonaccord street.

The City Engineer stated that he would have the plans ready in a couple of weeks.

Successful Entertainment

Given by the A.Y.P.A. of St. George's Church

The Anglican Young People's Association of St. George's, South Peterborough, gave a successful social entertainment at St. George's schoolroom last evening.

A fair number congregated, larger than might have been anticipated, considering counter-attractions — to say nothing of the temptation on such a delightful summer's evening for a water outing.

The programme was more or less informal. Mr. Frank Russell, who takes a considerable interest in the welfare of the young, go-ahead English church, kept the audience amused for about a half hour in a recitation of humorous stories, which he termed "Lies and otherwise." This was followed by some instrumental and vocal music. Then came a time for sociability, during which some of the young ladies busied themselves right well in dispensing ice cream, cake, soft drinks and other equally acceptable comestibles.

A very pleasant evening was passed, which appeared to be much enjoyed by all those who were present; Mr. Price filling in the gaps by relating some of his amusing anecdotes, of which he has a considerable fund at his disposal. Altogether it was quite a successful function.

This Elopement Soon Stopped

Chief Constable Short received the following telegram last evening at ten minutes to 8 o'clock:

Highland Grave, Ont., May 26.

To the Chief of Police, Lindsay.

"Detain Alex. Chard and Mrs. Hammond who will arrive in Lindsay on the 6 o'clock train from Kinmount. Chard is dressed in black, grey felt hat, cut on wrist. Woman wearing light blue hat, dark blue dress, and has a baby about two years old. It is a case of elopement, and I will come on the afternon train to-morrow (Wednesday). Reply to Baptiste if held."—Signed, John Hammond.

Chief Short set to work immediately on receiving the above and arrested the party as they stepped off the 6.10 train from the north. Chief Short had the pair, around which so much romance is now centered, placed in separate apartments in the Hotel Grand, the young man putting up cash security that both would appear in court when wanted.

The case will be ventilated in the court before County Magistrate F. D. Moore, K. C.

Purse Carried On Her Person Safe

LANCASTER, Pa., May 27.— Mrs. Louisa Sheetz, widow of Alderman Sheetz, who refused to pay a $300 claim because she considered it an unjust one, was examined in Court as to her assets, in accordance with an Act of Assembly passed in 1913.

She admitted having $5,700 in money, and this she carried about her, and she said she had it in her clothes while on the witness stand. There it was safe from execution, and she could carry it continually, and not put it in the bank because in the latter it would be subject to attachment. If the suit against her should be withdrawn, she would invest the $5,700 so as to give her an income, and if not withdrawn, she would persist in her efforts to keep it away from her unjust creditor.

Closing Recital At Local Conservatory

During the past season the Conservatory Orchestra has placed before the public of Peterborough many delightful recitals. Last evening the closing recital of the season was given, and though the audience was by no means a large one, the manner in which compositions by Verdi, Chopin, Hayden, Bohm, and Paderewski, Wagner, and other great and noted composers were received, bore tangible evidence to the enthusiasm and love for classical music, which exists among a portion of the public of this City.

Music is the universal language of mankind," says Longfellow, and this would seem to be justly so. Yet there are not many people in this City who are deeply enough interested in sweet harmony discourned, to support the efforts of those few who as Longfellow says, recognize the art to be a universal language. And, further, he writes, in "Christus":

"Yea, music is the prophet's art;
Among the gifts that God hath sent,
One of the most magnificent!"

The programme, last evening, was opened by an overture by the orchestra, Lutspiel, by Keller Bela, the rendition of which spoke volumes, for the orchestra, and its conductor. The tone was neatly balanced, and the time was accurate. The crescendos and diminuendos were effectively taken, adding a finished touch to a finished composition.

A violin solo by Mr. Fred Hooper, "Il Trovatore" was also well rendered. Sufficient it is to say, that all the graces in that well-known and as well liked air, were rendered with a correctness, precision, and grace that reflected credit upon the soloist.

"Waltz in A Flat" by Chopin, a piano solo played by Miss Gwendolin Smith, was much appreciated by the audience. The presentation of this number required the greatest efforts of the pianiste, but nevertheless Miss Smith met all requirements, and won rounds of applause from her audience. To Miss Edwina Palmer and Miss Lora Logan, together with Miss Jean Hill, belongs much of the credit for such a successful evening. These artistes have been brought to the notice of the Peterborough public many times before, and it is hardly necessary to again repeat that they are most talented violinists.

Miss Palmer and Miss Logan operated most successfully together last evening, in a Symphonic Concertanta for two violins. The compositions involved a great deal of most difficult work, in which both young ladies excelled. Extremely difficult bowing was executed with an ease and composure which displayed the thorough training of the ladies. The finger work, too, was most satisfactory, while the one keynote of success, enthusiasm, was a most predominant feature. At the end of their presentation the young ladies were applauded heartily. The audience called for an encore, but owing to the length of the programme recall numbers were not given.

Mention should be made of Miss Jean Hill, who played "From the Magic Fire Scene," by Wagner, in a fine style. Miss Hill is a most accomplished pianiste and won contined applause form the audience, which was most deservedly won.

The Orchestra selection "Minuette" by Paderewski, was a sweet air, played in magnificent style by the orchestra. The string instruments played a prominent part in this composition and added an effect which was most pleasing.

The whole performance was much appreciated. The programme was as follows:

Overture—Lustspiel . . . Keler Bela
Orchestra.
Violin—Il Trovatore . . . . . Verdi
Fred Hooper.
Piano—Waltz in a Flat . . . . Chopin
Gwendolin Smith.
Selection—Ernani . . . . . Verdi

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER JR.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Caste is a relic of barbarism, one of the faults of early savagery which have been handed down by our ancestors. It is responsible, in large measure for lack of co-operation, and is the greatest enemy to the practice of the principle of the Golden Rule. It exists in every stratum of society, and even business is permeated with it.

While every member of the human race has a right to select his associates, and while civilization and ethics do not require any one to be intimate with those who are distasteful to him, the principle of caste is wrong and exists without excuse or reason.

Even the educational institution is not free from this objectionable element. The students divide themselves into cliques and classes and often refuse to intermingle to the detriment of every one concerned.

During the action of business it is obvious that necessary discipline will not allow the head of the department or the proprietor himself, to consider his employees for the time being his equals in the shop, store or office; for he must, if he would succeed, employ the discipline of the army. This condition, however, does not offer excuse for caste, and should not permit any one to ook down upon another because the other is inferior to him in intelligence or is poorer financially.

The formation of cliques, or the division of employees into caste sections, works for the injury of each employee and the business as a whole. It creates petty jeaousies, unjustifiable misunderstandings, and the worst form of competition.

It is a fact that truly great men, men great in money, great in intelligence, or great in accomplishment, are the most democratic of all, and have a wholesome contempt for the snob or social climber.

The great merchant is usually polite and considerate of his employees; the ignorant, over-bearing "storekeeper feels that he is made up of different material and that he will be contaminated if he associates with those whom he considers his inferiors. He seldom succeeds in business and he has no standing in good society.

Snobbishness is not limited to the employer. The employee of every grade has as much of it. The ten-dollar-a-week boy, forgetting that but a short time ago he occupied as low a position.

I am not asking any boy or man to choose his intimate friends without regard to preference and without considering mutual interests, but I am bitterly opposed, both from a moral and business point of view, to the formation of any class or set which considers itself better than another.

Getting together is the life of society and the life of trade. Separation into classes is fundamentally wrong and works for disaster. If the man in the ranks is faithful to his duty, he is just as worthy respect as is the commander of an army of industry.

If you do your best where you are, you are the equal of any man who has done his best, whether he trades in dollars or in cents.

THE KAISER SERIOUSLY ILL

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Germany, May 28.—There was much alarm throughout Germany this morning when it was announced that the Emperor was so severely ill that the military reviews at Potsdam had to be postponed. Official announcement said it was a severe cold.

Settlement Within Week

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, May 28.—Mediators and delegates are resting to-day after their trip to Toronto to meet the Duke of Connaught. It is expected, however, there will be a full session this afternoon. Many people close to the mediators believe that a settlement will come within a week and that a protocol assuring peace will be signed by June 5th.

Find Body on Pilot When Train Stops

CHICAGO, May 27. — Passengers and attendants in the La Salle street station were started when the fast mail train on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad steamed into the station with the body of a man jammed on the pilot. Several persons fainted.

Neither the fireman nor the engineer knew the train had struck anything.

A notebook found on the body contained the name Nicholas Greene, Westville, Ind. Scraps of harness and portions of a buggy were tangled in the pilot, indicating that the man had been struck while driving across the tracks.

KAISER'S SON WILL CONTRACT A MORGANATIC MARRIAGE

BERLIN, May 27.—German nobility, society and officialdom were aghast yesterday when Prince Oscar of Prussia, fifth son of Kaiser Wilhelm, publicly announced his engagement to marry Countess Ina Marie, daughter of Count Hassewitz, of Mechlinburg.

It is the first instance on record where a male of the reigning branch of the Hohengollerns has been morganatically engaged to wed. While the young countess is a woman of rank, she is not of royal blood.

It was confidently expected the Kaiser would either break the engagement or banish his son.

Prince Oscar is in his 26th year. The Kaiser has but two children younger than he, Prince Joachim and Princess Victoria Luise, now the Duchess of Brunswick. Countess Ina Marie Hassewitz is a half-year older than the prince. She is the daughter of Count Bassewitz-Lewetzow, of Schloss Brestow Das Tedrow, in Mechlinburg. The count is state minister of Mechlinburg and formerly was a member of the Reichstag.

Lady-in-Waiting.

The countess met the prince while she was a lady-in-waiting to Empress Augusta Victoria. It was believed at first that the Kaiser would consent to the marriage, but apaprently he will not and the countess has not been received in the royal household since the prince's attachment for her became known.

By flatly announcing his intention to marry the girl of his choice, regardless of Hohenzollern precedent and family traditions, Prince Oscar won the instant admiration of the German republic. The revelation of the romance that cost the Countess Ina Marie her position as lady-in-waiting to the empress and which may cost the youthful prince his royal standing was a sweet morsel under the tongues of all Berliners.

CONFERENCE OF CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES

The first conference of the Ontario societies affiliated with The Co-operative Union of Canada was held in the Assembly Hall of the Preston Society on Monday. President Edgerton of the Galt Society, presided, and there were present delegates from societies at Guelph, Preston, Berlin, Brockville, Peterborough, Galt, and two in process of organization at Hamilton and Weland. President Kennedy, (Preston Society), gave an address on "Co-operative Farming as a Basis of Future Development"; Manager Dickson, (Galt Society), on "Balance Sheets and General Finance"; and Hon. Secretary Keen, (Canadian Co-operative Union), on "The Future Deveopment of the Movement in Ontario." Resolutions were passed calling on the Federal Government to redeem its promise to enact a comprehensive Co-operative Bill; that the attention of the Attorney-General of Ontario and the Minister of Labour be directed to an alleged conspiracy between wholesale and retail grocers' organizations to prevent cooperative societies, legally incorporated by the Lieutenant-Governor, to trade in groceries, from obtaining supplies necessary for their business; that cash buying and selling is essential to the satisfactory development of the movement on a permanent basis; that new societies be urged to commence on that basis and that existing societies adopt that method as speedily as possible; that every member should invest in his society [illegible] to finance his own trade, and that the same should not be less than $10.00; that all new societies should select technically skilled managers alike as business administrators, educators, propagandists and organizers.

It was further resolved that a sectional board for the province, consisting of Messrs. Keen, (Hon. Sec. Caandian Union), Dickson, (Galt), Hosea (Berlin), Mayor Samuel Carter (Guelph), and Kennedy (Preston) be formed; that it be an instruction to such Board to propound a scheme for the organisation of a provincial wholesale society, or to negotiate with the English Co-operative Wholesale Society, (the largest wholesale organization of any kind in the world), to establish an Ontario depot, and to consider the advisability of applying to a County Judge for an order on the Department of Labour requiring it under the Combines Investigation Act, to appoint a Board to investigate as to the existence of a "contract, agreement, arrangement, or combination, to restrict competition to the detriment of the consumers," and if proven, to inflict the penalties provided by section 29 of such Act. Societies were recommended to place their orders with and make their trade as advantageous as possible to such wholesale houses as did not discriminate against them, and whenever a society is found to be the subject of a boycott its Committee should undertake a vigorous publicity campaign in the Town.

City Prepared To Take Next Steps In Hydro Matter

City Solicitor Gordon has been busy preparing for the proceedings whereby the city will enter upon what is expected to be the last stage of securing Hydro-Electric power for the city. The company is expected to submit to Mayor Buller to-morrow a complete statement of their assets. The City Solicitor stated to-day that he would urge for a new by-law which would take advantage of the new legislation, and which would permit the city to exclude the Auburn Dam. Arbitration proceedings will have to be continued, it is expected, and Mr. Gordon stated that in that case they would likely be under way early in June. Mr. Gordon left this evening for Toronto to confer with Mr. Cowan, counsel, in regard to certain details connected with the city's next step.

MILITARY JOTTINGS

A party from the 57th Regiment went out to rifle practice at the ranges this afternoon.

It is expected that fully three hundred men of the 57th will go to camp at Petawawa. Probably that will be the first and last time for some of them.

New khaki service uniforms are being issued to the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons this year. The Regiment will go into camp at Petawawa on June 15th.

The artillery is active. All members of the 24th Field Battery Canadian Field Artillery, or those wishing to join, are requested to assemble at the Armouries on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings. Instructor Derwent will give instruction in gun drill, and uniforms will be issued.

WEDDING BELLS

COVERT—BRYANS.

HAVELOCK, May 26.—A very pretty wedding took place at Havelock on Tuesday, May 26th, when Anna Eleanor, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bryans was united in marriage to Mr. Ross Frank Covert, of Peterborough, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Mr. Holdsworth of St. John's Church, Havelock.

The ceremony took place at 11 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, Ottawa street. The bride, who entered the drawing-room on the arm of her father, looked beautiful in a gown of white brocaded satin trimmed with shadow lace and seed pearls and Juliet cap trimmed with orange blossoms and lilies of the valley, and carried a bouquet of roses and lily of the valley. Her sister, Miss Bertha Bryans, who acted as bridesmaid, was gowned in pale blue brocaded satin and overdress of flowered ninon, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Dr. H. Allan, of Tweed, supported the groom, while the wedding march was played by Mrs. (Rev.) Holdsworth.

After the ceremony the bridal party sat down to a dainty wedding dinner. The bridal party left on the afternoon express for a trip to Toronto and Rochester, and other United States points.

The groom's gift to the bride was a mission wood piano, to the bridesmaid, a necklace set with sapphires and pearls, and to the groomsman, a pair of gold cuff links. The bride, who is well and favourably known in Havelock, where she has resided since childhood, was the recipient of many handsome wedding gifts, including a substantial cheque, the gift of her father.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN SAWERS.

There passed away at the home of her brother, Mr. Francis Sanderson, 529 Reid Street, on Wednesday, May 27, Mrs. John Sawers, after an illness of over four years.

The deceased was born in Smith township in 1848, her maiden name being Mary Jane Sanderson. The greater part of her life was spent in Peterborough, where her endearing disposition won many warm friends. Her long illness was born with the greatest fortitude and trust in God. "To know her was to love her."

The late Mrs. Sawers is survived by one sister, Mrs. Joseph McKee, of Smith, and four brothers, Michael of Lakefield, James of Saskatchewan, Francis of Peterborough, Edward of Smith, and William J. of Asphodel.

The funeral will leave the house at 2.30 on Friday, service being held at the house at 2, and proceed to the Little Lake Cemetery.

WM. JOHN CHARTAN.

The death occurred this morning at six o'clock at his late residence, 497 Sherbrooke street, of Mr. Wm. John Chartan. The deceased was 53 years of age. He was born in Port Hope, but came to this city about twenty-five years ago. He was highly respected by a host of friends who will learn with deep regret of his death. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife and six children, three sons and three daughters. The sons are Messrs. Arthur, Wilbert and Robert, all residing at home, and the daughters are Mrs. T. Stefan, of Rochester, N.Y., and the Misses Madeline and Evelyn, at home.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed, but will be announced in to-morrow's issue.

W.C.T.U. MEETING.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. will be held to-morrow afternoon at 3.30 o'clock in the Y.W.C.A.

ELECTRICAL CURRENT DOWN MAN'S BACK

LINDSAY, May 27—A severe electrical storm passed over the Town of Lindsay at noon to-day. The downpour of rain was immense and the lightning severe.

While the storm was at its height Captain Cranwell, in charge of the local corps of the Savation Army, received a severe electrical shock, the current passing down his back and burning one of his limbs from the knee down. The Captain had a narrow escape from death and he will be laid up for some time.

SOMETHINGS AND A FEW OTHERS

One might ask the question why so many of the maidens are wearing mourning. Heavy black is lovely stuff for the bright weather.

Along the lines of a theory propounded a few years back, if Ladies' Day brings victory, why not make every day open to the ladies?

It's easy to work in the cold winter time.
When you want to hustle and bustle a lot;
It's pie when the frost's on the old pumpkin vine.
But wow! ain'titell when it's hot.

Politics and midsummer are elements that do not mingle with the best results for the welfare of the people.

It's a cinch there will be no half holiday for the opening of Canada's national game in this city. There are just as many worshippers of golden calves to-day as when we lived in the persons of Achilles, Hero, Iphigenia and the rest of that bright galaxy. More, says the cynic.

In the meantime preparations are under way for the sacrifices to Hymen.

Our old friend "humidity" is back with us again.

And there is not much "hum" about when Old Humidity is in midsummer form.

The wholesale price of sugar is going up and this only the pineapple preserving time.

The only practical prod to stir some citizens into cleaning up their lawns and street fronts would be about a $1.00 fine. No, a 10 cent fine would scare some of them into a couple of hours necessary work.

The Blount brigade will be absent from our midst for one week and a half. They all have their gloves, and if some of the fans will supply the little prayer mentioned in the parlance of diamond they might get away with a respectable break.

Not only does the incinerator need soft coal, but some of the South Ward residents hold the opinion that the essence of violets turned into the furnaces might help some.

Why not have the other teams in the League rumouring that Peterborough is above the salary limit? Ottawa London and one or two others have held this distinction too long.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT.

Long live the Duke of Connaught,
Our Governor-General,
I mention in my sonnet,
Has done his duty well,
Will he no come back again,
To govern Canada.
All will sing in sweet refrain,
Come back to Canada.

First he came to Canada,
I was in his escort,
His visit into Ottawa,
At that time, seemed quite short,
I was young and time flies on,
It seems so long ago,
Allow me to sing my song,
Here in Peterborough.

In the River Ottawa,
He took a hunting trip.
Dressed in knickerbockers gay,
I saw him on the ship.
He was young and time flies on,
It seems so long ago,
Allow me to sing my song,
Here in Peterborough.

PETES PLAY SLOVENLY BALL AND ARE BEATEN IN LAST GAME OF THE SERIES

Final Count Was 3 to 1, Thus Giving the Teams an Even Break---Slow Work in the Field Helped Yanks to Win

A POOR EXHIBITION

It was a slovenly exhibition that the Petes favoured several hundred faithful fans with in the get-away game at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon, Erie having little trouble in winning by 3 runs to 1. The details of the play were given in yesterday's edition and a repetition of the story of the dire doings would be unnecessary and painful. Tuesday the Petes looked all over a real ball club, and on their showing on that occasion, it seemed easy sailing when Manager Blount sent Louie Schettler in yesterday to cop the last game of the series. Schettler had beaten Erie in the first game of the season, and he looked like the best bet for yesterday. But you never can tell! The Sailors showed a liking for the brand Louie was serving and kept a systematic clouting going all the distance. And the Petes showed an absolute lack of pepper that did not help Schettler much in his attempt to hold the Sailors in check. Welsh and Wilcox played several drives that looked like outs badly. King had a bad day in the short field, no one covered second on one occasion when Dunn was stealing, and altogether it was a loose exhibition.

At that the Petes had little luck with the willow or they might have made up for their showing in the field. Several times with men on the bases, the Petes hammered the ball on the nose, but right at somebody, and the chance was gone.

Carl Brown, who is the property of the Buffalo International League Club and who had lost four starts, was the Erie box artist, and he did not seem much of a mystery to the Petes. However, things broke for him and with men on bases he was lucky in having the homesters' drives go into somebody's hands.

The game was called at 2 o'clock and was finished in time to allow the Yankees to catch the 4:38 train for home. They play an exhibition game to-day with the New York Giants, who are on their way home from Chicago.

The fielding feature of yesterday's game was contributed by Gygli, the Yanks' first-baseman, who speared a torrid grounder from Blount's hat with his bare hand and tossed the local manager out. The play saved a run, as it came with a man on third and two out.

Erie scored in the first innings. Dawson walked, went to second on Dunn's out, and to third on Gygli's roller to King. When Harris beat out a grounder Dawson scored.

Peterborough tied it up in the fourth on a pass to Wilcox, Fox's sacrifice, and Kelly's single.

The Yanks went ahead again in the fifth. With one gone, Dunn scratched a hit to short. He stole second, and went on to third when no one covered for Kelly's throw. A single to right by Gygli scored Dunn.

In the seventh Gygli led off with a double and Schaeffer sacrificed. Gygli was out at the plate on Harris' grounded to Schettler. King let Behan's grounder roll through his legs, Harris going to third and scoring on Wiltse's single.

Petes Off On A Long Trip

The Petes left on the early C.P.R. train this morning for London to open a three game series with the Cockneys. The gang will be on the road all next week, playing in Toronto and Ottawa before returning home. This long road trip, with the team going uncertainly, is a tough proposition, but there have been signs of improvement in the past few days, and with a break in the luck the Petes may fare better on the road than they have on their home series. If they pull through this road trip with an even break or better they will have a chance to improve their position with a week at home on their return. Pitcher Cresswell was unable to accompany the team and will not likely get into the game until after the present trip is over. Swartling, the new first baseman, will likely be used in a day or two. Sterling or Belting will pitch to-day's game at London.

SOME FAMOUS BONEHEAD PLAYS PULLED IN BASEBALL

(By Ripley.)

Speaking of "bopes," which is fan vernacular for "bonehead plays," or poor plays, did you ever notice that the successes of the winners are matched by the peculiar misfortunes of the losers, and that the latter have a prominence of their own scarcely inferior to that of the former? Some players will always be remembered for the mistakes that they made rather than the brilliant plays they were wont to figure in.

The "bonehead" play has as unique a niche in popular fancy as the brilliant play. Sometimes the difference between a star play and a bone is remarkably slight. By that I mean that many a bone play would have been a circus play if it had gone through, and vice versa.

Of course, you have all heard of the celebrated John Anderson, one of the oldest and best known members of the ancient order of bonehead Heroes. Jawn's fame will never die. Although there have been many others since who were able to duplicate the feat that made Jawn's name one to conjure bones with, it is doubtful if his star will ever fade. John Anderson was the first ball player who ever succeeded in stealing second with the bases full.

More recent is the performance of Merkle that he is too well known to repeat—his failure to touch second base in that game against the Chicago Cubs at the Polo Grounds, September 23, 1908, cost the Giants a pennant. Merkle was the victim of a circumstances more than anything else, as what Merkle did in the game has been done hundreds of times by players in all leagues. Merkle was unfortunate—that was all.

Yet it was probably the greatest bone in baseball.

Harry Niles was another player famous for his tendency to pull boneheaded play. While playing with the Boston Red Sox against Washington back in 1909 Harry was at his best. The Red Sox were one run behind, two out, and Danzig on first. Niles hit a terrific drive toward centre field and with his head down he started to tear around the bases. Niles was a very fast man and Danzig was not, and Harry forgetting that there was a runner ahead of him, whirled around the bags and pulled up at third. Danzig in the meantime had halted at second, Niles having gone by him like a streak of lightning. When the smoke cleared away Niles was declared out for passing a runner and Boston's chances to win had flickered.

Last year it was Ivy Wingo of St. Louis who starred. Ivy's hit of brilliance was an infringement in a way on "Jawn' Anderson's stuff. Ivy stole third with the bases full.

In 1907 the entire Washington and Chicago teams were guilty of one huge "bope." Larry Schazy, then captain of the Washingtons, now manager of the Buffalo Feds, had retired to the club house to change his trousers, which he had torn in sliding to base. Before Larry returned his side had been retired and Chicago was at the bat. The Washington team took the field and the game went on—that is, all but Larry, who was covering second for the Senators. With only eight men in the field they proceeded to retire the Sox. Fielder Jones, first up, hit one through second before Schlafly's absence was noticed. Then the umpires after a consultation, decided that Jones' hit was illegal, as there were only eight men on the diamond at the time, and he was forced to come back and hit over. That is considerable bone-head work, isn't it? Seventeen men and two umpires, and even several thousand fans were guilty.

Another one on Harry Niles.

With the bases full and only one out in the ninth inning a short fly was hit out to Niles. The fans heaved a sigh of relief when he caught the ball, but it immediately turned to a roar of surprise when they saw Niles stick the ball in his pocket and tear across the field to the clubhouse, while his team mates ran frantically after him. Niles, of course, thought that three were out, but it did not prevent the three men on base from scoring and winning the game for the opposition.

They happen every day—these are a few of the most famous ones. But nine times out of 10 the term "bonehead" is an injustice to the player.

HARRY BURGOYNE HOCKEY REFEREE DIED RECENTLY

Harry Burgoyne, well-known throughout the Province as a hockey refree, died suddenly on Monday, at his residence, 682 Brock Avenue, Toronto, after a short illness, though he had been ailing most of the past winter from a complication of diseases, resulting he believed, from an injury to his ribs, received during a hockey practice.

During the winter deceased refereed a number of games in the O.H.A., his last appearance being at the arena in an exhibition game in March between Berlin and Western University of London. He went north immediately after this game to construction work in Northern Ontario, 260 miles east of Cochrane, and returned home a week ago, in a very weakened condition. Specialists could do nothing for him, and he passed away on the holiday.

Deceased was born in Belleville 26 years ago, the son of H. Burgoyne and nephew of Mr. A. Burgoyne of this City. He was well known in Belleville, and his death is deeply lamented.

He refereed a number of hockey matches in the city for the O. H. A. and in his early boyhood days took deep interest in sports of all kinds. In Belleville he lived on Dundas Street.

STORM'S HAVOC

The residents in the vicinity of Warsaw suffered heavily from the severe electrical storm on Wednesday night. Mr. McMahon had a valuable horse killed by lightning and Mr. William Leahy also lost a fine horse from the same cause.

Mr. John Gallagher, who lives on the sixth concession of Dummer, had his house struck by lightning. Beyond giving the family a scare there was very little damage done.

CLAIMS $225,000 FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

NEW YORK, May 28. — Apartments furnished to the last detail of luxury, diamonds weighing four and one-half carats and automobiles costing $8,000 and $10,000 are some of the gifts Arthur J. Hoe, son of Robert Hoe, of printing press fame, is said to have lavished on Mae A. Sullivan, who is suing young Mr. Hoe for $225,000 for breach of promise of marriage. The action went on trial May 26 in the Supreme Court, New York, before Justice Gavegan and a jury. Miss Sullivan is known among her friends as the "most beautiful girl in New York." There was a hint of Paris in her attire as she took the witness stand to tell her story. In a gown of blue and a straw hat with a myriad of feathers topping her brown hair she made a picture that caught the attention of every spectator in the crowded court room. Mr. Hoe sat within a few feet of her, and beside him was his wife, an attractive woman, much older than the girl on the stand. Mrs. Hoe was gowned in blue, with a modish summer turban.

NEW STREET OIL TRIED IN GUELPH

GUELPH, May 28—The City Engineer is making a test of the sample of British Amerian Road Oil, which was shipped to Guelph by the company which manufactures it. It has been spread on London Road, from Dublin Street to Park Avenue, and for some distance along Park Avenue.

The engineer states that it is absolutely odourless and that if it gives satisfaction it may be used on the Eramosa Road. It is 60 per cent. asphalt and is comparatively cheap, costing only 7c a gallon. The company claims it has given the best of satisfaction in other cities.

"HEART SONGS"

Refreshing as a drink at the OLD WELL

518 Pages of Sweet Music
400 Songs!

HEART SONGS is not a mere collection of music and words! It is a book compiled directly by more than 20,000 people, who in sending their favourite songs, told why they sent them.

From the lone cabin on the trackless prairie—from the snowy waists of Alaska—from the mining camp amidst the pines of the lofty Sierras—from the coral strand of an island in the far Pacific, so remote that the ships come only once a year (if they do not forget)—from the garrets of London and Paris, with only the stars above—from the sandy deserts of the Orient, somehow seemingly forgotten by even God himself—came these outpourings of the human heart—from the men and women who loved them—and the singing of which ofttimes saved their sanity and faith in Heaven.

Every song in this wonderful book has had some sacred memory—some touching experience—some sweet and hallowed association—connected with it in the hearts of thousands. It is their song of joy—of sorrow—of thanksgiving—of love—of bereavement—of home-coming—of re-union—of all the tender sentiments that lift the human heart in worship to its Maker. It is for this—by inspiration—that this unique volume is entitled "HEART SONGS!"

ANOTHER HEART SONG That Will Live Forever

THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET

This song to be found on page 495 of "HEART SONGS"

WRITTEN by Samuel Woodworth, the son of a poor Massachusetts farmer. His fame rests on his exquisite portrayal of the old-fashioned well on the home farm at Scituate, Mass. "The Old Oaken Bucket" was composed one summer day, when living on Duane Street, New York. He came home one afternoon overcome with the heat, and draining a glass of cold water said to his wife, "That is very refreshing, but how much more refreshing it would be to take a good long draught from the old oaken bucket I left hanging in my father's well at home." Thus inspired, he gave the world that matchless poem and song "The Old Oaken Bucket," one of the "Heart Songs" which will live as long as the English language is spoken.

Presentation To Sir Wilfrid

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 28.—As a marked appreciation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's forty years of public life the Liberal members in the House of Commons this afternoon presented the leader with a gold watch and chain suitably inscribed.

Ald. Anderson Did Not Favour The Proposition

In the report of the meeting of the Water Commissioners which appeared in last night's Examiner, it was stated that Ald. Anderson, who had formerly opposed the proposition, had been won over to the views of his fellow aldermen and seemed to favour the appointing of the City Engineer as head of the three departments. This, however, is not the case, as Ald. Anderson was then, and is still, of the opinion that, especially at the present time, it would be unwise to appoint one man to act as head of the Waterworks, Hydro-Electric and City Engineer's Department.

A spirited team of horses attached to White's delivery rig, broke the strap that held the iron weight, when they were standing behind the flour and feed store on Water Street, this afternoon and made a dash for liberty that occasioned a good deal of excitement. Tearing out of the lane behind the Munro House they turned towards the bridge and dashed down Hunter Street. As they left the lane one of the horses fell and was dragged some distance by the other, but it regained its feet and galloped with the other, across the bridge. They were caught in a daring manner by two men at the east end of the bridge but not until they had given a driver with a big load of furniture the time of his life trying to get out of the way of the delivery rig as it zigzagged down the street.

The bright, silvery appearance of the new "SALADA" package is due to the wonderful aluminium wrapping the company are now employing to packet their well-known tea. So close is its texture that it will preserve the freshness of the leaves even better than lead.

Stock Markets

A. E. Ames & Co., Brokers, report the following:

American stocks in London opened stronger with C.P.R. the leader. A rumour reported the Kaiser was ill, and C.P.R. broke sharply from 199¾ to 198. After the effect of this rumour was overcome C.P.R. and other American stocks rallied. Trading in all departments was light. Chas. Barring, incorporated, states that if the market got strong again to-day and closed higher than yesterday all you have to do now is to stay long and wait for the final fireworks and then cash in. They look for a considerable advance after the holidays—Decoration Day in the United States and Whitsuntide in England, and should not be surprised to see Union Pacific sell near 165 ex-dividend, Southern Pacific near 100, C.P.R. between 205 and 210, and others in proportion. Take no profits till we tell you to do so, or you will miss the cream of the market. You can buy the Fractions on a dip, also Erie, Copper, Rubber and Central Leather. We are looking for a sharp advance next week.

ONE THOUSAND PEOPLE ARE DROWNED !

The Monster C. P. R. Steamer "Empress Of Ireland" Sinks In The Gulf After The Collision

Goes Down in Few Minutes and First Details Show Loss of Life is Very Heavy--Sailed From Quebec at 4:30 o'clock Yesterday Afternoon--Commissioner Rees, Head of Salvation Army in Canada and the Territorial Staff Band Were on Board Ill-fated Steamer---420 Passengers Reported Rescued.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

QUEBEC, FRIDAY, MAY 29.—THE FIRST NEWS OF THE TRAGEDY CAME AT THREE O'CLOCK THIS MORNING WHEN S.O.S. SIGNALS ANNOUNCED THAT THE C.P.R. MAIL STEAMER EMPRESS OF IRELAND HAD COLLIDED WITH THE HANOVER OF THE NORTH GERMAN LLOYD LINE, THIRTY MILES EAST OF FATHER POINT AND WAS SINKING. THE "S.O.S." SIGNALS FROM THE EMPRESS WERE IMMEDIATELY RESPONDED TO BY THE GOVERNMENT STEAMER EUREKA AND THE MAIL TENDER LADY EVELYN FROM FATHER POINT, BOTH OF WHICH STEAMED TO THE RESCUE. FATHER POINT KEPT IN COMMUNICATION WITH THE EMPRESS FOR A SHORT WHILE, BUT NO FURTHER DEFINITE INFORMATION AS TO THE DISASTER WAS RECEIVED HERE UNTIL IT WAS LEARNED THAT THE CALLS FROM FATHER POINT WERE NOT ANSWERED BY THE EMPRESS WHICH WOULD SEEM TO INDICATE THAT THE EMPRESS HAS GONE TO THE BOTTOM.

FIRST NEWS OF DISASTER.

THE FIRST NEWS OF THE DISASTER CAME IN THE FORM OF A TELEGRAM FROM THE MARCONI STATION AT FATHER POINT TO THE ACTING AGENT OF THE MARINE DEPARTMENT WHO IMMEDIATELY ORDERED THE LADY EVELYN AND EUREKA TO THE RESCUE.

THE EMPRESS OF IRELAND SAILED FROM HERE YESTERDAY AFTERNOON WITH TWELVE HUNDRED ON BOARD, AND AS SHE STEAMED AWAY THE BRASS BAND OF THE PARTY OF THE SALVATION ARMY PLAYED SACRED MUSIC INCLUDING THE HYMN "GOD BE WITH YOU UNTIL WE MEET AGAIN," WHICH MAKES THE SETTING OF THE AWFUL TRAGEDY A PARALLEL WITH THAT OF THE HEROIC BAND ON THE ILL-FATED TITANIC.

AT 3:40 O'CLOCK THE WORST FEARS OF THE FATE OF THE EMPRESS WAS CONFIRMED IN A MESSAGE WHICH FOR THE FIRST TIME ANNOUNCED THAT THE SHIP WITH WHICH SHE COLLIDED WAS THE STEAMER HANOVER. THE MESSAGE RECEIVED FROM FATHER POINT TO THE SIGNAL SERVICE OFFICE READS AS FOLLOWS: "NO SIGN OF EITHER THE EMPRESS OF IRELAND OR HANOVER. LIFEBOATS ARE VISIBLE IN THE DISTANCE CIRCLING AROUND THE C.G.S. EUREKA. THE GOVERNMENT STEAMER LADY EVELYN IS ALSO ON THE SCENE NOW AND A COAL STEAMER IS ALSO IN THE SAME DIRECTION." THE NEWS OF THE SINKING WAS RECEIVED HERE BY A MARCONIGRAM ADDRESSED TO THE ACTING MARINE AND FISHERIES AGENT.

SEVEN HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-SEVEN PASSENGERS.

THE EMPRESS OF IRELAND WAS IN COMMAND OF LIEUT-KENDALL, R.N.R., AND LEFT THIS PORT AT 4:30 P.M. YESTERDAY FOR LIVERPOOL WITH 77 FIRST, 206 SECOND, AND 504 THIRD CLASS PASSENGERS, A LARGE MAIL AND GENERAL CARGO. AMONG HER PASSENGERS WAS A LARGE PARTY OF THE SALVATION ARMY GOING TO THE INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF THE ARMY AT LONDON. THE LATEST BULLETIN SAYS A THOUSAND LIVES WERE LOST IN THE SINKING OF THE EMPRESS. COMMISSIONER REES, CHIEF OF THE SALVATION ARMY IN CANADA, WITH SEVERAL OF HIS OFFICERS AND THE FAMOUS TERRITORIAL SSTAFF BAND, WERE AMONG THE PASSENGERS ON THE EMPRESS.

FATHER POINT, QUE., MAY 29.—AT NINE O'CLOCK THERE ARE STILL MEAGRE DETAILS REGARDING THE SINKING OF THE EMPRESS OF IRELAND, BUT IT IS KNOWN THAT SHE DISAPPEARED IN A FEW MINUTES.

FOUR HUNDRED AND TWENTY PASSENGERS WERE SAVED AND HAVE BEEN LANDED AT FATHER POINT AND RIMOUSKI.

COMMISSIONER REES

Head of the Salvation Army in Canada, who was a Passenger on the Steamer "Empress of Ireland," sunk in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, this Morning.

STEAMER MAY BE LOST.

Large Quantity of Wreckage Sighted Off Charleston, S.C.

PHILADELPHIA, May 29. — A great quantity of wreckage seen floating in the ocean off Charleston, S.C., by the crew of the steamer Shawmut, in port yesterday from Jacksonville, Fla., is believed by shipping people to be the steamer F. J. Luckenbach, from Tampa, Fla., May 15 for Baltimore, which is about a week overdue. A revenue cutter is scouring the sea looking for the Luckenbach.

The wreckage passed by the Shawmut consisted of a large quantity of lumber and moulding and a canvas-covered hatch painted yellow.

COLLIDED WITH COLLIER

It Was Not the Hanover, as First Reported, That Sent the Empress to the Bottom

A TERRIBLE SCENE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

QUEBEC CITY, 11:15 p.m., May 29.—The collier Storstadt which collided with and sunk the Empress of Ireland, is proceeding to this port under her own steam with some survivors and some dead bodies from the Empress, which was struck in a vital spot and sank in sixteen fathoms of water. The impact of the collision when nearly all on board of the Empress were in their berths, was terrible. The scene immediately after the collision baffles description. The shrieks of the startled passengers awakened from slumbers, the hoarse cries of the captain and officers, and the wailing of women, mingled with rushing waters of the gulf as they poured into the huge gap in the side of the Empress. It is believed many people must have been killed immediately by the collision.

Royal Society Officers.

MONTREAL, May 29.—The Royal Society of Canada closed its annual conference here yesterday with the election of the following officers:

Sir Rodolphe S. Ruthier, Quebec, president; Dr. Alfred Baker, professor of physics, University of Toronto, vice-president; Dr. C. Gordon Hewitt, Dominion entomologist, hon. treasurer; Dr. Duncan C. Scott, Deputy Minister for Indian Affairs, hon. secretary; D. S. Dowling, Ottawa, librarian. The officers of the French section are: Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, president; Abbe Casselin, rector of Laval University, vice-president; Bouivny T. Montigny, secretary.

White Slavery Condemned.

CHICAGO, May 29.—The report of the special committee on white slave traffic was adopted yesterday without discussion by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States. The report emphasized the slogan, "No toleration; no regulation; no recognition," and urged that the evil be eradicated by strict enforcement of municipal, state and federal laws. Doubt was expressed of the advisability of teaching sex hygiene in the public schools.

ANOTHER STEAMER IN TROUBLE

"Germania" Reported to be on Fire

Examiner Special:

A. H. Stratton & Co., have received the following wire:

S.S. Germania reported by wireless to the office of its owners that it is on fire at sea. The fire is in the hold.

The steamer which has more than 200 passengers aboard is headed for the Azores.

A. H. Stratton & Co. received the following wire at 11.20 this morning:

Montreal, P. Q., May 29—The officials of the C. P. R. now admit that at least 850 persons lost their lives when the Empress of Ireland was sunk.

Montreal, May 29 — George Henderson who was among the rescued, wired his brokerage firm from Rimouski that 800 survivors had been landed.

MONTREAL, 11 o'clock, May 29.—The C. P. R. officials this morning gave out the following statement as received by La Patrie from its correspondent at Rimouski: "The governpress of Ireland, Lady Evelyn and Emreka came to the Government wharf here this morning. Their captains reported that the balance of the passengers and crew of the Empress of Ireland are in lifeboats belong to the Empress of Ireland, Laly Evelyn and Eureka. As soon as the two latter have landed their freight of four hundred passengers rescued, they will proceed back to the scene of the disaster to pick up others. All are reported as being safe." This dispatch is not credited in Montreal, particularly as the Stedstadt which rammed the Empress, reports as being on her way up to Rimouski with survivors and dead bodies.

Heavy Blow to Salvation Army.

TORONTO, May 29 The blow, which appears to have fallen upon the Salvation Army with the disaster to the Empress of Ireland, is one of the worst features of the tragedy. More than one hundred and fifty representatives of the Army, including many of the head territorial officers, of the Dominion of Canada, were aboard the Empress on their way to London, to take part in the International Congress, which was to be held in that City with representatives from fifty-eight countries. While these officers were the pick of the Army and came from all the large centres in the Dominion, the greatest proportion were from Toronto and the immediate district. Commissioner David Rees, head of the Army in the Dominion of Canada, and who had charge of Newfoundland, Bermuda, and Alaskan territories, as well, was on the Empress and with him were several other members of the family —Mrs. Rees, Capt. R Rees and Miss A. Rees, all of Toronto.

On Wednesday evening a celebration was held in the Army headquarters as a send-off to the London party, and the representatives who left were in the highest of spirits. It is explained that the reason so many of the prominent officers were sailing on the ship was in order that conferences might be held on board.

One Man Who Escaped.

TORONTO, May 29 — Captain Gilbert Best, one of the bandsmen of the territorial staff band, is the only member of that organization left if the worst fears are realized. He was to have gone with the others, but the death of his little girl on Monday made it impossible for him to get away.

LOCAL MAN ON BOARD

Mr. Wm. H. Perry, Recently Employed by Examiner, was Returning to England on the "Empress of Ireland"

SECOND-CLASS PASSENGER

Wm. H. Perry of this City, and up to the time of his departure, an employee of the Examiner, was a passenger on the ill-fated "Empress of Ireland". Mr. Perry left here on Wednesday night, having booked his passage through the local C. P. R. office. Speaking to Mr. Skinner, the agent here, this morning, he said that Mr. Perry had first intended only to take a third-class ticket, but changed his mind and went second-class. He was returning to his home in Manchester, England, where he intended spending a short holiday before proceeding to New Zealand.

He came to Peterborough about a year ago to work for the Examiner. No names of those who lost their lives have yet been received, with the exception of Commissioner Rees of the Salvation Army, and, consequently, nothing is known of Mr. Perry's safety. He was the only passenger from this City.

BRITISH MAILS.

Mail for transmission to Europe, is despatched from this city every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and matter is received until midnight. Four mails a day are closed out at the Post Office, for transhipment to Great Britain. d-tf.

MODERN KRYPTOK BIFOCALS

Do you wear the old style conspicuous cemented Bifocal lenses, or do you wear the modern KRYPTOK Invisible Bifocals? How often you see people wearing a very conspicuous sort of Bifocal Glasses- the kind with divided lenses for near and far vision.

KRYPTOKS do away with this.

They are light solid lenses with perfectly even, unbroken surfaces. There is no dividing line which keeps you ducking and dodging to see over, nothing but a beautiful clear lens through which you read and look afar with equal facility.

We have the EXCLUSIVE right to sell these lenses for this City and vicinity.

OVERCOME BY SMOKE.

Over Fifty Detroit Firemen Suffer In Railway Depot Fire.

DETROIT, May 29. — More than fifty firemen were overcome by smoke and ten partly conscious foreigners were dragged to safety from the flames which swept the basement of the Fort Street Union Station here Wednesday night. The fire, one of the most stubborn in the history of Detroit, was not completely extinguished until early yesterday. The cause has not been determined, but it started in a room in the basement where records were kept. The loss is estimated at $30,000. The firemen confined the flames to the basement. The station is used by the Wabash, Pere Marquette and Canadian Pacific Railroads. The old Michigan Central Station, a short distance away, recently was destroyed by fire.

No Drink Before Ten.

LONDON, May 29.—Beginning yesterday, the "No drink before ten" law will be rigorously enforced in Scotland. The act is aimed at the "black squad," namely, the open air workers in the shipyards, who are addicted to ante-breakfast refreshment generally a gill of whisky, followed by a pint of beer.

This Store Recommends JAPALAC because it gives a "finish" quite superior to that of ordinary varnishes.

JAP-A-LAC—the Content-Producer

DINGY, discolored and unsightly floors are not conducive to contentment. Why not bring about their complete transformation by means of the JAP-A-LAC "Model Floor" process?

This process consists in applying two coats of JAP-A-LAC ground color, a coat of JAP-A-LAC graining color (which is grained with the JAP-A-LAC graining tool), and then two coats of natural JAP-A-LAC—producing a bright, hard, durable finish like polished oak.

JAP-A-LAC is made in 21 colors for furniture, woodwork, and floors. Always put up in Green Tins bearing the name "GLIDDEN."

Call TO-DAY at your local hardware store for a JAP-A-LAC color card, and a copy of the little book, "A Thousand and One Uses of JAP-A-LAC."

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By LOUIS TRACY

Power was crossing the verandah with his alert, uneven strides when a voice came out of the gloom:

"Hullo, Power, that you? Come and join me in a parting drink."

It was Dacre, the one person in the hotel from whom such an invitation was not an insufferable nuisance at that moment.

"I'm in a bit of a hurry," said Power, "as I am off to-morrow morning; but I'm glad to find you here. You've received my note?"

"Yes. Sit down. I'm just going to light a cigar, and the match will help you to mix your own poison. Had a pleasant evening?"

It was a natural though curiously pertinent question; but Power was at no loss for an answer.

"I have really been arranging certain details as a preliminary to my departure," he said.

"Where are you bound for, New York?"

"After some days, or weeks, perhaps. I hardly know yet."

"You've changed your plans, it seems."

Power remembered then that he had invited the Englishman to visit Colorado. It was practically settled that Dacre should come West within three weeks or a month.

"By Jove!" he cried, "you must accept my apologies. Of course. I would have recalled our fixture in good time, and have written postponing your trip to Bison. Circumstances beyond my control will prevent my return home for an indefinite period. I can't tell you how sorry I am."

"Same here," said the other, with John Bull directness.

"But neither of us is likely to shuffle off the map yet awhile," continued Power. "You have my address, both in Colorado and at my New York bank, and I have yours. Keep me posted as to your movements, and we shall come together later in the year."

He was eager to dissipate a certain starchiness, not wholly unjustifiable, which he thought he could detect in his companion's manner; but the discovery of its true cause disconcerted him more than he cared to acknowledge, even to himself. Enlightenment was not long delayed. Dacre's evident lack of ease arose from circumstances vastly more important than the disruption of his own plans; he hesitated only because he was searching for the right way to express himself.

"You and I have cultivated quite a friendship since we foregathered here nearly three weeks ago," he began, after a pause which Power again interpreted mistakenly.

"Yes, indeed. Won't you let me explain——"

"Not just yet. You are on the wrong tack, Power. You believe I'm rather cut up about the postponement of your invitation. Not a bit of it. This little globe cannot hold two men like you and me, and keep us apart during the remainder of our naturals. No, mine is a different sort of grouch. Now, I'm a good deal older than you. You won't take amiss anything I tell you, providing I make it clear that I mean well?"

"I can guarantee that, at any rate."

Power's reply was straightforward enough; but his tone was cold and guarded. The chill of premonition had fallen on him. A man whom he liked and respected was about to fire the first shot on behalf of unctions rectitude and the conventions.

"I may as well open with a broadside," said Dacre, unwittingly adopting the simile of social warfare which had occured to his hearer. "I was out with a yachting party this afternoon, and we were becalmed. Three of us came away from the New York Yacht Club's boathouse about half-past eight, and took a street car in preference to one of those rickety old cabs. Luckily, by the accident of position, I was the only one of the three who saw a lady and gentleman come out of an Italian restaurant. The presence of two such people in that locality was unusual, to say the least; but, as the man was a friend of mine, and the lady one whom I admire and respect, I said nothing to the other fellows."

"That was thoughtful of you," broke in Power, half in sarcasm; for he was vastly irritated that he had not contrived affairs more discreetly, and half in genuine recognition of Dacre's tact.

"The thinking came later," said the Englishman slowly. "When all is said and done, a little dinner a l'Italienne might pass by way of a joke—a harmless escapade at the best, or worst. But, when I reach my hotel and find a note announcing that the man is leaving Newport unexpectedly, and when I hear at the Casino that the woman is also arranging to meet her father in New York, with equal unexpectedness, I am inclined to ask the man, he being something more than a mere acquaintance, if there is not a very reasonable probability that he is making a damned fool of himself. Now, we are going to discuss this thing rationally, or do you want to hit me with a heavy siphon? If the latter, kindly change your mind, and let's talk about the next race for the America's Cup."

Here no solemn diapason of wave and shingle relieved an unnerving silence. Not even the distant rumble of a vehicle broke the tension. The hour was late for ordinary traffic, early for diners and dancers. A deep hush lay on the hotel and its garden. It was so dark that the street lamps, twinkling few and far between the trees, appeared to diffuse no larger area of light than so many fireflies.

"Are we here alone?" said Power, speaking only when an uneasy movement on Dacre's part bestirred him.

"Yes. I saw to that when I heard your cab. I timed you to a nicety."

"You must be experienced in these matters."

"I have been most sorts of an idiot in my time."

"You are quite sure we are not overheard?"

"As sure as a man can be of anything."

"Then I recognise your right to question me. To-night you, to-morrow all Newport will know what has happened——"

"Pardon my interruption. Women are invariably careful of the hour, howsoever heedless they may be of next week. Newport knows nothing, will know nothing, except that a popular lady is meeting her father in New York, the said father having written to say he is coming East. His letter is Exhibit A, yours to me Exhibit B, or it would be if it weren't burnt."

"A legal jargon is not out of place. When the lady in question has secured a divorce she will become my wife. Now you have the true explanation of my seeming discourtesy. When I am married, I shall entertain you at Bison if I have to escort you from Tokio, or even from Sing Sing."

"But——"

"There are no 'buts.' She was stolen from me, decoyed away by the tricks of the pickpocket and the forger. I am merely regaining possession of my own. It was not I who cleared up the theft. That was her doing. There can be no shirking the consequences. If my mother, whom I love and venerate, implored me on her bended knees to draw back now from the course I have mapped out, I would stop my ears to her pleading, because I could not yield to it."

"Oh, it's like that, is it?"

"Just like that."

Dacre struck another match, and relighted the cigar which he had allowed to go out after the first whiff or two. Power noticed that the flare of the match was not used as an excuse for scrutinizing him, because his friend's eyes were studiously averted. Then came the quiet, cultured voice from the darkness:

"If that's the position, old man, I wish you every sort of good luck, and a speedy end to your worries, and I'll come at your call to that ranch of yours, from the other end of the earth, if need be."

Again a little pause. Then Power spoke:

"You ring like true metal all the time, Dacre. May I ask one thing—are you married?"

"No, or ever likely to be. I—I lost her, not by fraud, but by my own folly. But she understood—before she died. That is my only consolation. It must suffice. It has sufficed."

"I'm sorry. I touched that chord unthinkingly. I merely wanted to have your full comprehension—and sympathy."

"You had both already. I would not have dared to intrude if I did not realize that a man talking to another man can raise points which are lost sight of when a woman—the woman—is the other party to the debate."

"Would you care to hear a brief record of my life during the last few years?"

"Go right ahead! I'm not a gossip. If I know something of the truth, I may be able to stop a rift of scandal one of these days. There's bound to be a chatter, even though old Mr. Willard comes East."

"You know the name, then?"

"Certainly. Mrs. Van Ralten was speaking about him to-night—not very favourably, either. Said she couldn't understand how such a man could have such a daughter."

"Mrs. Van Ralten is a remarkably intelligent woman," said Power dryly. "I never saw Nancy's mother; but I imagine that this is a case of exclusive heredity, because there were never two more diverse natures than Nancy's and her father's. She is the soul of honour, and would give her life for a principle; while he bartered his own daughter for a few thousand dollars. If I were not convinced of that, do you believe I would besmirch her good name and my own by so much as to-night's mild adventure in an Italian cafe?"

"I can give you easy assurance on that head. I have seldom been so surprised as when I saw the pair of you leaving the place and entering a cab."

"That was a mere episode, a first meek onslaught on the proprieties, so to speak. You will understand fully when I have told you the whole story."

They talked, or rather Power talked and Dacre listened, till a clock struck twelve somewhere. Carriages began to roll along the neighbouring avenues, and lamps occasionally flitted past the hotel. Two or three vivacious groups crossed the verandah, and a porter turned on a lamp. Then Power found that his English friend had placed their chairs in a sort of alcove formed by a disused doorway flanked on each hand by a huge palm growing in a wooden tub which held a ton of earth, or more; so they were well screened.

"You meant to force me to confess," he said, smiling.

"Yes. It might have been merely folly on your part."

"But now?"

"Now it is Fate's own contriving. You don't want to escape; but you couldn't if you did. Or, that is awkwardly put. What I mean is——"

Dacre's meaning was clear enough; but he never completed the sentence. A cab, laden with luggage, drove up, and a slightly built, elderly man alighted.

"This is the Ocean House?" he inquired, when a porter hurried forward.

"Yes, sir," and the man took a portmanteau from the driver.

"Hold on, there! I'm not sure I shall want a room. How far is 'The Breakers' from here, Mrs. Marten's house?"

(To be continued.)

CHARTING THE OCEANS

LITTLE KNOWN DEPARTMENT HAS A GREAT RECORD.

It Was Landsmen Who First Put Hydrographic Surveying on Scientific Basis In the Interests of Commerce—Alexander Dalrymple Was the First Official in Charge But He Was "Too Jealous."

An application was made by the Attorney-General in the House of Lords, says The London Telegraph, which serves to call attention to one of the most important, and also least recognized, fields of activity of the Board of Admiralty — the task of charting the seas. In 1911 His Majesty's cruiser Hawke and the White Star liner Olympic came into collision in the Solent, and legal proceedings resulted. Now, Sir John Simon, on behalf of the crown, has had to make a singular confession. This great anchorage is, perhaps, the most famous in the world, by reason of its use by the British fleet, and its long association with the sport of yachting. And yet it has been discovered at this late hour that the charts which were employed in the trials, alike in the High Court and the Court of Appeal, were inaccurate. They showed the buoys wrongly. Consequently the crown has asked that new charts may be put in. The admissibility of this fresh evidence will be argued when the case comes formally before the Law Lords. The mistake which has been made in this instance will not, we are sure, be found to reflect generally on British charts. Yet in the history of British sea service nothing is more astounding than the indifference with which the naval authorities of this country —in common, it must be confessed, with those of most other nations— regarded for many centuries the search for a scientific basis of navigation. Perhaps the old sailors rather liked the mystery of the sea, with its wondrous superstitions and its elaborate but confused mythology. They may have thought that its very mystery added to the charm of a seaman's life. It is conceivable that since ports were scarce in those early days, and the sea was a very lonely place, they had a platonic affection for all the deities of the seas and oceans—not forgetting the Nereides—their delicacy may have led them to forbear invading kingdoms in which unknown, but fascinating and powerful creatures had hitherto been supreme, living in gorgeous palaces and attended by beautiful sea-maidens with sinuous forms, lustrous eyes, and long, flowing hair. On the other hand, these old, rugged sailors, who were nothing of scholars, may have had insufficient acquaintance with the work of the pioneer scientists among the ancients to realize that navigation could ever become an exact science. Whatever the cause—and we prefer the former to the latter supposition —the old seamen of the royal navy did not pry into the ocean depths; they were content sometimes to be very much at sea rather than intrude into realms where personalities of such mysterious attributes and charms had held sway since the earliest days of man's history.

It was unromantic landsmen — in England at least—who first conceived the idea of investigating the sea and studying its moods and tenses. They were led to invade the under kingdom not so much by a thirst for knowledge as by lust for gain. It is an unhappy fact, but there it is. Navigation owes everything to the business man, and in its most recent and exact development to the East India Company. This great trading concern, realizing the importance of making plain the route from east to west, first established a hydrographer's department. To the charge of that office, towards the end of the eighteenth century, Alexander Dalrymple, a man of wide experience of the sea and outstanding initiative, was appointed. Prior to this the Admiralty had had a poor opinion of the science, but in 1795, Earl Spencer, one of the most famous of our First Lords, decided that the casual cartographical service then at the disposal of the fleet should be improved, and Dalrymple became the first hydrographer of the royal navy. He it was who, with "one man and a boy," laid the foundations of one of the most remarkable and beneficial institutions in the world. Throughout his life he was either pursued by an evil fate, or was himself his own enemy; at any rate, in 1808 he was dismissed for "excess of zeal" — possibly at that time this was a crime in a Government department. At any rate, Dalrymple went, to die three weeks afterwards of a broken heart. His successor, Captain Thomas Hurd, perfected the organization; founded an intelligence service, in order that the charts might be kept up to date; organized a regular system of surveys, and at last prevailed on the Admiralty to allow the charts to be sold to the public. This last innovation was in no small measure responsible for the healthy growth of the work, for it was soon apparent that merchant skippers and yachtsmen were anxious to buy at reasonable prices the products of the Hydrographer's Office.

To-day the sea has no mystery. There are still vast tracts of the land surface of the world which have never been trodden by the foot of man; but the "Seven Seas" are an open book to the instructed sailor. He can navigate his ship from one side of the world to the other with a facility and sureness not surpassed by a London cabman as he threads his way amidst the wonderful nomenclature of the streets of our newest suburbia; and at last the sailor's eyes rest on some port which he may never have seen before, but whose every salient feature he knows with a certain knowledge, because he has provided himself with charts.

Troubled With Weak Back and Kidneys For 10 Years.

Many people fail to understand the significance of a lame, weak, sore or aching back.

When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Take notice to the warning and cure the backache on the first sign, for if you don't do this, serious complications are sure to arise and perhaps develop into Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, the three most deadly forms of kidney trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills will strengthen the weak back, and prevent any form of kidney trouble entering the system.

Mrs. Ed. Boyer, Nokomis, Sask., writes:—"I have been troubled with weak back and kidneys. I had terrible dizzy headaches, and could not sleep at night. In this way I suffered for ten years, until I read about Doan's Kidney Pills. I purchased two boxes, and as they helped me, I sent for two more; they put me on my feet, and I have been able to work ever since."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents a box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

FAMOUS STICKS.

King George Inherited Remarkable Collection of King Edward.

King George inherited the 2,000 walking-sticks which belonged to his father, King Edward. The collecting of walking-sticks was his late Majesty's favorite hobby, his most treasured stick being one which was regularly carried by Queen Victoria. This remarkable stick was fashioned from a branch of the Boscobel oak which once concealed Charles II. when escaping from Cromwell's soldiers. Queen Victoria had it altered somewhat, and a little idol from Seringapatam was inserted as a knob.

King Edward's collection of walking-sticks, of course, included all sorts of designs. It was a fact, however, that he preferred as a rule an ordinary crook shape. Indeed, his fondness for this particular design gave not a little impetus to its popularity.

Talking of famous walking-sticks and their owners recalls a curious story of the ominous trick which Charles I.'s walking-stick played on that unhappy monarch, for during the famous trial at Westminster Hall the head of the stick fell off.

Bygone monarchs were very fond of walking-sticks, and Queen Elizabeth put hers to an unpleasant use, for the merry Queen Bess employed them for beating her maids of honor.

In the clubroom of the Royal College of Physicians there is preserved the gold-headed cane, once the symbol of the doctors' profession, which was used by the celebrated Dr. John Radcliffe, who attended Queen Mary, and afterwards by four other eminent physicians.

At Kensington Museum, too, may be seen Goldsmith's malacca cane, which has some charming gold mounts. One of the most remarkable sticks in existence is owned by a seaman on H. M. S. Glory, and was made out of love letters placed on a steel spike.

Cannae.

Cannae, where Hannibal won his greatest victory over the Romans, is situated on the opposite side of the peninsula from the city of Rome, on the river Aufidus and about six miles from its mouth. It was from this battlefield that Hannibal sent to Carthage three bushels of gold rings from the fingers of the Roman knights slain in the battle. Cannae is about 200 miles from Rome.

THERE'S A REASON FOR BALDNESS BUT NO EXCUSE FOR IT

How To Prevent Greyness; What To Do if Already Bald.

Neglect of the hair and scalp is the primary reason for baldness in nearly all cases. But any excuse for the neglect is necessarily a poor excuse. A little systematic attention and the use of a really good hair tonic will destroy and prevent the return of dandruff. That, in turn, prevents premature greyness and baldness. Many hair tonics on the market are worthless if not harmful. The SAFE way is to mix your own hair tonic at home, or have a reliable druggist mix it for you, according to this formula: Dissolve 1½ drachm Menthol Crystals in 6 oz. Bay Rum; then add 2 oz. Lavona de Composee. Mix thoroughly. Rub into the scalp with fingers or stiff brush night and morning. This is the best-known formula for dandruff, to stop falling hair, to cleanse and beautify the hair, and to stimulate the growth of new hair. One of the ingredients not only stimulates the hair-growing follicles, but tends to revive the activity of the pigment-forming cells, so as to make prematurely grey hair turn back to its natural colour. The ingredients of this hair tonic can be purchased at any drug store. Try this tonic night and morning for 30 days, even if totally bald; it has accomplished wonders for others.

Evidence of Guilt.

A famous English judge who was very severe on the bench was walking with a friend near Sergebrook, in Lincolnshire, when they came across some old stocks. His lordship thought he would like to experience the sensation of sitting in them, and, the key of the padlock having been obtained, he took his place on the seat with legs outstretched and was securely fastened in.

It was an isolated spot, and his friend quietly disappeared round the corner and waited to see what would happen.

His lordship, having had more than enough of the experience, struggled in vain to release himself, but the stocks held him firm, and at last he appealed to a yokel who was passing to assist him in getting free.

The yokel stared at him curiously for some seconds.

"No," he said at last, shaking his head; "I dursen't; thee worn't put in they for nought!" — Pearson's Weekly.

Humor In Engine Names.

Humor may be found in the most unlikely spots by those who keep a look-out for it, and a contributor to The Railway and Travel Monthly has even discovered it in the naming of locomotives. Certainly, some of his examples are funny enough, though there was an element of the gruesome in the naming of an engine, after a prominent locomotive engineer, Slaughter. This was afterwards altered to Avonside, where the gentleman with the ferocious cognomen presided over the locomotive works. A similar case was the naming of an engine after S. R. Graves, and on this engine qualifying for the subject of its name, another burdened with a similar name was sent out. Again, imagine a Dachshund travelling 60 miles per hour.

Small Tacks.

How is this for a stunt? The centre of the tack industry used to be Bromsgrove, a town in Worcestershire, Eng., where all work was done by hand. It was a common feat for experts to forge 1,000 to 1,200 tacks so small as to fill the barrel of an ordinary goose quill, their weight being only about twenty grains.

Peterborough Pie.

One cup sugar, one-third cup butter, creamed together; one egg mixed with the sugar and butter; two-thirds cup milk, 1½ cups flour sifted with one teaspoon cream of tartar, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoonful vanilla. Bake in two layers in rather a quick oven.

Butter Frosting—One tablespoon butter, two tablespoons milk. Melt the butter in the milk, then add one cup confectioner's sugar and beat, beat! When smooth put between layers and on top. This is very nice with dates.

Stone and clean 12 good dates, press into the batter when it is ready for the oven.

Curried Potatoes.

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and cook in it a tablespoon of minced onion. Add a tablespoon of minced onion. Add a heaping tablespoon of flour and one of curry powder, one-half teaspoon salt and a cup of hot milk. Let boil five minutes. Strain over one pint of hot cooked potatoes, serve hot.

A DEAD FLY

May be as Dangerous as a Live One!

It is certainly more repulsive, and, if left, will breed far more disease than ever it did when alive.

It is not sufficient to kill the fly. You must destroy the germs as well. These, if allowed to multiply, will spread disease and death. Give up using the fly swatter and the unsanitary sticky fly paper.

Buy WILSON'S FLY PADS—the only really effective method of exterminating the death-dealing housefly. They kill all the flies in the house in a few hours. No dead flies left lying about.

Be careful to follow directions found in each packet.

SENATE PASSES BILL.

Anti-Tipping Measure Goes To Commons for Consideration.

OTTAWA, May 29. — Invitations have been issued for the ceremony in Senate at prorogation of Parliament. The invitations are undated, but the House will close on Thursday or Friday of next week. The usual notice also has been hung out requesting members to leave their keys before proceeding to their homes.

In the Senate yesterday the Davis anti-tipping bill was given its third reading, and sent on to the House of Commons for consideration. The bill declares that the giving and receiving of tips is an illegal act, punishable by fine or imprisonment. There was no dissent expressed on the third reading.

Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, has given notice of an amendment to the Railway Act to compel railways to pay their employes fortnightly in place of monthly.

MILITANTS DARING

Buckingham Palace Latest Object of Their Raids

WOMEN SMASH WINDOWS

LONDON, May 29. — Buckingham Palace is to be no longer exempt from the window-smashing raids of the suffragettes. It leaked out last night that between 11 and 12 o'clock Wednesday night two militants succeeded in evading the sentries outside the palace. Entering the quadrangle, they began throwing stones at the windows, and had smashed two of them when the sentries seized them and took them to the police station within the precincts of the palace, where they gave their names to the police. The Master of the Royal Household refused to prosecute them, and they were released after a few hours' detention.

At a meeting of the Women's Social and Political Union last night, when Mrs. Mansell told of what the two women had succeeded in doing, the audience burst into cheers lasting several minutes. The suggestion that the Queen must be horrified at the treatment meted out to imprisoned suffragettes was received with loud cries of dissent.

Mrs. Mansell strongly protested against the action of the Archbishop of Canterbury in refusing sanctuary to Miss Annie Kenney, stating that the archbishop would be allowed no peace until women obtained the vote.

Miss Barbara Wylie, alluding to the raid on Buckingham Palace, said that "Red Thursday" would have results more widespread than had yet been seen. One result would certainly be that the women would become more and more determined to cast off their chains, hold up their heads and bow down to neither the Government nor the King.

Thin, Weak, Nervous Headaches, Indigestion

Was Easily Worried and Excited, and Generally Run Down ---Marked Benefit From Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Thinness and nervousness usually go together and arise from the same cause—thin, watery blood. The digestive system is failing to supply the required nourishment to the tissues and the nerve cells.

A concentrated, easily digested tonic treatment such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is necessary in order to get the required nutrition into the blood stream. It is truly wonderful what this great restorative will do for thin, weak, nervous men and women.

Mr. Fred Carstens, farmer, Laird, Sask., writes: "I was very thin and nervous, and as I was continually growing worse, decided to give Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a trial. I would suffer from headaches and indigestion, was easily worried and excited and felt generally run down. The benefit obtained from this food cure has been ve[illegible] and I can recommend it with the greatest confidence to persons who are thin, weak and nervous."

Paralysis, locomotor ataxia and even insanity result from neglect to heed the warnings which tell of an exhausted nervous system. Nervousness, irritability, frequent nervous headaches, tendency to worry, indigestion; such are the danger signals which come to warn you of approaching trouble.

While Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is frequently successful in curing nervous prostration, partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia, it is wise to avoid these very serious diseases by keeping the nervous sytem in good condition at all times. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will help you as nothing else can. Fifty cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

PLAN ALMOST COMPLETE.

Mediators Have Achieved Object of Niagara Conference.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., May 29.—Plans for the pacification of Mexico through mediation have been practically completed. The major issues are now before President Wilson and Gen. Huerta for approval. When this is obtained, secondary questions will be taken up for consideration and determination. A protocol covering the basic principles will be signed, the mediation conference at Niagara Falls will close, the delegates will return to their homes, and the mediators will complete the details of the undertaking in conjunction with the authorities at Washington and Mexico City. This work may require some months. It is expected that the responsibility for dealin. with the Constitutionalist element will be thrown upon the United States.

Among the points yet to be disposed of is the personnel of the new provisional Government and the exact manner by which it will take office in succession to the Huerta regime.

On these questions the mediators conferred yesterday with the American and Mexican delegates.

The main point under discussion at present is just how the transition from the present administration to a new provisional Government can be effected.

The American Government has been desirous that the present Huerta Government give way to a commission or a junta of five persons, or possibly three. The Mexican delegation takes the view that a commission would be unpopular because their people, being unused to such a form of administration, might resent it as of foreign suggestion. They urge that the succession should be made regular through the selection of a Minister of Foreign Affairs, who would automatically succeed Gen. Huerta upon his retirement.

Cardinal Receive Hats.

ROME, May 29.—The public consistory at the Vatican, at which the red hat was conferred on those now in Rome of the 13 new cardinals created on Monday, including Cardinal Begin of Quebec, was held yesterday and was attended by several thousand people, most of whom were foreigners. A special mission will be sent to take the berrettas to the absent cardinals.

The papal procession and the ceremony was conducted with great pomp.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Word has reached Montreal from Ludwig Roever, Toronto, who is in Mexico City, and about whose safety alarm was felt.

The steamer Nicaragua, which ran ashore near Point Vivian, was released by steamer Cornwall and taken to Kingston for repairs yesterday.

Alexander MacDonald was sentenced to an hour in jail and fined $50 for attempting to impersonate a negro at the recent Montreal civic elections.

A scaffold with five men fell 18 feet at Berlin yesterday. M. J. Haller, Preston, was the most seriously hurt, sustaining a compound fracture of the leg.

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty, yesterday accomplished the first series of tests required in order to obtain an air pilot's certificate.

The sojourn of Harry K. Thaw in Concord, N.H., ended yesterday when he left for Gorham, in the White Mountains, where he will spend the summer at a hotel.

The parish church at St. Sylvestre de Lotbiniere, Que., was completely burned Wednesday. All the furnishings in the church were saved. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

The transatlantic steamship companies yesterday decided, owing to the amount of ice in the North Atlantic, temporarily to modify the track of their steamers to a more southerly route.

While engaged in a wrestling bout with a friend Wednesday night Albert Houle, aged 19, of 59 Burnet Lane, became overheated and unconscious and died on the way to the Montreal General Hospital.

AFTER FIVE YEARS

Winthrop Child Was Restored to Health by Vinol.

"Five years ago our little girl had a severe attack of diphtheria which left her subject to bronchitis and stomach trouble. She has been almost constantly under medical treatment. I have tried also two or three remedies containing cod liver oil but found her stomach rebelled against the oil. Reading your description of Vinol I decided to try it and did so with most astonishing results. I cannot begin to tell you how she has improved because you do not know what a little sufferer she was for five years. She has gained ten pounds since the story of what Vinol has done for her is only half told in this letter." Mrs. Adelaide Mulloy, Winthrop, Mass.

Vinol contains all the healing curative properties of cod liver oil, without the oil, and tonic iron added. That is why it helped this little girl after other remedies had failed.

We ask mothers of weak, sickly children to try Vinol on our offer to give back your money if it fails to help them. McDermid & Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte Streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe Streets.

Balcony Gave Way

Two Score Women and Children Hurled to the Pavement

RUSHED TO SEE PARADE

GEORGETOWN, Ont., May 29.—As a result of the collapse of a verandah of the Bennett House, on which about thirty or forty women and children had collected to see a circus parade about 11.30 o'clock yesterday morning, four persons are more or less seriously injured, one so gravely that her life is despaired of, and ten others are suffering from minor hurts.

Those seriously injured are: Miss Murhardt, 14 Glenwilliams, skull fractured; Mrs. H. Stuckley, Caledonia, bad fracture of the left leg; Mrs. John Sage, London, face badly cut and broken, requiring 27 stitches; eyesight threatened; removed to Guelph General Hospital; Andrew McDonald, 7 Limehouse, collarbone, shoulder blade and arm broken.

Those less seriously hurt are: Miss Hazel Scott, 16 Limehouse, arm broken; Mrs. A. Sachs, Georgetown, wife of the hotel proprietor, badly shaken up, suffering from shock; Miss McDonald, 16 Limehouse, face scraped, shock; Mrs. Murhardt, Glenwilliams, body bruised and head scratched, prostrated over accident to daughter; Miss Rose Walker, Georgetown, face badly scratched; Charles Sachs, head and neck hurt, and shock; A. Sachs, proprietor of the hotel, head and shoulders badly bruised through falling of the people from the veranda on him; Donald McKay, Georgetown, back hurt; — Cantelon, traveler, Toronto, back hurt.

The victims of the accident were mostly from out of town, and they had come in for the day to attend Haag's Circus. The greater part of those mixed up in the mishap were upstairs in the Bennett House, which is conducted by A. Sachs, when some person cried out, "Here comes the circus," and immediately there was a rush for the verandah. The weight of forty or fifty persons on this structure was too heavy for the supports, which are wooden posts, and those in the centre broke. The railing to which the women clung for protection also gave way, and the bulk of the crowd was thrown to the street, a distance of twelve or eighteen feet.

The force of their fall was broken by a big crowd of people who were standing in front of the hotel, and received the full force of the shock on their heads and shoulders. Some of those on the verandah nearest the door managed to scramble back through it on their hands and knees and so escaped injury.

At the Bennett House, it was said that Albert Sachs, the proprietor, had locked the door opening on the verandah that morning, fearing that some of the children who were playing round the hotel would fall over the railing and injure themselves. But some person had later opened the door and admitted the crowds to it.

It was also said that Mr. Sachs had had the verandah tested last autumn, and it was pronounced sound enough.

Some remarkable escapes were reported. Mrs. John Scott, Limehouse, landed on her feet in the middle of the roadway, with a baby in her arms, and both were uninjured. Others fell on the cement sidewalk and sustained minor injuries.

Upheaval In the Pacific.

SYDNEY, New South Wales, May 29.—The most severe earthquake shocks registered by Australian seismographs were recorded at 12.30 yesterday morning by the instruments at the Government observatory at River View. The waves lasted three hours. Indications were given of an unheavy in the neighborhood of the Friendly Islands, in the Southern Pacific.

Immense Iceberg Encountered.

BOSTON, May 29. — One of the largest icebergs reported by ocean liners this season was encountered by the Leyland liner Anglian, which arrived here yesterday from London. The officers say that the berg was about 200 feet high and 2,000 feet long. It was also directly in the path of the ship when discovered.

THE GURNEY OXFORD GAS RANGE IS NOTED FOR WHAT IT WILL DO AND WHAT IT WILL SAVE

No Housewife Should Miss This Series of Talks

THE HOUSEWIFE who Cooks with Gas doesn't have to "lay the fire." She simply turns on the gas and touches a match to it.

She has no uncertainty as to whether the fire will "go." She doesn't have to wait until the fire burns "up." She has no coal to carry, or ashes to throw out.

She does'nt burn fuel between meals when the fire is not required. She turns the Gas off. She doesn't light the whole fire if she only requires one burner. She lights what burners she wants, no more.

In fact it is only when you "Cook with Gas" that you understand what economy and satisfaction in the kitchen really means.

The Gurney Foundry Co. are Canada's Largest Makers of Gas Ranges. Their Gurney Oxford is noted for what it will DO and what it will SAVE.

This Company has carried on a series of experiments to find out how to cook a meal in its proper order. The result of these experiences will be given in a series of talks called Kitchen Engineering. It means preparing a meal from soup to dessert, in the proper order, each dish ready as required.

These talks will be given in the Turnbull Store during the week of June 1st. Every housewife is invited to attend. Admission will be by ticket which we will send you free on request, and at the Afternoon Lectures, tea will be served to visitors.

We want you to come and hear these Lectures. They will be helpful in your daily work. They will cut down the time and trouble of cooking. They will be interesting and instructive.

We give below the Place, Dates and the Time:—

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE DINGY CORNER CLUB

of the British flag. Speaking personally, Dingley's Corners had a women's Club, a very prosperous one, for they owned their own china and silver, appropriately marked "D. C. W. C." and the club glowed with pride every time they served visiting clubs with refreshments.

The women of Dingley's Corners were all good housekeepers; some because they were born so, others because they were educated so, probably not one would have acknowledged that there was anything about the routine of household duties that was distasteful. It is not surprising then that the homemaking section of the club was the favourite and most popular one.

This particular meeting was devoted to the pure food question, and there had been much comment and discussion when Mrs. Perry remarked that it showed a commendable spirit for their club to be so interested in the question, but of course it had no personal application for any of them, a they all "put up" their own fruit and vegetables and knew just what they were giving their families.

Mrs. Fowler Smith was a newcomer having come to Dingey's Corners a bride five years before, and could not be considered a really consistent Dingleyite. If one was not born a Dingleyite it took most of one's other life to acquire that standing. "But," protested Mr. Fowler Smith, "surey some of you do do buy some canned goods?"

"Indeed not. Oh, my! no! The idea!" were a few of the exclamations that greeted Mrs. Smith's question, "Why? Do you?" came the exchange cordial.

"Indeed, I do'" was the prompt reply. The newcomer realized that she had exploded a mental bomb, but she was standing by her guns; not for nothing was she a Virginian. "There are many desirable, dependable brands of canned goods; if only one insists on having them, the merchant will be only too willing to supply them."

An unsympathetic silence was broken by Mrs. Curley asking: 'Really, aren't you afraid you are endangering the life of your husband by feeding him such things?"

"Indeed, I'm not."

"But why do you use canned things?" asked another.

"So as to have time for things I enjoy doing. If I kept house just as my grandmoither did, do you think I would be able to keep up my music, for instance, or help my husband with his pet hobby, the camera? Mr. Smith liked my music before we were married, so why shouldn't he now?"

"But you don't use baker's bread?" chimed in another.

"Yes, I do; if I need to. Not all the time, of course. Do any of you think that my husband looks as if he were neglected in any particular?" she challenged.

"Do you feel honest about it?" queried another.

"Yes. If I kept a maid — some of you do, I know—it might be different. But, just because I can't afford, or do not care, to keep a maid, is that any reason why I should forego all comradeship with my husband and be continually too tired to take part in any good times that he proposes. Before a woman is married she makes a point of always accepting her fiance's invitations. I make a point of always accepting my husband's invitations," and because she was etnirely human, she added, 'a'nd I continue to get them fully as often as I did before I married him."

"Well," grudgingly assented one honest soul, "you do seem to have more time for fun than most of us do. I asw you go by the house with your skates. My! I dont know when I've been skating."

"Probably none of you would have done what I did in order to go skating yesterday with Mr. Smith," returned the lady from Virginia. "When he telephoned that he would be home in 15 minutes and for me to be ready, if I wanted to go skating at Fisher's pond. I had bread just ready to put in the oven. But I said I'd be ready, so I worked the loaves down in a jiffy and set it in a cold room. We indulged in baker's bread on the way home, and I set the delayed bread on the radiator to warm. It came up all right and was baked that night,' and no one was any the worse."

"Of course,' she continued, "it's very untidy to leave the dishes unwashed, but I've done that, too, when something came up that needed to be taken advantage of right then. I think it very silly, and not at all right, for a women to let her husband lose his interest in her, and to never have time to spend with him as she did before she was his wife. There's always a way, and a woman is a poor manager if she doesn't find that way. Don't you think that I've justified my planning and housekeeping scheming for time at my own disposal?" asked the newcomer.

"I, for one," ahswered the club president, "think you have, and I'm glad you brought the idea before us. I'm going to surprise my husband and the children by joining them on a bobsled ride that I know they are planning for to-night. I have washed dishes promptly after meals for a long time. It's just the right night for a winter's frolic."

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

CURED A BAD ATTACK OF ECZEMA.

All skin diseases such as Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Rash, Boils, Pimples, and Itching Skin Eruptions, are always caused from the blood being in a bad condition, and it is impossible to eradicate them from the system unless you put your blood into good shape. This you can very easily do without the slightest trouble by using Burdock Blood Bitters.

It drives out all the humor from the blood, and makes it pure and rich, and not only are the unsightly diseases removed, and a bright clean complexion produced, but the entire system is renovated and invigorated at the same time.

Mrs. G. A. Day, Somerville, N.B., writes:—"Last spring I had a bad attack of Eczema. I tried several patent medicines as well as the medicine of a physician, but they seemed to make the disease worse. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and I did so with the result that in two weeks time the sores began to disappear. I continued to take it until I had taken three bottles and they worked a complete cure."

THE WALLS OF DERRY.

Citizens and Sympathizers Restoring Old Structures.

Although the ancient walls of Derry seriously interfere with the facilities to traffic and the extension of business premises in many parts of the city, the citizens steadfastly resist any attempt to tamper with the old fortifications behind which their gallant ancestors made such a brave defence in the days of the siege of 1688-89. The breaking through of the walls or the removal of any portion of them has always raised a storm of indignant protest and the Home Rule crisis coupled with the fact that the Unionist representation was lost through the treachery of twenty "personal friends" of the sitting, or rather lying Radical-Home Rule member, Mr. David Hogg, has accentuated that feeling. Recently, some plans were submitted to the corporation by Mr. Ald. Campbell, who was having some extensions made to his premises convenient to the famous Water Bastion, from the embrasures of which the guns of the Derry men poured shot and shell on the troops of James the Second. The bastion is in bad repair and it was feared that it would be further tampered with should the buildings extend to it. The corporation then placed itself in communication with the Irish Society, London, which has extensive vested rights in the fortifications, on the subject.

At a meeting of the General Purposes Committee of the Derry Corporation, held recently, a letter was read from the Irish Society stating that the court had had before them the resolution of the corporation asking them to restore the portion of the Water Bastion and wall as shown on their map and have same planted and looked after like the other bastions, the bastion to be retained as the property of the citizens. When this was agreed to the corporation promised to approve of the plan lodged by Ald. P. Campbell for building premises at this point. The foreman of that society, it was stated, having reported the result of a interview he had had with Ald. Campbell, the court resolved to fall in with the principle of the resolution, as had arranged with Ald. Campbell accordingly. The detail as to resloping and planting the fraction of the bastion were reserved to be dealt with by the society at their next visitation. Councillor M'Guinness moved a resolution placing on record their appreciation of the courtesy and expeditious manner in which the society had met the request of the corporation, and approving of the plans lodged by Mr. P. Campbell. Ald. Anderson seconded the motion. Councillor M'Gahey, J.P., said that Ald. Campbell had also acted in a big-hearted manner in this matter. The motion was passed.

It may be recalled that a Volunteer Motorcycle Corps recently demonstrated how it could blow up the bridges of the Boyne and cut off the rest of Ireland. The cyclists left Ballygawley, County Tyrone, and dashed right to the Boyne, affixed notices and a Union Jack on the Boyne Obelisk and on Ol. Bridge, and cycled back without having been observed by anyone, the whole thing having been done under cover of darkness in less than four hours.

Lord Lyons, the famous ambassador, was not what one would call a witty man, but there is one good story told of him showing that he could make an apt reply on occasion.

One of his friends, Mr. Augustus Craven, was intensely mysterious in manner, and once on meeting him in London Lord Lyons asked if his wife was with him.

It happened that Mrs. Craven was staying with Lady Cowper at Wrest and Mr. Craven replied in his solemn, slow, mysterious way:

"She is at Wrest."

"Requiescat in pace!" replied Lord Lyons with equal solemnity.

OUR LADY OF PETERBOROUGH

Two large deputations, has been at Ottawa.
On the Welland Canal, and the Georgian Bay,
The Trent Waterway, is far the best scheme of all,
From the Great Lakes of Canada to Montreal.

Trent Valley Waterway, is a daisy good axe,
For Vancouver, Fort William, and for Halifax,
The roundabout Cape Horn, of the Welland Canal,
Is little good for Canada, or Montreal.

Trent Valley Waterway, through Great Peterborough,
Is the most direct route, to Lake Ontario,
The Tory, and the Grit, is courting Toronto,
Instead of the Lady, of Great Peterborough.

Our Minister Sam Hughes, has nothing much to say,
In favour of the Trent Valley Great Waterway,
Toronto has the pull, on the Welland Canal,
Trent Valley Waterway, is laid flat on the wall.

I don't like the Welland, being close to the States,
The Erie Waterway, would cut our shipping rates,
Our trade would go to New York, by Erie Canal,
Instead of Lake Ontario, to Montreal.

I would like to see this Trent Waterway complete,
The Georgian Bay Canal can never compete,
With the Trent Waterway, I have pleasure to sing,
For the Army, and Navy, and Empire, and King.

If Sir Wilfrid Laurier, would give the Dreadnoughts,
It would make Canada prosper without all doubts,
The money would fly, from England, with a loud ring
To build this Great Waterway, so good for our King.

Why should J. H. Burnham, talk about an airship,
While the Trent Waterway never passes his lip,
Which is the shortest route, and far the best Canal,
And the key to all the Great Lakes, to Montreal.

And Farmer Sexsmith, is saying nothing at all,
The Trent Valley Canal, is put in his horse stall,
Our Members all around are courting Toronto,
Instead of our Lady of Great Peterborough.

The Marmora Iron Mines, near Peterborough,
Would make Railroad iron, and steel Ships here just so,
And Lithograph stone, to make Pictures here for all
At Peterborough, on the Trent Valley Canal.

Kawartha Lakes, for Tourists, are splendid to know,
From Lake Ontario and through Peterborough,
Through the Sault Ste. Marie, and the Georgian Bay,
All over the Great Lakes, through The Trent Waterway.

If Montreal City, would wake up some fine day,
And see the utility, of Trent Waterway,
It would ever chime in, and forever would sing,
For one Army, one Navy, one Empire, one King.

If our Empire would join in preferential trade,
Uncle Sam might annex to our Empire's Brigade,
Their two Armies, and their two Navies, both combine,
For the peace of the world, in a fair fighting line.

Canada hails for one mor Century of peace,
That Warships on our Great Lakes, will evermore cease,
Treaties between Governments, should be kept, I say,
For the honour of Uncle Sam, and Canada.

The Bible is the secret of England's Greatness,
Its Author is The Trinity, of all goodness,
Then spread it far and wide, over all our Empire,
Peace on earth, and good will to men, is God's desire.

May 20th, 1914. John Bell.

Resolved, That I, a citizen of Peterborough, believe that the Trent Valley Canal, is the key of all the Great Lakes of Canada, to Montreal. And the best scheme of all the Canals leading into the Lakes, either for a waterway, with eight feet on its sills, or a deep waterway.

That the Welland Canal would be useless to Canada in comparison to that of the Trent Valley Canal.

That the Georgian Bay Deep Waterway, which would cost Canada at least $400,000,000, should not be undertaken by the Government of Canada, until after the Trent Valley Canal has been fully completed.

And, further Resolved, That our members of Parliament, along this Great Trent Waterway route have neglected the interest of Canada, by not placing this Greatest Scheme, the T.V.C., more plainly before the Government of Canada.

John Bell, 451 Water Street.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

DAILY FASHION HINT.

No. 6,641, Child's Dress.

This little frock is what most women will call cute. It has the front and back of the short body section in one piece, without any seam at the shoulder, and the little skirt is very slightly gathered where it is attached. The sleeve may be long or three-quarter, and the arrangement of the neck may also be varied to suit individual taste.

The dress pattern, No. 6,641, is cut in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Medium size requires 1¾ yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner Peterborough.

Sweetheart Dead Commits Suicide

LISLE, Ill., May 28.—Reginald A. Barr, leaving a note declaring that his slaying of his sweetheart, Florence Bentley, at Downer's grove, three miles from here late Saturday night, was accidentall, jumped beneath a moving train here early today and was killed.

It was his fourth attempt at suicide. In the note he said that he took a drug twice in an effort to die beside the body of his sweetheart, but both times failed.

In desperation he next jumped into a quarry pit, but he alighted in the stagnant water and "I couldn't sink," said the note. The clothing on his body was still wit when taken from the tracks.

The note said that Miss Bentley was killed when he tried to kiss her. She screamed and he placed his hand over her mouth. In the ensuing struggle they tripped and fell. He believed her neck was brown; anyway she was dead.

In an agony of remorse he sat beside her for some time seeking a spark of life. The suicide attempts followed.

SHOT TO DEATH AS HE TRIES TO ADJUST TRIGGER

ERIE, Pa., May 28.—When Mrs. William Pierce returned to her home near Hornby post office, south of Harbourcreek, yesterday afternoon, she found her grandson, William J. Taylor, aged ten, dead. The boy was lying in front of a carriage shed near the house with a ragged hole in his left breast caused by the discharge of a ten gauge shotgun. No one witnessed the accident. Coroner Hanley was called but after hearing the statements of Mrs. Pierce and the dead boy's father, he decided an inquest was unnecessary.

According to the statement of Mrs. Pierce she had left home shortly after noon to take her son, who was returning to Edinboro State Normal school, to the trolley station. The boy was not seen in the yard as his grandmother was driving out the lane leading from the barnyard to the main road. She returned to the farm at 4 o'clock.

She found the boy lying on his back with the gun with which he was killed at his feet. His heart was completely torn away and his back was filled with pellets from the shell. The gun had always been kept in the shed near which the body was found.

Tried to Adjust Trigger.

From the manner in which the body was lying, when found by the grandmother, and the position of the gun, the coroner arrived at the conclusion that the boy had had some occasion to use it and being unable to cock it, had placed the hammer against the shed with the muzzle against his breast. The gun, according to the coroner's deductions, had slipped and the hammer, falling back into place, had discharged the shell. The boy had never been known to use the gun before though it had always hung within easy reach. The supposition of the family is that he had seen a hawk descending on the chicken coop and had taken down the gun to shoot it. The shells had been procured from a bureau drawer in the farmhouse.

The boy had lived with his grandmother since his mother's death several years ago. His father survives him. A general favourite in the neighbourhood in which he lived, of a sunny disposition and a leader among his playmates, his death has plunged the entire community into mourning.

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were suffering, the heart had and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

How Ledgers Got Their Name.

On the authority of the best lexicographers "ledger" is an adaptation of a once common word, "ligger," signifying any large book suited better for lying on a desk than for carrying about. Sometimes this was applied to large account book, cartulary or the like, frequently a great breviary for use in church, as distinct from a "portas," or small one, carried by a "book bosom priest." "Coucher" is another old synonym for "ligger," the foregoer of the now general "ledger."

Kaffir Greeting.

"Saku bona" are the first words a stranger learns of the Kaffir vocabulary. The expression is the common form of salutation used by the natives, and its literal translation is, "I see you." It is considered a mark of respect not to give the greeting immediately, the delay showing the reverence in which the native holds

THE FARMER'S IDLE WIFE.

In a government report it is said: "The farmer's wife is now so occupied with social affairs that she has lost the art of making butter and jam and doing the work of the farm that her grandmother did. The result is a great economic loss to the country."

The farmer's wife in early days got up at half-past two.
And shined the plows and milked the cows and put the prunes to stew.
The breakfast for the hands she set upon the stroke of four,
And then she'd bake her bread and cake, and scrub the kitchen floor.
But nowadays the farmer's wife has time to call her own.
"Good gracious!" says the Government, "how idle she has grown!"

The farmer's wife, in times gone by, brough up the calves and lambs,
And sacked the oats and fed the shoats and smoked the hickory hams.
And when she'd cook three great big meals she cheerfully arose
And with her churn sat down to earn the money for her clothes.
But now she often visits 'round and gossips, like as not.
"My goodness!" says the Government, "how worthless she has got!"

The farmer's wife, some years ago, was wholly free from nerves;
Twelve hours a day she'd slave away at putting up preserves.
Six children dancing at her skirts, a seventh on her arm,
She'd gamely set herself to get the mortgages off the farm.
But now she sometimes takes a rest, like city women do.
"Great heavens!" cries the Government, "what is she coming to?"

The farmer's wife departed from this vale of toil and tears
For happier climes in those old times when under thirty years.
The farmer got another mate, he somehow aways found
The ideal wife who toiled through life and rested—underground.
But now sometimes her years add up their full allotted sum.
"Great Scott!" exclaims the Government, "how shiftless she's become!"

and spend an evening at home with the whole family. Each and every member will find a favourite song between the covers.

The Popular Idea of "Comin' Thro' the Rye"

The popular idea of this song which pictures the two lovers coming through a field of rye is a peculiar error. The "Rye" in the song is a little river in Scotland and "To Meet a Body Comin' Thro' the Rye," meant to meet someone crossing the river on the stepping stones. Any lad meeting a lassie crossing on the stepping stones was privileged to exact a toll of kisses.

Three Hundred and Fifty Survivors Picked Up and Twenty-two Have Died as Result of Exposure or Shock--"Storstadt," Steamer With Which "Empress" Collided is in Bad Shape But Continues Towards Quebec.

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, MAY 29.—THE OFFICERS OF THE DOMINION GOVERNMENT AT FATHER POINT AND RIMOUSKI HAVE OFFICIALLY REPORTED TO HEADQUARTERS HERE THAT MORE THAN ONE THOUSAND LIVES WERE LOST IN THE SINKING OF THE EMPRESS OF IRELAND.

QUEBEC CITY, May 29.—At least eight hundred and fifty persons perished in the Gulf of St. Lawrence early to-day when the Empress of Ireland was rammed and sunk in a dense fog, according to admission shortly before noon by the Canadian Pacific authorities here.

Latest details indicate that there were fourteen hundred people aboard when the Norwegian collier Storstadt lying low, heavy laden and solid, came out of the foggy night and smashed head-on into the Empress. Clad only in their night clothing in the majority of cases, the passengers of the liner made a rush for the boats. The crew of the ship and most of the male passengers kept their heads and aided in quelling tumult and getting the women into the boats, and though the big vessel listed and sank in ten minutes, several boats were launched. Though the details up to noon are still very meagre, it is thought that Captain Kendall and his officers were the last to leave the ship. As soon as possible the names of survivors will be ascertained and forwarded.

STILL CLAIMS NEARLY ALL SAFE.

TORONTO, May 29.—Despite this despatch direct from Quebec, a great bulletin has been posted at the Canadian Pacific offices here stating that nearly all are safe. "This is just like the Titanic disaster," said an experienced newspaper man. "The officials of the steamship company are purposely sending out misleading reports to let the shock fall easy."

TORONTO, May 29.—Misfortune seems to dog the footsteps of the Salvation Army party from the very start. They were delayed at the Union Station here for an hour on Wednesday night when the engine of the special train was delayed.

TWENTY-TWO SURVIVORS PERISH.

RIMOUSKI, May 29.—Of the 350 survivors of the Empress of Ireland, who were landed here this morning, 22 have since died from injuries and shocking exposure. Of the 350 only 12 were women. The Storstadt is proceeding slowly moving toward Quebec. She took a pilot on board at Father Point. Her bows are low down in the water, and she is in a very damaged condition. The C.G.S. Eureka was the first steamer to reach the scene of the accident, the Lady Evelyn arriving shortly afterwards. Both steamers rendered great assistance.

"SHIP GONE" WAS THE MESSAGE.

QUEBEC, May 29.—"Ship gone," was the laconic last message received by wireless of the sinking Empress of Ireland from Captain Kendall. The commander had previously sent a brief account of his "S.O.S.," but the speed with which the liner went down was indicated in the hasty and abrupt sentences with which wireless flashed the news of the tragedy.

The C.P.R. Empresses of the Atlantic are an excellent example of the best in construction and a model of excellence and taste in furnishings. They are big, graceful ships, well proportioned, built to meet every possible requirement of the service and also remarkably steady in rough weather.

They have a speed easily establishing their right to the title "Empress Steamships." The cabins throughout are roomy and luxuriously furnished.

On the upper and lower promenade decks are a number of special rooms, single and en suite, with or without private baths.

The spacious dining saloon has attractive features in alcoves which are usually assigned to families or parties travelling together.

The cafe situated on the lower promenade deck is sumptuously appointed, in keeping with its practical purpose, which is to supply light refreshments at any time during the day.

The music room on the upper promenade deck, with its original decorations, cheery open fireplace, and many cosy nooks and corners, is the acme of comfort and luxury. The smoking room, library and other public rooms are in every respect in keeping with the high standard maintained throughout the ships.

In short, to quote from a marine journal: "From stem to stern, and from keel to truck, these ships are the very last word in ship building."

"I WISH I HAD GONE DOWN WITH WIFE AND CHILD"

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 29.—"I would sooner have gone down on that boat with my wife and child than have heard this terrible news," and as William Clarke, street railway man spoke, his eyes filled with tears and his voice grew husky. His wife and nine-year-old daughter, Nellie, were passengers on the boat. "On Wednesday evening I went down to the special train to bid them good-bye, and I can't believe it until I see the names of those lost. For the past two weeks my little daughter has had a presentiment that something would happen. On the way to the train she said to me: 'Oh, daddy, I am afraid of that boat'."

Prince of Teck Refers To Appointment as Governor-General.

LONDON, May 29.—Prince Alexander of Teck had a hearty reception at the Canadian Club last night. Sir William Osler presided, and those present included Bishop Stringer of the Yukon, Sir Robert Perks, Sir John Anderson of the Colonial Office, W. L. Griffith and Prof. Mills.

Responding to the toast of the "Dominion," Prince Alexander said that the occasion was the first time since his appointment as Governor-General that he had the opportunity of meeting Canadians collectively. The occasion was all the more important by reason of the fact that most of them were business men interested in the progress of Canada.

"I realize, too," continued the prince, "as I proceed with the work before me, that you will be amongst my critics, I want you thus early to feel that, whether I succeed or fail, I have accepted the responsibility firmly determined to do my utmost for Canada."

NO MERCY FOR OFFICERS.

Reports of Constitutionalist Executions Pour In From Mexico.

NOGALES, Ariz., May 29.—Thirty-five Federal officers captured by the Constitutionalists at the city of Topic were executed on May 24, according to a despatch received here yesterday from Gen. Obregon, the Constitutionalist commander. The intercession of the German consul at the request of the American naval commander on the Pacific coast was in vain. The soldiers of the garrison, however, were spared.

Women Perished.

ARMAGOS, Mex., May 23. — (By courier via El Paso, May 28)—Thirty-five women camp followers lost their lives with 200 Federal soldiers in the battle of Paredon, it was learned. There were fifty-seven officers executed after the battle.

Reports of the execution of Gen. Munoz, a nephew of ex-President Porfirio Diaz, Gen. Orozco, and nine colonels now seem well established.

THE KNOWN SURVIVORS ONLY NUMBER 337

There Were 1367 People on Board the Steamer, Which Leaves 1030 as the Number Lost or Missing.

THE LATEST DETAILS

Special to The Examiner:

QUEBEC, May 29.—It was officially given out this afternoon that there were on board the Empress of Ireland 1,367 of which there are known survivors 337, leaving he number lost or missing 1,030. Very slowly and painfully the list of survivors is being spelled out over the telegraph wires. Up till one-thirty o'clock none of the names of the rescued had been identied as those of Ontario people, except Mr. and Mrs. Black of Ottawa, who escaped by jumping into the water and swimming till picked up. By a private message it is thought that Miss Elsie Lee of Toronto was saved.

OTTOWA, May 29.—The Marine Department here is strangely helpless in the face of the great disaster owing to its suddenness and, to the fact that there appears to be nothing which can be done excepting to recover the bodies of the dead. Early this morning the Department instructed its officials at Quebec and other points to utilize anything and everything available to render assistance and identify the survivors as soon as possible.

This is the third accident which has occurred on the St. Lawrence route since the opening of navigation. The effect of the present disaster upon the reputation of the route is realized here, though the Department expresses the strong opinion that the accident was one which could not have been avoided by navigation safeguards.

QUEBEC, May 29.—So far the names of the survivors indicate that they are mostly of the crew. The supposition is they were able to get out of the forecastle before the vessel sunk, while the passengers amidships and astern were killed instantly or trapped in their berths.

SOME OF THE SURVIVORS.

TORONTO, May 29.—Among the survivors of the Salvation Army party according to a telegram received at headquarters to-day, are the following: Major Frank Morris, of London, Ont.; Major Mrs. Atwell, Major Wallace Turpin, Captain Wilson, Lieut. Keith, Ernest Sward, James Johnston, Herbert Greenaway, Grace Hannigan and her little brother, whose parents were passengers and apparently lost.

TORONTO, Ont., May 29.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy of the Canadian Pacific, this afternoon gave an interview admitting that there had been a great loss of life, making the tragedy probably the greatest in the history of the St. Lawrence route. He says that it was apparent that the Empress was rammed in such a way that she was torn open from midships to screw and the bulkheads rendered useless. He declares that the owners had provided every precaution against such a catastrophe. He thinks that the officers didn't have time to rouse the passengers before the vessel settled. At low tide to-day, the funnels of the vessel are visible above the surface of the gulf and government vessels are standing by to prevent other vessels from running into her.

5 MILLIONS MORE

Final Estimates Show Big Advance In Public Expenditure.

OTTAWA, May 29. — Supplementary estimates as presented by Finance Minister White yesterday, total $17,438,812, of which $9,666,197 is chargeable to revenue and $7,772,715 is on capital account.

The main estimates for the year were $11,920,990 less than last year, but the supplementaries makes the total estimates for the year about five and a half millions more than last year.

The total main estimates were $190,735,176.

A new militia vote of $1,240,688 is provided for in the supplementaries, the chief item being $316,000 to complete the Connaught rifle range at Ottawa.

One million dollars is provided for the building of a Government branch line to connect Montreal with the N. T. R. There is a million for the Quebec bridge and another million for the Welland Ship Canal.

Half a million is placed in the estimates for Port Arthur and Fort William harbor improvements and the same amount for the Quebec harbor improvements. A quarter of a million is for the Hamilton harbor works and $100,000 for Goderich harbor works.

The sum of $650,000 is provided for construction and completion of a dredging plant in the River St. Lawrence.

Votes for public buildings in Ontario include: Barrie public building, $5,000; Brampton public building, $6,000; Cobourg public building, $25,000; Ingersoll drill hall, $10,000; Lindsay drill hall, $25,000; London armory, $50,000; Newmarket public building, $10,000; Orangeville public building, $10,000; Orillia public building, $10,000; Stratford public building, $20,000.

Harbor and river votes include $50,000 for dredging at Goat Island; Kincardine breakwater, $50,000, and Port Credit harbor improvements, $50,000.

MR. REG. TURNER HAS A NEW ONE

Mr. Reg. Turner tells a good story and it is original.

Mr. Agustus Schrader, of German origin, who resides on Gilmour street, carefully decorates his little home in honour of almost every occasion.

He was right up to the minute with his decorations for May 24th, and had asked Mr. Turner if he had seen them, and was advised that he had not. Mr. Turner then stated that he supposed he would make special preparations for Monday next as the parade would go down Gilmour street.

Mr. Schrader had not heard of the reason for Monday's festivities and inquired and on being told it was the occasion of the visit of the Duke and Duchess, he replied that he did not think he would be able to do anything as he was not Dutch.

After an explanation by Mr. Turner, is was finally decided by Mr. Schrader that notwithstanding the difference he knows to exist between the Dutch and Germans he will, however, decorate for the Duke and Duchess.

OBITUARY

THOS. J. McDONOUGH.

Mr. Thos. J. McDonough, until very recently manager of the Oriental Hotel, passed away yesterday afternoon at his home, 723 Bethune Street, after an illness of several years. The late Mr. McDonough was born in Ireland, but has resided in Peterborough for many years. During part of that time he had been connected, in the capacity of Manager, with the Oriental Hotel, and for a long time before.

The deceased was unusually popular, owing to the courteous way in which he attended to the comfort of all the guests at the hotel. He was well known and popular in this City and a large number of friends will be sorry to learn of his death. He was 42 years of age and leaves to mourn his loss a widow and three small children.

The funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock to St. Peter's Church and Cemetery.

No Opposition To Martin.

LONDON, May 29.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Joseph Martin, M.P., who on Friday decided to resign his seat in order to ascertain whether the Government really intended to "throw him over" owing to his having voted against his party, on the Marconi division, says that he has received a letter from Mr. Illingworth, the Liberal whip, saying that the Government would not oppose him.

BECKER IS SENTENCED TO DIE JULY 8TH

Special Wire to The Examiner:

Special Wire to A. H. Stratton & Co.:

NEW YORK, May 29.—Becker has been sentenced to die in the week beginning July 6th.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Charles Becker, former New York police lieutenant, was sentenced to-day for the second time to death at Sing Sing, July 8, for procuring the murder of Rosenthal.

FRIENDS NEARLY TOOK SAME TRAIN

Last night as the local contingent of the Salvation Army was leaving the City on the midnight train, a large number of their friends boarded the train to say good-bye. Owing to the large number that did, so many of them were still on the train when it started to leave the station, and when it began to move there was a general rush for the exits. Finally, after the train had gained some speed the likelihood of an accident appeared so evident that the brakeman stopped the train by the emergency air brake. The friends, including several women, were then allowed off. Had the train not been stopped they would have had to go to Havelock, spend the night there and return to the City this morning.

MONTHLY MEETING TO-NIGHT

The monthly meeting of the Protestant Benevolent Federation will be held at 8 o'clock this evening in the S.O.E. Hall, Hunter street.

A POPULAR DELUSION CONCERNING AN OLD SONG

"Comin' Thro' the Rye" — as now printed and sung, is usually attributed to Robert Burns—but as a matter of fact, only the first four lines are by Burns, the remainder having been added by John Walter, an Edinburgh musician and music seller, who later moved to London.

The air to which "Comin' Thro' the Rye' has become familiar to thousands of Americans—and to which it is now sung—is an old melody. "The Miller's Daughter" — somewhat modified by Walter.

People generally, and the artist and commentator who have followed suit, have taken it for granted that the song referred to crossing a field of rye. But the authentic version, however, shows that it refers to the fording of the River Rye, where certain stepping stones allowed the barefooted Highland Lassies to cross none the worse for the shallow water that swirled about their pretty ankles.

This world-famous melody is to be found in the wonderful collection entitled "Heart Songs"—now offered by this paper to its readers on terms that make it practically a gift. Elsewhere in to-day's issue is printed the coupon with music border that explains how this song book may be obtained. We commend to every subscriber this unusual opportunity of procuring a book that will be a source of pleasure in all the years to come.

DEATH.

CHARTRAN—On Thursday, May 28, Wm. John Chartran, in his 53rd year. The funeral will take place from his late residence, 497 Sherbrooke Street, Saturday afternoon, at 3 o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery.

FORMER LOCAL S. A. OFFICER A PASSENGER

Staff Captain Goodwin, who was stationed here seven years ago, in charge of the local corps of the Salvation Army, and who is now in charge of No. 1 Corps of the S. A. at Ottawa, was a passenger on the Empress of Ireland, her fate is not known.

During her sojourn here, she was known as a most diligent officer, and should she have met death with the rest of her unfortunate passengers, her removal will be regretted by a large number o Peterborough people.

FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1914

THE C. N. R. AND THE PEOPLE.

If, as the Borden Government proposes, the considerable sum of 45 million dollars is loaned to Mackenzie & Mann, to complete their Canadian Northern Railway, the people who pay should have some assurance that the money will be sufficient and will be exercised legitimately for the purpose of railway construction. In defence of its scheme, whereby Canada becomes the junior partner of Mackenzie and Mann in the Canadian Northern Railway the Borden Government has much to say in generalities of the "security" to be put up in return for the $45,000,000 bond guarantee which the Ministry proposes to give. Some of the security is of very doubtful value, to say the least. It includes railway properties which have yielded nothing but deficits. It includes bond issues which are already subject to prior mortgages. But aside from the question of the value of this security there is this significant fact:

The Government is not asking Mackenzie and Mann to risk a single dollar of their own money.

The Canadian Northern has already received from the people of the Dominion upwards of $300,000,000 of assistance. As the owners of the railway Mackenzie and Mann have grown enormously wealthy. They have become millionaires many times over. To quote Mr. R. B. Bennett, the Conservative M. P. for Calgary: "Reports say that they have $50,000,000 at least of assets." They have become multi-millionaires — but they have put none of their own money into the Canadian Northern.

Now, when they declare that more money is needed for the road they do not use their own great fortune or any part of those fortunes. Instead, they come to their friends, the Borden Ministers, and ask that $45,000,000 more of assistance be given them by the people. And the Government proposes to give it, for are not Mackenzie and Mann its supporters when campaign funds are needed? The Government has not said to the knighted millionaires: "Use some of your own great wealth". The Government does not even say to them: "Put up some of your own stocks and bonds and real property as security for this money you seek." As security Mr. Borden and his colleagues simply require from Mackenzie and Mann property which is of little or no value and property which is already covered by other mortgages. What is valuable the Government carefully leaves in the hands of Mackenzie and Mann.

Liberal speakers in the Commons have laid stress upon this aspect of the case. They have pointed out that the Government has made a bargain with Mackenzie and Mann, which is in the interests of the railway knights but against the interests of the people. They have insisted that Mackenzie and Mann should be compelled to place their own money in the enterprise.

Mr. F. F. Pardee, the chief Liberal whip, put the case frankly and well when he spoke on May 18th:

"I say, sir" decared Mr. Pardee, as reported on page 4101 of Unrevised Hansard, "that to allow men who have not put one single dollar of their own money into this enterprise to have control of the stock is an absolute breach of faith on the part of this Government, and in permitting it they (the Ministers) are not standing by the interests of the people. . . . The men of the Canadian Pacific Railway proved to the country the faith that was in them because they put up their own money to as great an extent as they were able to and they risked their all for that railroad. But far be it from Mackenzie and Mann to advance one single dollar of their own personal security, and in the present agreement, as drawn by the Government mighty good care is taken that Mackenzie and Mann should be clear so far as their personal securities are concerned.

"Mackenzie and Mann are not putting a five cent piece of their own money into the venture. Before one single dollar is given them under this resolution Mackenzie and Mann should be told in the strongest terms: 'If you say that $45,000,000 will complete the road, if you believe that the road when completed will be a paying proposition, then show your own faith in it by pledging your own securities; do not ask the people of Canada to get in and assume the whole load, which is almost too heavy to bear now while you, Mackenzie and Mann, keep out and save your hides.'"

But the Government and its supporters stand fast in loyalty to Mackenzie and Mann. The millionaires are to get more millions and the people pay the piper, unless the Liberal Opposition in parliament can succeed in having the proposals so modified as to protect the public interests, and not, merely, promote the interest of two men who have become millionaires on the money paid by the people.

RIGHT WAY WILL COME YET.

It is announced from Ottawa that a volunteer naval reserve force is to be formed. The Niobe and Rainbow are to be used as training ships. The force is organised under the Naval Service Act of 1910, which some of Mr. Borden's friends threatened to repeal, and the Niobe and the Rainbow are the vessels on which Mr. Borden's friends heaped ridicule. A sound policy may prevail in the end, after all.

A SHORT HAY CROP.

Ontario is in for a light hay crop this year, clover and alfalfa being especially short. It is not yet too late to make provision for substitutes. Peas and oats to be cut green may even yet be sown, where clover has been killed out. Millet may be sown still later. Corn, in a favourable season, and on well cultivated land, may be counted on to mature, if planted before the middle of June. If prompt measures are not taken, there is going to be a very serious shortage of fodder in Ontario during the coming winter.—Weekly Sun.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The Stock Market again followed our programme as stated last night by having a moderate set back in the afternoon and I look for the advances to be resumed to-morrow and to carry the general list on an average of 8 to 10 points higher before going many points lower. It is not good policy as a rule to buy stocks after they have advanced 8 or 10 points higher before going many points lower.

It is not good policy, as a rule to buy stocks after they have advanced eight or ten points, but if you do not have your full line of stocks I think there is little danger in buying a little Union at 158, Reading, near 165, Southern Pacific 94, Ice. 32, Erie Pref., 44; C. O., 52; Atch., 96; N. Y. C., 93, G. Q., 124; beet sugar, 23; American Ref. and Smelting, 63; Westinghouse 76, Rubber 55, Southern Ry., 25. The coppers slow at present level and M. O. P. around 18. I think it will sell near 21 and possibly 25.

C. P. R. of which you should be long below 190, was 10 points up, but I would hold it for still higher prices Hold all your stocks for the present. London market was very active.

A BIG BUSINESS DOCTOR

H. M. Cieger Says "Don't Guess, Know. You Know"—Has Renovated Many a Business

(Herbert Corey in the Buffalo News)

"Don't think you know," says H. M. Geiger. "Know you know."

Geiger's business in life is to find a corporation with the pip, the pull, the evil, whatever ecse corporations may ail from, and restore that corporation to a state of bursting health. Some folks call him a business doctor, but he isn't that exactly. He's more of an abandoned farmer in the fields of commerce. Now and then he finds a rocky hillside and sets it to work raising apples and buckwheat. The point is that he doesn't work for a fee. He works for H. M. Geiger.

Geiger is the son of a professor in the University of Wittenberg, in Springfield, Ohio, which is equivalent to announcing that he didn't cut his first tooth on a gold spoon. Eventually he found himself in business in a small way in Massillon, Ohio. One day the town was stunned by the announcement that a large manufacturing establishment had blown up, financially. It had been doing a great and presumably profitable business. No one could figure out what had caused the smash.

"I know," said Greiger to himself. "Too many wine suppers and not enough oatmea breakfasts."

His Work is Thorough.

It gave him an idea. Nowadays he is often appealed to by the officials of great corporations which are rapidly disappearing through the waste pipe to find out what is the matter. If he thinks it worth while, he puts his own investigation department at work. He doesn't take any one's word for anything.

"Not many people will lie to you in business," is one of Geiger's aphorisms, "but lots of people will forget something you ought to know."

Once satisfied that the business outlook is promising, he begins to scout for more and mental hazards. He has ordered out the president of a corporation because he is a liar and insisted that a new board of directors be elected because the old board sits around the directors' table telling unpleasant stories. He had dropped a suave and dangerous secretary into outer darkness and promoted the sixty-dollar-a-month clerk who had been doing the secretary's work along with his own. Once he had almost completed the reorganization of a Company's official force. He came to the treasurer.

"That young man," said Geiger, "must go. His accounts are all right, but I find that he has frequenty borrowed large sums from the Company's cash."

"But they have always been repaid," said the presiden of the Company. "We will keep him, I think. He is my nephew."

"You will both go," said Geiger. "I can't afford to have as president a man who thinks that way any more than I can afford to have as treasurer a man who acts that way."

Finding the Loose Spigot.

It often happens that the wabbly corporation is positively full of good morals, but is a few checks shy on the mental end. He has found corporations which do—for example—a million dollars' worth of business annually at a profit, but which lose money on every dollar over that sum. In spite of which the corporate heads have embarked upon a desperate selling campaign in the effort to recoup the losses occasioned by the past year's overselling. It not infrequently happens that every department of a great manufacturing business is economically conducted save one — and through that spigot all the profits of the establishment run out. Sometimes the business is dying through certain profits and sure jobs. Before the heads know what has happened younger rivas have taken their business away.

"Don't be too sure of your job," says eGiger. "It sows your speed. Don't be too sure of your market. It cuts your sales. Don't be too sure of your profits. It runs up your costs. Don't be too sure of to-morrow. To-doy's a good day."

In twelve years he hasn't had a failure in his reconstructing processes. He now centres absolutely 15 of the great manufacturing corporations of the country. He is a quiet, retiring man, who is hardly known except in the inner circles of corporate activity and on various large and lush golf links. He has no other amusements; but he plays golf as though it were a religion. He says he has to do it to keep in condition.

"A fat head," says Geiger, "thinks fat thoughts."

Locomobile For 1915 Is Latest Word In Car Ideas

NEW YORK, May 28.—What would appear to be the last word in motor car elegance and simplicity for 1915 is the first car to make its appearance on Automobile Row. This is the Locomobile line, which followed quickly the sale of the last of the so-called 1914 output a few weeks ago. Two of the new cars—a five-passenger and a seven-passenger touring car — were placed on display early in the week, and though their appearance was unheralded they have served to draw hundreds of discriminating motorists to the salesrooms in West 61st street.

Apart from the general effect produced by clean finish and workmanship in the chassis and the smooth, sweeping lines and artistic finish of the bodies, the new cars have dozens of lesser refinements that will appeal at once to the motorist who appreciates the latest ideas.

It would be difficult to select the most striking of the new features, but the electrical system is perhaps the thing that will make the strongest appeal. There are three distinct sources of electric energy—a storage battery of 120 ampere-hour capacity for the motor startes; a separate motor to start the engine and a dynamo to generate current for the lamps and to charge the battery. Each is designed for its particular purpose, and the combination has been shown under long tests to be absolutely certain and reliable.

Even the admirable simplicity of modern starting has been simplified in the new Locomobile, for in these cars it is necessary only to touch a button to get under way. This feature is one that will undoubtedly be quickly and generally adopted, but for the present it is exclusive.

The Bridgeport engineers have also devised a car locking device that renders impossible the theft of the car and practically spoils the desire of the small boy to tamper with the unguarded machine. The turn of a key in the lock (a key, by the way, which fits every other lock on the car) automatically "kills" the car, electrically and mechanically. Another turn of the key puts on the signal lights, while the rest of the mechanism remains inoperative

There are no side lamps on the new Locomobile, these having been made part of the headlights by use of an extension on top. The one-man top has been adopted, and this in turn is fitted with storm curtains which can be adjusted and fastened from the inside. Two oval plate-glass windows in the rear of the top afford all the advantages of an inclosed car.

In deep upholstery, the quality of leather and fittings in general, the standard bodies appear to afford every desired comfort, but the Bridgenorth concern is also prepared to furnish bodies from the foreign leaders in this line, including Kellner. In the matter of closed cars the motorist may make selection from imported fabrics for interior finish, with the guarantee that the goods will not be duplicated in any other car.

Sir Lyman a Chevalier.

TORONTO, May 29.—Information has just been received from Paris, France, to the effect that the Hon. Sir Lyman Melvin Jones has been elected a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor by the French Government. The honor has been conferred on account of the interest taken by the Massey-Harris Company, of which Sir Lyman is president, in the agricultural development of France.

Another Body Picked Up.

LISCOMBE, N.S., May 29.—Another body, making the eighth, from the wreck of the lightship Halifax 19, was picked up Wednesday on the shore three miles from the scene of the wreck. It bore the name Alexander McGregor. In a pocket were accident insurance papers, bearing the address 52 Keith street, Hamilton, Ontario.

Rejects Proposals

Government Passes C.N.R. Aid Resolutions Unchanged

OLD DEBTS ON NEW WORK?

OTTAWA, May 29.—The Canadian Northern resolutions were adopted by the House of Commons last night. The yeas and nays were not demanded, but the Government majority, upon various amendments, was 44. When the result was announced the Prime Minister introduced a bill founded upon the resolutions, and it was read a first time.

Three amendments were moved during the day, by Duncan Ross (Lib., W. Middlesex), Hon. Wm. Pugsley and Hon. Frank Oliver, respectively. Mr. Ross desired an investigation by a Parliamentary committee, and Mr. Pugsley moved that all the stock of the Canadian Northern be deposited with the Receiver-General, the Government to secure an option upon the same exercisable within five years upon payment of $30,000,000. Mr. Oliver asked that the Canadian Northern be required to equalize its freight rates between eastern and western Canada.

The debate was opened by Mr. Ross, who in support of his amendment, said the feeling in his part of the country against Mackenzie and Mann was quite bitter. Mr. Ross said the people of Western Ontario were keenly interested in the development of the provincial hydro railways and were convinced that Mackenzie and Mann were the enemies of the system.

Premier Borden said the belief was without foundation. If the solution offered by Mr. Ross had any meaning at all, it meant that the Canadian Northern must collapse, and that contractors, merchants, laboring men, and material men must wait for at least another 18 months before they could hope to receive the $21,000,000 owing to them by Mackenzie and Mann. He asked the House to vote down the amendment.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said it had been stated over and over again that the $45,000,000 to be raised on the Government guarantee would be expended on construction. How, then, could it go to pay a lot of old debts?

The House then divided upon the Ross amendment and it was defeated: Yeas 46, nays 90.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley then offered his amendment. The object of reducing the capital stock, he said, was to guard against imposition of excessive freight rates hereafter. In his opinion the system did not represent a value of more than $30,000,000 after all debts and liens were satisfied. Mr. Pugsley argued that Parliament should not take over the road without a mandate from the people, but the option should be obtained so that the people might be consulted at the next general election.

The Prime Minister, in opposing Mr. Pugsley's amendment, said it provided in substance for the Government "completing" and operating a transcontinental railway which it did not own at present and which it might never acquire. There was no foundation, he said, for the oft-repeated charge that the capital stock of the Canadian Northern was mere water. That stock represented between forty and fifty million dollars, actually contributed in land and cash to the enterprise by Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann. In addition to this, it represented their skill, enterprise and labor during 18 years of continuous effort.

W. F. Maclean (Con., S. York) urged steps to purchase the railway. The present, he said, was the time to act because within a few years the road would become so valuable that we could not acquire it.

Messrs. Thompson (Qu'Appelle) and Nesbit (N. Oxford) spoke in support of the Pugsley amendment.

The House then divided and the amendment was defeated: Yeas 45, nays 89.

A LETTER ON MUSICAL CULTURE

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—As the progress of musical culture in our City seems to be under discussion in your columns, kindly let me add a few remarks on the subject. Your recent article, "A Brief Review of Musical Season," will no doubt awaken further interest in the progress of music. To the sources of help toward the progress of music might be added the T.A.S. Ladies' Literary Society's good music throughout the season. One good result of the contributions mentioned is the possibility of support for such organizations as the Peterborough Choral Society and the Conservatory Orchestra. Through these large organizations Peterborough gains outside recognition as a musical centre.

Peterborough is a growing musical centre, and has of late been launching out upon ambitious ventures. One of the latest of these was the production of "Judas Maccabaeus" at the Grand Opera House, conducted by Mr. R. J. Devey. The oratorio was accompanied by the Toronto Symphony Quintette and the Peterborough Conservatory Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Rupert Glidden.

"Dr. Torrington, who conducted personally the grand finale, "Hallelujah, Amen," spoke in high praise of the work of the chorus."—Toronto Globe.

"The musical life of Peterborough appears to be very active. The St. George's Choral Society of that city recently gave their annual concert, presenting the oratorio, "Judas Maccabaeus," under the leadership of Mr. R. J. Devey. After the performance, Dr. Torrington, of Toronto, addressed the audience, urging them to continue giving their sympathy and encouragement to oratorio. He declared that they would never regret their support of musical culture."—Mail and Empire, Toronto.

All good music and especially oratorio has an uplifting influence, and should have the support and encouragement of educators and all who are concerned with the moral interests of the City.

Newcomers who join either the Choral Society or the Conservatory Orchestra have an added interest in the City and a pleasant and useful pastime for themselves. We do not agree that there is any "humble position" in a chorus, at least not in a well organized one. To those of musical tastes, choral singing is enjoyable and through it agreeable companions are found. If we are to progress in music we must have a clear idea of what constitutes progress. In this connection the letter in your late issue from the Vice-President of the Morning Musical Society may be open to criticism. This society as claimed may be of educational advantage to its members, but its attitude toward musical work outside of its own membership may be questioned. For instance, when St. Georges Choral Society gave its annual concert for the purpose of raising funds to defray its expense, the Morning Musicale Society held its public musicale on the same evening. Each member was permitted to invite two friends (if I remember correctly.) As can be seen, this would be a counter attraction. Those of us who are familiar with the work and expense of large musical organizations cannot approve the attitude of the Morning Musical Society in this respect. Again as stated in the letter, the Public Library, at the request of the members of this socicy, provided a number of expensive books. We agree that an assortment of such works should be on the shelves of our Public Library, but think they should be recommended by musicians of experience and recognized competence, to best serve the interests of the public. The prevailing fad of getting up papers by copying from books is of little educative value, even to the pseudo essayists. In some communities this plan of essay writing has been abandoned as worthless. The plan adopted by St. George's Society of buying its own musical library seems more commendable. Whether the programmes of Morning Musicale Societies are of interest as published in the local papers may be left to the editors, but so far, in the Music and Drama columns of larger dailies, such societies are not recognized. There is no objection to the activities of a private musical society so long as it does not assume too much in the way of leading public education in music. The latter undertaking is safer in the hands of professional musicians of recognized qualifications whose efforts should meet with a more general public support.

Yours truly,
Progress.

RETAIL MERCHANTS MEET ON MONDAY

The Retail Merchants' Association will hold a general meeting in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday at 8 p.m., at which a Committee will be appointed to wait on the City Council to lay before them several matters of importance. The particulars will be given later.

PIANO MAKER PRAISES ZAM-BUK

BEST FOR STIFFNESS AND SPRAINS.

As an embrocation for stiffened muscles, sprains, rheumatism, etc., there is nothing like Zam-Buk. Its penetrating powers are so great that it gives almost instant relief. Mr. D. R. Gourlay, of Messrs. Gourlay, Winter & Leeming, the well-known piano manufacturers of Toronto, used Zam-Buk, and this is his experience: "I have much pleasure in stating that two applications of Zam-Buk entirely cured me of a very severe strain of the back. While not given to the indiscriminate use of, or belief in, patent medicines, I can conscientiously recommend Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk is used by the world's foremost athletes. Why not give it a trial. Price 50c per box, at all druggists and stores. Zam-Buk is also best for eczema, cuts, sores, bruises, ulcers, piles, and all skin injuries and diseases.

ARE YOU GOING TO MUSKOKA THIS SUMMER?

If so take the 10.20 a.m. fast express from Toronto, daily except Sunday, via Grand Trunk Railway, and arrive Muskoka Wharf 1.45 p. m., where direct connections are made with steamers for points on Muskoka Lakes. This train carries Parlour, Library, Buffet car and first-class coaches, and passengers are assured of a comfortable ride along the most interesting route to Muskoka Wharf, which is the origina gateway to the far-famed Muskoka Lakes.

The curative odour of balsam and pine, and the preponderance of water area to land surface, together with the high altitude (1000 feet above the sea), render hay fever an impossible condition and perfect immunity from this annoying ailment is assured.

Return connection is made with train leaving Muskoka Wharf 10.30 a.m., daily, except Sunday, arriving Toronto 2.55 p.m.

Tourist tickets at low fares are now on sale to Muskoka Lakes' points, good for stop-over and valid to return until November 30th, 1914.

If you are contemplating making a trip ask Grand Trunk Agents for full particulars or write C. E. Herning, District Passenger Agent, Union Station, Toronto, Ont 14d-122-3w22

WAS GIVEN COMPLETE CONTROL OF THE LAND

Through a typographical error an item in yesterday's Examiner said that Mr. Martin Coughlin could not sell the land to which his title was allowed by the Court. As a matter of fact (as stated further down in the item), he was given complete control of the land in question, and can sell it if he pleases.

One Of The Worst Storms In Years Visited Stony Lake

On Wednesday at Noon---Hail, Wind and Rain Some of the Features--Was of Short Duration

One of the worst storms in years swept over Stoney Lake last Wednesday, just at noon. For nearly an hour the cottagers were given warning of the approaching cyclone, which descended upon them from the west, by ominous thunderings and angry flashes of lightning. So great was the force of the wind that it picked boats and canoes off wharves and hurled them into the water. A blinding, lashing rain, mixed with hail, tore across the lake, lifting great sheets of water into the air. Luckily its duration was short or great damage might have been done to property.

The only tempest approaching it in severity was one in which Mr. William Graham of Viamede was upset from his yacht and later rescued by the Misses Cole.

Contractor Ayotte has started the erection of Mr. Blackmore's Cottage at Kawartha Park.

Mr. Lawrence Graham's new cottage at Mount Rascal, beside the Devil's Elbow, will soon be completed. It is a most pretentious affair and commands a magnificent view from its spacious verandahs. The location is an ideal one, facing east, and its high elevation renders the surrounding mass of islands and channels a perfect panorama. The floor measures 36 x 40, with a ten-foot verandah on three sides. The living room, which is in the centre of the cottage, has a very artistic fire-place, built of granite, capped with one large flag of limestone. The dining-room is on the north side and will be completely enclosed with wire netting to make it mosquito proof.

Contractor Moore of Lakefield has made an excellent job.

Mr. and Mrs. John Carlisle of Peterborough are spending a few days at their cottage, "Upsidedown."

The cottagers in the vicinity of Kawartha Park will be pleased to learn that the store and post office are to be in operation this season the same as usual. Mr. Charlton of Lakefield has leased it and will likely run a bakery in connection therewith.

Kawartha Park is becoming the most populous section of the Lake, and it is a surprising thing that some enterprising young man, with business ability does not start a supply boat or some system of delivery. This is the only section of the Lake not so served, particularly in regard to the milk supply.

The only milk available is that obtained from a couple of farmers along the Burleigh Road, who are too busy to deliver it. It is no uncommon sight to see campers of all sizes and ages, from the little tots, bitten by mosquitoes, to the old men, all trudging through the woods for milk, wasting a sum total of energy sufficient to cater to the wants of a city full of people. Now that Kawartha Park is growing by leaps and bounds it would be the strategic time to inaugurate such an enterprise.

Mr. Stewart, formerly of Young's Point, used to operate a small launch in which he was in the habit of delivering vegetables, butter and eggs, two days each week. He never went beyond the lighthouse and even in that small territory the demand was so great he could scarcely supply it. Mr. Stewart is now living in Peterborough and his removal should ensure double success to anyone who might make the experiment.

This part of the lakeo becomes so rough at times that for many days the female portion of the population cannot venture out; (the men, of course, being away back home, earning more money to spend).

'Tis funnify how some people never see a good thing until it has passed. Truly opportunity must wear his hair on the front of his head, and wings on his feet, since there are so few that seem able to lay hold on him.

—Monty La Rock.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Saturday morning, 9:30, Boys Hike up the canal. This will be the best hike of the year. The boys will leave the building at 9:30 and proceed along the canal to Thompson's Bay, where they will camp for the day. Every member of the "Y" is invited to come and bring his chum, a good lunch and a bathing suit.

Monday evening, June 1st, the Employed Boys' will meet in the Gym at 7:30 to practice for their spring tests, consisting of 100-yd. dash, standing broad jump, pull up on bar, high jump, swimming test.

The Boys' Camp this year promises to be dandy. A large number of names have been sent in already. A number of new features have been added to the programme for this year which will prove interesting for the boys. "Come around and ask about them." Remember the date, Monday, June 29th to July 11th.

PRIZES FROM THE I. O. D. E.

The regular monthly meeting of the I.O.D.E. was held yesterday afternoon in the Recreation room of the Armouries. The Regent, Mrs. Clegg, presiding. The Chapter decided giving tyro prizes for the matches at the rifle ranges on Thanksgiving Day.

Mrs. Mills gave a very interesting report of the annual convention of the I.O.D.E. held in Toronto on April 5, 6 and 7.

Local Salvation Army Bandsmen Departed For England Last Night

Peterborough's Salvation Army bandsmen, a few of them accompanied by their wives and children, left on the 12:15 a.m. C.P.R. midnight train this morning for Montreal on the first stage of the journey to the big Congress in London.

A crowd of several hundred of their relatives and friends gathered at the station to bid them God speed. Farewell handclasps and kisses were given, well wishes were expressed and the absence of loved ones for five or six weeks apparently brought no misgiving as to the safe return of the seafarers.

The local contingent were speeding on their way to Montreal while their brother bandsmen of Toronto with the kindly Commissioner Rees and other prominent officers were doubtless sleeping in their berths while the Empress of Ireland steamed rapidly toward her doom.

Fortuntely, there was no forewarning of impending disaster to mar the farewell at the Peterborough station last night. Wives laughingly remarked: "Yes, he's going, but good riddance,—you know the rest."

"I hope you get good and seasick," said one girl to a stetsoned youth who doubtless knew perfectly well the maiden's real sentiments.

The big horns, the big drum, and the other instruments were carefully guarded in the rush, and the special coaches were quickly filled with the Peterborough musicians. Two big express trucks of trunks and boxes comprised their travelling effects.

Many there were who envied the bandsmen the incidental visit to old familiar scenes, and nearly everyone of the voyagers had messages for friends of Peterborough homestayers. "I can't find a Liverpool man in the crowd," said one of the latter. I want to send a word to a friend there."

Others were for parts of London, for Manchester, and even out of the way places. The bandsmen looked very neat in their stetson hats and new uniforms, and should give a good account of themselves in the Old Country.

"The Savoy's" Elegant New Soda Fountain

Coleman Bros. Excel Themselves By Their Enterprise in Elaborate Store Fixtures

The addition of another new and magnificent Soda Fountain to "The Savoy" branch store of the Coleman Bros., marks the top notch of business enterprise yet shown by this live firm of confectioners and caterers. This splendid new fixture has just been installed and is so complete and interested in all its various details that a visit will prove very interesting. This fountain is from the factory of the Fletcher Co. of Toronto and is one of the most sanitary and modernly equipped in the market, having all the latest and up-to-the-minute improvements. It has a white Italian marble top and base, with a mahogany counter, fitted with an onyx pillar and four taps for dispensing. A beautiful art glass shade, Grecian style, with indirect electric lights, surmounts the structure. It also possesses hot and cold water, electric tumbler washers, one of the latest accessories to the modern soda fountain. There are eight patent syrup lifts, 4 crushed fruit bowls, of porcelain, 1 brick cabinet. An iceless cooler makes it certain that a customer may get an ice cold drink on the hottest day of days.

It also has one of the most modern carbonators for making wholesome soda water. An electric egg shaker and mixer enables the patron to be supplied with one of the most delicious and nourishing drinks with the speed of electricity.

THE DUKE AND THE PAVING

Peterborough, May 29th, 1914.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I noticed in one of the evening papers last night a suggestion that the Lord's Day Alliance should shut its eyes while the city put men on on Sunday to complete the pavement before the Duke's arrival. Will H.R.H. think less of Peterborough because she is improving her streets? even though he may have the terrible shock of seeing them under process of construction?

Will the son of Victoria the Good think more or less of our city for breaking the laws of God and man? Read Isa. 58.13.

MAN IS A CONUNDRUM

No Woman Ever Guessed the Answer, That's Why They Find Each Other So Interesting

Man is the prize conundrum of the universe.

He has explored the remotest parts of the earth and discovered the North Pole. But he cannot find a clean handkerchief in his own bureau drawer.

He will lead a forlorn hope in battle with a smile on his face, but he has to walk seven times around the block before he can screw his courage up to enter his dentist's door.

He can face a ferocious lion without quailing, but a little two-by-four wife can have him so terrorized that he pulls off his shoes on the outer door mat and sneaks into his home like a burglar.

He can be big, and bold, and strong, but be scared to death every time he has a sick headache.

He can wait like patience on a monument for the accomplishment of some big end, but rave like a lunatic if dinner is ten minutes late.

He may be utterly cynical and worldly wise, yet a girl baby with dimples and large blue eyes can take him in and make a fool of him.

He may have written volumes about the psychology of woman, but he can't distinguish between nerves and temper in his own wife, nor tell whether she is weeping for joy or sorrow.

He may be highly intellectual and educated, and enjoy only the society of cultivated people yet he will pick out a silly little goose of a girl for a wife.

He will spend ten years of his life chasing down some woman to persuade her to marry him, and apparently lose all interest in her the minute the wedding ceremony is over.

He will spend every evening with a girl before he marries her, and every evening away from her after they are married.

He can always remember his sweetheart's birthday, but he never can remember his wife's.

He enjoys wasting his money buying wine for chorus girls, but it grieves him a grouch to have to pay the baby's milk bill.

He, is as veracious as George Washington to the balance of the world, but he lies like Ananias to his wife.

He can walk thirty miles a day on a golf game, and brag about how good it makes him feel, but it gives him nervous prostration to push the baby carriage four blocks.

He doesn't see why his wife isn't perfectly thrilled just to spend all of her time every day at home with the children, but on Sunday afternoon in the bosom of his family bores him to extinction.

He always reproves his wife for repeating scandal, but not until after she's told him the last detail.

He has a poor opinion of the feminine intellect. But when he gets in trouble he always goes to a woman for advice.

He spends ten years' time in deciding on the noble qualities he shall demand in the woman he marries, and then he marries a girl because she had white teeth or a cute little curl on the back of her neck.

He preaches the doctrine of common sense and rational dress to women, yet wild horses could no drag him to a restaurant with a woman dressed according to his specifications, and the more frivolous a girl is the more men flock about her.

Oh, man is the prize conundrum of the universe. No woman ever guesses the right answer to that riddle; that's the reason the two sexes are of perpetual interest to each other.

LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY

A Few Items of Interest Gathered From a Hasty Look Over the Grounds

A short visit to the Little Lake cemetery revealed the fact that, although early in the season, the spring work was well advanced, and the picturesque character of the grounds was fast assuming its summer beauty after the long winter.

Two large pansy beds near the entrance to the grounds are the first flower pictures that are presented to the visitor. These are in excellent bloom, the roots having been in the ground all winter and are now coming along strong and attractively variegated.

A little farther in near the Chapel, another large bed of pansies decorate the circular corner. All over the cemetery, may be seen newly planted flowers and foliage decorating the graves, and looking fresh and vigorous after the recent rains. Marked improvement is manifest in the designs and character of the floral effects round the grave lots, and those who have entrusted this work to the care of the superintendent cannot but be pleased with the taste and care bestowed.

The long circular wooden fence which enclosed the south-eastern section of the cemetery has been removed, and a cement coping 1,200 feet long has been substituted therefor, on which a handsome new iron fence is to be placed, costing $3,000. This new improvement will add greatly to the attractive features of the cemetery.

Mr. Wise has a number of men in different sections of the cemetery burning brush of the spring work, as it produces no further danger from sinful fires this season.

Throughout the cemetery may be seen attractive Union Jacks planted in the ground by members of the Daughters of the Empire, in commemoration of departed soldiers.

A SUGGESTION TO THE MAYOR

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Residents of Otonabee, in the vicinity of the proposed sewage disposal plant think that Mayor Buller should have a bottle of Weston Village Sewerage "on his hip" when he meets the Duke on Monday. It possesses so many virtues, according to the Mayor, that His Royal Highness would no doubt appreciate a "schooner" of this beverage in preference to one of "Mum's Extra Dry." It would be both "meat and drink" unless vastly different from anything in this line that has ever come under the observation of the writer.

Yours Truly,

Otonabee.

TALENT TEA

At the home of Mrs. John Allin, Sherbrooke Street, yesterday afternoon and evening, there foregathered many ladies and a few mere men, to enjoy the cup that cheers.

The tea was given by Mrs. Allin in aid of Knox Church and proved very enjoyable.

Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Morris, Misses Gilleece and Elliott, and the Misses C. and B. Ross.

A musical programme was carried out, the participants being Mrs. Hughes and Messrs. John Anderson and Herbert C. Treneer.

The tunes will receive a tidy sum through the kindness of Mrs. Allin.

Fined $20 For Illegal Fishing

William Clancy and Jack McWilliams were charged at police court this morning with illegal fishing at Meet's Creek, a tributary of the Otonabee. They both pleaded guilty.

Jam. Whitson of the fisheries patrol gave evidence against the accused, as he was the man who caught them breaking the law on Thursday, 7th of May. The men used a net, but did not have much luck as they only caught one which, of course, got away from them.

There was some trouble over the case, as the men tried to settle the case out of court, but Magistrate Dunn said that he was here to enforce the law and his best endeavour was to make punishment heavy enough to deter a like incident, so he fined each of the accused $20 and costs.

Mr. Oscar La Fontaine appeared for the defendants.

Sheppard Huggins, who lives in the township of South Monaghan, broke the law in regard to fishing in Squaw Creek and was fined $20 and costs.

Will Not Pave Next Sunday

The suggestion contained in the columns of a local paper, last night, to have the paving operations continued during Sunday, so that George Street will be in a more presentable condition for the Governor-General's visit, on Monday, will not be acted upon by the City Council. That was the effect of a statement made by Mayor Buller to the Examiner this afternoon.

The Rev. Jas. Rollins, when seen by the Examiner, this afternoon, said that any attempt to act on the suggestion would be opposed to the limit by the Lord's Day Alliance.

"I do not think," he said, "that anyone will take seriously the implication in the 'Review' that the local branch of the Lord's Day Alliance is prepared to shut its eyes to any infringements of the Lord's Day Act, while it is amazing to find that the 'Review' is so confident that everybody else is. The paving company has [illegible] the date of the approaching visit of the Duke of Connaught. The people of Peterborough are preparing to give him a royal welcome on Monday, but they are not prepared to withdraw their allegiance to the 'King of Kings' or the laws of Canada in order to do so. The continuing of the paving operations on the Lord's Day, on account of the visit of His Royal Highness would leave a stain upon his visit that would be distasteful to himself as to the people of Peterborough and I am sure that the members of the City Council will not lend their support to any such suggestion. I have no doubt, even if there were no Lord's Day Alliance in Peterborough it would be quite impossible to carry out any such proposal as has been made. Paving companies come and go, but the great body of the people of the City remain, and are anxious to have their City stand for the best things."

GUARD OF HONOUR HELD A PARADE

The Guard of Honour paraded at the Armouries last evening, together with the band and were inspected by the staff.

The men have become particularly smart under the instruction of Sergt.-Inst. Brookes, and will, doubtless be a credit upon the regiment.

Early order was given out to the men to parade next Tuesday evening.

CORNER GEORGE and SIMCOE STREETS

ARRANGEMENTS ARE COMPLETED

For Reception of Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught

The final meeting of the Reception committee for the visit of H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught was held last evening in the committee room of the City Council, when the following members were present: Ald. Stratton chairman, Mayor Butler, Aldermen Duffus, Johnston, Dobbin, Langford, and Col. Clegg, Col. Young, Major Walker, Mr. B. D. Hall, Mr. Mowatt and Mr. J. Fitzgerald.

All the arrangements received the finishing touches last evening, and everything is now in readiness.

Owing to the paving on George Street not being completed, the route was necessarily slightly altered.

The Bessie Butler will be located at the lower reach at the east entrance of the lock, and the Royal party will board her there.

His Royal Highness' own marine flag will fly from the boat. The party will go up in the right hand chamber, and will walk down as it they waited till the chamber could be released, it would occupy too much time.

The Public and Separate school children are meeting today at 3:30 on the parade ground in front of the Armouries to ascertain what space requirements for their accommodation will be needed. The location for the Cadets, Veterans and Boy Scouts will be made at the same time.

The committee in general thought that they were not getting enough decorating for their money. Mr. Turner was conferred with and matters at length were amicably settled.

Since the last meeting the committee has been informed that their Royal Highnesses will depart by G. T. R. train. As Charlotte Street will not be in a fit condition to traverse, it has been decided that the route to the Grand Trunk shall be on Hunter to Stewart, down Stewart to King and around to the station.

The arranging of the guests and automobiles has been completed and the list is appended. Each auto will pick up its respective passengers on the morning of the reception between 9:30 and 9:45.

Mr. Matthews' car—Their Royal Highnesses, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught; Mayor Butler and Aide-de-camp.

Mr. Irwin's car—H. R. H. Princess Patricia, Hon. Katherine Vilhers, Col. Vilhers, Col. Farquhar, Ald. Stratton and Aide-de-Camp.

Mr. Crossman's car—Miss Yorke, Sir Edward Worthington, Mr. Sladen, Mr. Butler, Mrs. Stratton.

Mr. McBain's car—Hon. Sam. Hughes, J. H. Burnham, M.P., Col. Clegg and Mrs. Clegg.

Mr. Kelly's car—J. A. Sexsmith, M. P., Reeve of Lindsay, E. A. Peck, M.P.P. and I. Thompson, M.P.

Mr. Stinson's car—Major Walker, Mrs. Walker, Ald. Johnston and Mrs. Johnston.

Mr. Johnston's car—Col. Young and Mrs. Young, Ald. Duncan and Mrs. Duncan.

Ald. Green's car—Ald. Green and Mrs. Green, Mr. B. D. Hall and Mrs. Hall.

Mr. Ackerman's car—Ald. Anderson and Mrs. Anderson, Ald. McIntyre and Mrs. McIntyre.

Mr. Pappas' car—Mr. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Fitzgerald, Ald. Langford and Miss Langford.

Mr. Comstock's car—Ald. Dobbin and Mrs. Dobbin, Mr. Armstrong and Mrs. Armstrong.

Mr. Coulthard's car—Ald. Saunders and Mrs. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. Mowatt.

Ald. Duffus' car—Mechanics.

Mr. Edwards' car—"Spare."

Mr. Campbell's car—Some minutes ahead with Chief Constables' assistant.

One feature of the decorations will be a large banner bearing the inscription, "Welcome to Peterborough, the Electric City." This will be located in some prominent place, either just south of the station or at Central park.

By vote at the meeting last evening, it was almost unanimously decided to cut out the cemetery from the route of the drive.

"An awful dead place," remarked Ald. Stratton.

The route of drive will all be sprinkled on the morning of the drive.

The meeting then adjourned.

Hog Cholera In Chatham Township.

CHATHAM, Ont., May 29. — Hog cholera has broken out in Chatham Township. Dr. Clapp, a veterinary of Dresden, while driving past the farm of J. W. Barker noticed the hogs coughing. He immediately notified Dr. Rowe, Government Inspector, and Mr. Baker's herd of 48 hogs was destroyed. The authorities believe they have the disease stamped out.

H. C. L. Commission Goes West.

OTTAWA, May 29.—The commission which is enquiring into the high cost of living, composed of John M. Dougald, chairman; R. H. Coates, C. C. James and U. Vincent, leave on Saturday for the Pacific coast. The cities to be visited are: Victoria, Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Regina and Winnipeg.

Killed By Lightning.

TRURO, N.S., May 29. — David Pearson, living in Harmony, a short distance from here, was killed yesterday during a heavy electrical storm. The bolt struck Pearson as he was entering the door. The house was damaged considerably.

Bandmaster Peryer's Mother On The Empress

That the mother of Bandmaster Peryer of the Peterborough Corps of the Salvation Army, was on the Empress of Ireland, is generally understood by friends of the family in the city.

Bandmaster Peryer was among those who went to the C.P.R. station on Wednesday night to see the Toronto party pass through the City, and it was learned that his mother was on the train, that he met her and that they were sailing on different boats.

Mrs. A. E. Sandford, 450 Park Street, is a daughter of Mrs. Peryer. Her husband left last night with the Peterborough Band and Mrs. Sandford is in Toronto during the absence of her husband.

Friends of the family believe Mrs. Peryer was on the Empress but no word has been obtained today in this connection.

Dusting in General.

As ordinarily performed, dusting simply whisks the dirt from one place to another. Ideas of dusting are many and varied; some dust only what is seen, others what might be seen, and a few dust everything and everywhere. They never wipe the woodw sashes where they meet and lock. They open all the doors and clean them on top and two sides, as well as back and front. More than that, they dust the casing where the door touches in closing. Sometimes it is necessary to polish as well as dust. The unbeaten white of an egg stirred into cold water cleans polished surfaces well.

Work in small sections, dry quickly and rub till bright. Cloths should always be clean and soft. Woodwork which has been stained and varnished should only be cleaned with an oiled rag.

White spots made by water or heat on varnished furniture may be removed with spirits of camphor and good rubbing. A furniture polish should always be at hand for final polishing.

Several Offers of Automobiles for Lacrosse Games Out of Town have been Received By the Club Already

Dr. B. E. Kelly, Hunter street, was first to offer his car for the Lacrosse Club for conveying the players to some of the nearby towns such as Hastings, Norwood and others for the O.A.L.A. games. Mr. W. J. Koster was a close second, and it is felt that several other citizens will extend the same courtesy and will make the trip to some of the out-of-town games and help carry the players. The distances are comparatively short. Unexpected offers of this kind are a great encouragement.

To-night's practice should be a good one. The local players realize that the towns in the district are going to show considerable lacrosse class. In the local team there are a number of juniors who have been showing promise, and the season should be started with a likely team. The names of the players will be announced in the near future.

President Ed. Dillon has been working industriously of late and has been bearing the brunt of the work. Quite a number of the lovers of the game have been generous enough to contribute toward the initial expenses, and it is hoped that they will be delighted with the brand of lacrosse which will be produced at the Riverside Park on Wednesday evening next. Several of those approached stated that they had helped the Peterborough Athletic Club and were under the impression that the Lacrosse Club was associated with the other organization. The Athletic Clubs it will be remembered, simply called the meeting to give lacrosse a chance to get started, then got out from under. In justice to the Athletic Club it should be stated that at no time did any of the members suggest that they would take up lacrosse.

Hence the burden has fallen upon Ed. Dillon, Geo. Robertson, Bob Bailey, George Mein, Lou McCoy, Lou LeRan, F. C. Weber, Paul Trebilcock and a few others, but whatever progress has been accomplished thus far has been largely due to the zeal of Mr. Dillon. The assistance of all those who want to get behind the game and make its success assured is still welcome. Even the encouragement emanating from the knowledge that the lacrosse fans are behind the team will help a great deal. Any further offers for the use of automobiles will be gratefully received and to facilitate matters of offers may be left at the Examiner office.

PLAYERS SUSPENDED

President J. P. Fitzgerald of the Canadian Baseball League announced last night that he had suspended Schultz, the Beaver outfielder, and Beebe, the London pitcher, for three days, and had banished Manager Keesling of the London Club for a week, the latter having edged on the Beebe-Schultz trouble at London, Wednesday, in place of acting as the peacemaker. In addition all the players have been fined $25 each. The suspensions begin today.

BELTING WAS BELTED AND THE PETES WERE BEATEN BY ELEVEN TO THREE

Kelly's Hitting Was the Only Bright Feature From a Peterborough Standpoint.

ARE GOING DOWN

LONDON, May 28—The Tecumsehs continued their mad pace in the first with the men of Peterborough this afternoon, and won out without trouble, 11 to 3. This season the Tecumsehs and Bloomtmen have met seven times, and thus far the latter have but one victory to their credit. Belting was no puzzle for the Londoners this afternon, and was pelted for a variety of bingles. Hammond, on the other hand, had a rather easy time of it, being whacked only when he saw his way through and slackened his pace. The score:

JENNINGS SURE HE WILL WIN PENNANT THIS YEAR

NEW YORK, May 28.—A red-headed person named Hughie Jennings, who hails from Detroit and who is well known in vaudeville circles, is abroad in this land just now with a new monologue, entitled "Detroit's Gonna Cop Sure."

In his home town this Jennings fellow made a great hit with his chatter, but in a number of other cities where he has appeared, especially in Philadelphia, U.S.A., no laugh have greeted his utterances, despite the fact that Mister Jennings is the funniest baseball person outside of jail.

"We are the people this year—we-eah," remarks Jennings. From the appearance of things now, it seems that all persons desiring to gaze upon the world series games this fall will have to spend half of the time in Detroit.

"The folks over in Philadelphia think the Athletics have the greatest infield in the country. And the Pirates think theirs is just about as good. Well, wait until my infield gets to working together a little longer—and then the experts will not be so hasty in shipping the medals to the Athletics and Pirates.

"Burns, my new first-baseman, is a wonder. He can hit, run and can get anything that comes within a mile of him. And in addition he is brainy. Kavanough, at second, is one of the most brilliant all-round players that has broken into the game in many years.

"I've got a couple of pretty good catchers this year and Covaleski rounds out a steady, reliable pitching staff.

"Of course, I am a bit weak in the outfield. The only fellows I have out there are Bobby Veach, Sam Crawford there are Bobby Veach. Sam Crawford ting pretty old now, and he can't average more than four or ve hits a day, but he served us well in years gone by, and we are keeping Sam just to demonstrate to the people that there is some sentiment in baseball.

"Cobb looks like a 'comer' this year. Earlier in the season I thought of asking for waivers on him because he was batting only a trifle over .300, but he is doing a little better now and I guess I'll keep him.

"All in all, I think my team stronger in every way than that which grabbed the bunting in 1907, 1908 and 1909."

JOHNSON'S SECRET IS DISCOVERED

Walter Johnson has been discovered. Some Boston player has just learned that Walter Johnson has a fast ball and a prayer. That's all just a fast ball and a prayer. Inasmuch as one can't swat a prayer with a hickory club and few batters are able to hit Johnson's fast ball, with the same implement it seems to us that the Speed King shouldn't worry over being discovered.

Some persons think that Johnson may some day lose his speed because of the terrific strain he puts on his arm with every ball pitched. It is a full arm, that snaps the muscle of the arm. But even at Johnson does lose his speed he will be able to linger under the big tent for many years to come.

Johnson has brains—the most valuable asset a pitcher can have. If he lets the hop on his fast ball, and if his arm fails him to the point where he no longer is able to use speed, he will depend on his head to fool the batters.

Johnson knows so much about pitching, so much about the art of fooling a batter that blinding speed is not necessary. He can perfect a slow ball and turn the trick, or he can resort to a mixture of curves, which, combined with his almost uncanny knowledge of the weakness of various batters will enable him to keep his name in big league circles until 1921 and undoubtedly much longer.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE OPENS TO-MORROW

The Mercantile Baseball League will be opened to-morrow afternoon at the Exhibition grounds, when, with the Draughting Room and Machine Shop playing the first game, and the De Laval and Wm. Hamilton Co. meeting in the second, the League will get under way with appropriate ceremonies. There will be a parade of the four teams in uniform from Central Park to King Street, headed by the Maple Leaf Band. At King Street the teams and band will board a special car and trailer, furnished free of charge for the occasion by the Radial Railway Co. At the grounds it is expected that Mayor Butler, Mr. R. Dobbe and Mr. W. J. Breytagle will take part in the opening ceremonies. Mr. W. Andrews will umpire both games. The first game is called for 2.30 o'clock.

Alex. Kempt of Norwood Will Referee First Lacrosse Game

The lacrosse team had a good work out last night and with another on Saturday afternoon the local team will be in good condition to go the route in the first match played here in years, on Wednesday evening next. The Hastings team is coming by way of Norwood, and the game will be called at 6 o'clock at Riverside Park. Although Peterborough is somewhat at a disadvantage by playing at this hour, all the other teams could not get their players off work on Saturday afternoons. There was no other alternative but to play in the evenings, and there is one fine advantage to this that the coolest period of the day should appeal to the public. All the players in the other towns are engaged in stores and offices, and as Saturday is the busiest day of the week in the towns, the boys could not get away on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Alex Kempt, of Norwood will referee the opening game. The lacrosse lovers should remember that Hastings has always had a good team, and they will likely come strong on Wednesday night. Besides, these other towns have been playing faithfully and they are bound to put up a good argument. To last everything points to a good game. The Hastings team desires to return on the local, and by beginning at six o'clock the game will be over in good time. There is ample light at this hour and everything is conducive to agreeable conditions for the first of the revived lacrosse games.

OAK HALL

IT TAKES MORE than a piece of chalk and a tape line to produce originality in clothes.

THAT'S WHY SOME makers find their styles such a hit-and-miss proposition. True style must be genuine throughout, not a mere echo of someelse's genius.

Society Brand Clothes

have won the custom of punctiliously dressed men, simply because their style sparkles with the force and personalty of a master-designer.

CORRECT GIFT

The June bride may have her pathway to the church door strewn with fresh flowers, but her gift table will bear the stamp of rare old age.

Never in the history of the trade has there been such a demand for antiques as wedding gifts.

The 20th generation is a period of genuine Sheffield plate, which means that the plating is done over copper, and the bowl or epergne is of glass in such colours as modern blowers cannot reproduce.

The Sheffield silver dates as far back as 1701, its age and genuineness being determined by the maker's mark, placed there by the Sheffield government, and which is not in evidence on a spurious piece of ware.

For a wedding in the rose was recently purchased at a fabulous price a gravy boat in Sheffield silver, 1793, the measuring six inches long, which has beak and handle so perfectly shaped that the whole piece suggests a swan in miniature. The whole is marvellously chased and engraved, but black with age.

Superb Repouse Work.

Tankards and commodes in this ware are superb examples of repouse work, and the glass bowls which fit into them are in colours that defy description or imitation. They are best described as rich cathedral tones of crimson, blue and yellow or orange, always suggesting sunlight flittering through them.

For a sum as low as $18 there may be purchased a tiny bit of Sheffield known as the jewelled church urn. It is no higher than three inches, but the work is perfect and the jewelling admirable. One of the largest pieces on sale is a silver platter as big as a small serving table, done in filigree and repousse, with a heavy, plain cover, oval shaped.

Silver necklaces of various periods and lands are also in demand, and they, too, are black with age and defy modern cleaning appliances. The necklace must be flat, in the form of links, set at intervals of three or four with old-fashioned pearls, topaz emeralds, sapphires and rubies.

Distinctive Ceramics.

In ceramics, fine crockery, either old English or delft, is in favour. But the piece—and if single piece is the correct gift—must be distinctly quaint in shape and dull in tint. A crack, yellow with age, is not considered a great drawback, but rather stamps the dish with age and service.

Of the big pieces the quaintest are the meat platters, which look as if they were intended for serving a baron and his retainers. In the centre is a deep hollow for the roast or the steak, while in the big scallops on each end is ample room for a supply of chops.

Next come the candlesticks, as high as the ordinary woman's arm with candles two inches in diameter towering high over her head. A pair of these make a gift, and they are intended to stand guard at each side of a roomy mantel.

A quaint centre piece is a dish which might be cut aided for a birthday cake. In its centre is a hole for the candle to stand in with a dish below to catch the sperm as it melts. Tiny candlesticks with standards, for all the world like cake ornaments, come for desks or curio cabinets.

In mirrors the demand is for Florentine frames, which shoot out two feet or more like centipedes. For hanging these there come old gold cords and tassels, dull with age. Old furniture is not greatly in demand for wedding gifts, though there is a brisk trade in Colonial furnishings of all sort.

Some Pathetic Incidents In The Disaster's Trail Of Woe

MRS. McAMMOND WAS HYSTERICAL

Mrs. Adjutant McAmmond, Toronto, wife of Staff Capt. McAmmond, formerly in charge of Peterborough Corps, went into hysterics yesterday morning when a neighbour showed her a morning paper containing the news of the sinking of the Empress of Ireland. Her husband was a member of the party on their way to the International Congress.

CAPT. GOODWIN DID NOT SAIL WITH OTHERS

Ottawa, May 29—Adjutant Marcy of Cowan Avenue, Toronto, connected with the Toronto Salvation Army, came on to Ottawa lately, but on account of a sister here being sick, along with Captain Goodwin of the Ottawa Salvation Army, did not go on to Quebec and sail on the Empress of Ireland yesterday for England.

LITTLE DAVID REES IS LEFT ALMOST ALONE

Toronto, May 29—Out of many incidents where pathos was the ruling note was one which touched the young son of Commissioner David Rees. Cecil Rees is a slight boy of thirteen, and if the worst message is confirmed, all he will have left of his immediate family will be a sister of eleven and a married brother in Calgary. The sister is now in the West, and though the boy is almost alone, the greatest consideration is being shown him by the many willing workers about the Army headquarters. As soon as the first word of the tragedy reached the Army this morning Major McGillivray 'phoned the house where the boy was staying and arranged to keep the news from him as long as possible, but after school hour had passed and the boy had been kept home, the news had to be broken to him.

CAPTAIN KENDALL IDENTIFIED CRIPPEN.

Montreal, May 30—H. G. Kendall of the Royal Naval Reserve, is Captain of the Empress, and is the officer who identified murderer Crippen who was fleeing from justice in England on the Canadian Pacific liner Montrose, in 1910.

RETURNED ON EMPRESS ON NEWS OF WIFE'S ILLNESS

Toronto, May 30—Mr. Sidney Smart and his brother Thomas had come over on the Empress of Ireland last Saturday, and on their arrival in Toronto were met with a cablegram from London, England, asking Thos. Smart to return at once, as his wife was critically ill. So Mr Smart took the same steamer on its return journey.

CAPTAIN'S FIRST TRIP ON THE EMPRESS.

Montreal, May 30—Captain S. G. Kendall lost the Empress of Ireland on his first trip as her commander. He was selected from 100 C. P. R. captains just a week ago, to command the wrecked liner.

LIEUT.-COL. TURNER JUST RECOVERING FROM SMALLPOX

Lieut.-Col. Turner, head of the Salvation Army's property department, who was on the Empress, had just recovered from an attack of smallpox. He took the trip to recuperate his health.

VANCOUVER BANDMASTER PREPARED TO DIE

Mr. William Wakefield, deputy bandmaster of Vancouver No. 1. Salvation Army Band, was on the Empress. He had been asked by the leader of the Territorial Staff Band of Toronto to accompany them, and fill the position of solo euphonium player, as their regular man was unable to take the trip. Mr. Wakefield came through to Toronto, and in the few days before the departure of the band visited some of his old friends. He expressed no fear that the trip would not be successful, but mentioned to some that on his mother expressing fear of the ocean trip, he said—"I am to go I would just as soon go this way as any other." Mr. Wakefield was a strength to the Army band circles in the West, as he has been the means of holding together band organizations where others failed.

EATON DEPT. HEAD IS SADLY BEREAVED

The wife of Frederick J. Cullen, candy buyer for the T. Eaton Company, was on board the Empress with her six-year-old daughter, Maudie, and her two year-old baby, Albert. Her eldest son, Fred, eight years old was left at home with friends at Oakville, and Mr. Cullen is still in Montreal, having accompanied his wife and children to the ship.

WOMAN DREAMED OF DISASTER AT SEA

Toronto, May 30—Mrs. F. Wood, a second-class passenger on the Empress of Ireland, dreamed of the disaster which overtook that liner this morning. She has been in ill-health since coming to Canada two years ago, and by the orders of her medical man was returning to the home-land in the hope of finding a cure for her ailment.

For several nights before leaving her home, 553 Roxton Road, she dreamed of being in a small open boat on a smooth sea. Her dream warning did not go far beyond that, but the impression made on her was so strong she told her sons and friends of the vision, and even expressed a fear that the big boat would be wrecked before she had crossed the Atlantic.

AN ENGLISH NOTABLE.

Sir Henry Seton-Kerr, whose name appears on the Empress passenger list, is a barrister, whose hobbies of travelling and big game shooting have taken him into many corners of the world. He is interested in state colonization and is a member of the British Royal Commission on the conservation of food supplies in time of war. He has published two books on travel and sport and many magazine articles.

HAND WOULD CRACK WITH SALT RHEUM

Pained and Burned. Hard and Sore Lumps. Couldn't Rest or Sleep. Finger Swollen. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Legere Corner, N. B.—"I had salt rheum on my hand for a good many years. Every winter my hand would crack and part of the time I had to wear a glove to do my work, for when I washed in hot water with it unwrapped it used to irritate so much that I didn't know what to do. I had to take a rough towel and rub it until the blood would come sometimes. Many a night I had to sit up in bed and rub them and sometimes that didn't satisfy. I had to scratch with my fingers and the next morning I would find a big piece of skin which I had taken off. This winter I had sores on one of my hands. I thought they were ulcers. They pained and burned. They started just like a little lump and would be hard and sore and after that there would be a big bunch of pus and when that would be out it would leave an opening almost as big as half a five-cent piece. I couldn't rest or sleep with the pain and the burning sensation. The ulcer I had on my finger this winter was still worse. There was more inflammation for my finger was swollen almost twice its natural size and was just as red as a piece of flannel.

"I took the Cuticura Soap and made a suds with it and washed the hand with a piece of cotton and after it was washed I used to take the Cuticura Ointment and spread it on a piece of cotton and wrap the hand with it. I was cured in a little over a week." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Surette, June 5, 1913.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send postcard to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

Three of Every Four Motorcycles Carry These Tires

These tires are Goodyears—built under the same supervision as Goodyear Automobile tires, which have won top place in Motordom. Consider that—one maker holds the leading place both in Motor Car and Motorcycle Tires, despite tremendous rivalry. In three years Goodyears have gained top place in Tiredom. And the one great reason is—SUPER-SERVICE.

GOODYEAR TORONTO
Motorcycle Tires

Hold All Records

Every world's motorcycle record for speed and durability has been won on Goodyears.

Thus they are the choice of professional and pleasure riders alike. This year three of every four new motorcycles in Canada and the United States will be Goodyear-equipped.

Then Why Take a Risky Chance?

No tire, in any way, offers more than Goodyears. You pay no more for Goodyears than for other standard makes. No good tire costs you less.

They are made with a double-thick anti-skid tread. Made to hold forever the place they hold today.

THE COLLIER STORTHARDT WAS ONE OF THE LARGEST

MONTREAL, May 30—According to Mr. Jorstad, the acting secretary of the Norwegian Consulate, the Storstad is a freighter owned by A. S. Klaveness, Lysaneer, Norway, and is chartered by the Black Diamond Line. She was built at Newcastle-on-Tyne in 1911. For some time she has been plying in the coal trade between Sydney, N.S., and Montreal. As a rule the round trip takes ten days, and the Norwegian collier was on her way to Montreal when the accident happened.

The Storstad registers 3,561 tons net.

She was one of the biggest of what is known as the Black Diamond boats, measuring 440 feet in length with a 24-foot beam. Captain T. H. Andersen was in charge and had a crew of 38 under him. She is capable of carrying 7,000 tons dead weight.

WHOOPING COUGH

Mrs Charles Lovell, Agassiz B.C. writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly completely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

ONLY ONE MEMBER OF STAFF BAND REMAINED BEHIND

Splendid Musical Organization Connected With the Salvation Army Headquarters, Toronto, Was on the Empress.

OFTEN PLAYED HERE

The Territorial Staff Band of the Salvation Army which was included in the Toronto contingent that sailed on the Empress of Ireland has been heard in Peterborough on numerous occasions. All the members were capable musicians and the organization was a valuable asset to the Army.

As a force for the popularizing of brass band music the Territorial Staff Band of the Salvation Army has played an important part. All the officers and employes attached to headquarters, with very few exceptions are members of the band, and indeed, they form a large portion of the T. H. Q. staff serving in various capacities, such as department heads, accountants, architects, secretaries, clerks and printers.

The object for which the band was primarily called into existence was to render assistance to weaker corps and also, that it was it is possible to estimate the good that could be accomplished by the advent of thirty-five gifted, young Salvationists, into a small town, where the local corps is of small proportions.

Massey Hall Campaigns.

Town is the success of the huge Massey Hall campaigns conducted by the Army in Toronto, the band contributed largely. The special musical and spectacular features of these demonstrations were usually committed to the care of the members of the band, and wherever it appeared it drew great crowds.

Brigadier W. Scott Potter, the financial and trade secretary for the Dominion, is the band leader. Adjutant F. J. Hannaman, the accountant, is the conductor, who is assisted by Captain J. P. Myers, deputy bandmaster, and Adjutant F. W. Stiff, the band secretary.

Only One Bandsman Left.

Captain Gilbert Best, one of the bandsmen of the Territorial Staff Band, is the only member of that organization left of the 36 it has ever organized. He was to have gone with others, but the death of his father on Monday, made it impossible for him to get away.

Vast Amount of Mail on Empress

Toronto's Share Totalled 51 Bags of Letters and 58 Bags of Papers

One of the harrowing features of the disaster is the loss of the mail. From Toronto alone the shipment totalled 51 bags of letters, and 58 bags of papers, together with six parcel post baskets. The most important of all is the list of 805 registered letters, and whatever lives may have been saved it is too much to hope that the mails have been saved from the sinking ship.

The imagination can scarcely conceive what the disappearance of the mass of correspondence means to both senders and addressees. What messages of love and comfort of hope and aspiration, many of them must have contained. Recent arrivals in the country will have been telling their anxious relatives of their experiences in a new land, dwelling on their prospects for the future, and perhaps anticipating a speedy reunion with dear ones. Many will have contained money for those dependent upon them on the other side of the Atlantic. In England, Ireland and Scotland, and where these are unregistered there is no hope of recovering the remittances.

Orders Recoverable

It is not an unusual practice for money to be sent in ordinary bills, and whether registered or not, in such cases the money is irrecoverable. Where money orders have been purchased and the letters registered there will be no difficulty in obtaining a refund as the records of the department will show the amount passed through the issuing office and when the necessary investigations are made the senders will be reimbursed.

Children's Wash Dresses.

Almost all new cotton frocks shrink in washing and need letting out in the skirt.

Before the dress goes to the laundress cut the four inch hem and turn it again at all the width.

This brings the edge of the new hem to the crease in the bottom of the skirt, which gives a straight guide for basting.

In almost every case the soft cotton cut off the wash just the right length with no streak of dirt to mark the old line.

THE GOVERNMENT WILL INVESTIGATE THE DISASTER

OTTAWA, May 29. The Department of Marine will take prompt steps to investigate the disaster of the Empress of Ireland with a view of fixing the responsibility. Captain Lapointe, who is commissioner, has just been selected as superintendent of pilots, and his successor, who is to be Capt. Demers has not yet been formally appointed, but the inquiry will probably be held on him and will start next week.

It is recognized here that the disaster is the worst blow yet to the St. Lawrence route, for while such a collision might have occurred anywhere, there will be a great sentimental prejudice against the route, despite the millions spent upon improvements and aids to navigation.

An examination of the St. Lawrence chart at the point where the accident occurred shows that it is particularly well equipped with lights, buoys and fog alarms. There is a first-class light and fog signal at Father Point, another at Isle Metis and a gas and bell buoy and a first-class bell at Matane. At the point in question, the distance across land to land is twenty-two miles. There is really no "channel" at this place but rather the open roadstead, navigation being possible anywhere. At the same time most vessels do the usual course followed by all the ships. The custom on leaving Father Point is to skirt the south shore about one mile and a half from Metis, Matane, Cape Chat and Mars Gon River to Father Point where they strike off for Cape Race.

In Deep Water.

The chart here shows the depth of water at the point of the disaster to be over 50 fathoms or 300 feet consequently it follows that there will be no chance of removing the wreck from where she now more than a mere obstruction to the navigation of the St. Lawrence. It is quite likely that the Empress of Ireland could be raised when lying in shallow water, but when she is beneath such a depth of water.

MODERN KRYPTOK BIFOCALS

Do you wear the old style conspicious cemented Bifocal lenses, or do you wear the modern KRYPTOK Invisible Bifocals? How often you see people wearing a very conspicious sort of Bifocal Glasses the kind with divided lenses for near and far vision.

KRYPTOKS do away with this.

They are light solid lenses with perfectly even, unbroken surfaces. There is no dividing line which keeps you ducking and dodging to see over, nothing but a beautiful clear lens through which you read and look afar with equal facility.

We have the EXCLUSIVE right to sell these lenses for this City and vicinity.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By LOUIS TRACY

"Quite a ways," said the cabman. "Two miles or a bit."

The new arrival seemed to consider the distance and the lateness of the hour.

"Is Mr. Marten in Newport, do you know?" he asked.

"Yep. I took her downtown this evenin'."

"Alone?"

"Guess that's so."

"Where was she going?"

"Well, we see, I was on the box, the lady was inside, so we didn't get anyways sociable."

The stranger evidently bethought himself and turned to the porter again. He could not know that a Harvard note was merely speaking in the vernacular.

"Have you a Mr. Power staying here?" he asked.

"Yes, sir."

"Is he here now?"

"In the joint in the hotel, he'll be at the Casino. Shall I ring up his room, sir?"

"No, no. I'll see him in the morning. It's too late to go any further to-night, and I'm rather tired and shaken up. My train was derailed, and we are hours behind time. Give me a decent room. I suppose I can have breakfast at eight o'clock?"

"Any time you like, sir."

The cab went on, and the inquisitive visitor entered the building. The two men seated behind the potus had not uttered a syllable while the foregoing conclave was in progress.

"Mr. Francis Willard, I presume," murmured Dacre, when the retreating footsteps had died away.

"Yes," said Power.

"Three days ahead of the time stated in his letter. I presume, therefore—"

"That must be so."

"Foxy. He fits your description. What are you going to do now?"

"Finish my yarn, if I am not wearying you, and leave Newport at seven a.m. instead of nine-ten. The fox broke cover just a little too soon."

"By Gad, yes! I think I'll recognize that cabman again. If I come across him I'll tip him to you. He deserves it. The swine! To start pumping the townfolk before he was ten seconds in the place, and about his own daughter, too! Dash his eyes—wait till someone cuts him to me for news of you! I'll head him into the open country quick enough—trust me."

Dacre's comments might sound rather incoherent, but it was painfully evident that Nancy's father had created a bad first impression, and he was one of those unhappy mortals who could not afford to do that, because he never survived it.

CHAPTER IX.
THE CHASE.

In the morning Power's first care was to ascertain the position of the room allotted to Willard. As he imagined, it proved to be in the back part of the hotel, every apartment in the front section being occupied by season residents. Shortly before six o'clock, therefore, he drove away in an open carriage, confident that nothing short of an almost incredible chance would bring the older man to vestibule or porch at that early hour. Halting the vehicle at a corner near Nancy's abode, he walked to the house, and surprised the earliest servants astir by bidding one of them wake Mrs. Marten at once, as he had news of her father.

"Nothing serious," he added, with a reassuring smile at a housemaid whose alarmed face showed an immediate sense of disaster. "Mrs. Marten is leaving Newport to-day, think, and my message may decide her to start sooner—that is all."

But Nancy had seen him from her bedroom window, and now fluttered downstairs in a dressing gown.

"What is it, Derry?" she asked, and distress and maid shared the feminine belief that such an untimely call presaged something sensational and therefore sinister.

"Don't be frightened," he said cheerfully, knowing how essential it was that she should not be startled out of an exclamation which might betray her secret to the listening servants. "I heard from Dacre last night that you meant to meet Mr. Willard in New York, and I have reason to believe that you ought to depart by the first train. To do that, you must get away from the house in forty minutes. Can you manage it?"

She came nearer, seeking the truth in his warning eyes, carrying a brave front before the maids, but with fear in her heart, because she and her lover had eaten of the forbidden fruit, and now they were as gods, knowing good and evil.

"Mr. Dacre?" she repeated. "I suppose Mary Van Ralten told him what I said. But I don't quite understand. Why should I hurry my departure?"

Nothing in this that anyone might hear and deem significant. Power laughed, as though her air of slight alarm had amused him.

"Come into the verandah," he said. "You are not afraid of the morning air, and it is not on my conscience that I have robbed you of an hour's sleep, since you were up and around before I arrived."

When they were alone, though shut off from inquisitive eyes by wire-screen doors only, he said in a low voice:

"Don't say anything that will cause comment, but your father arrived at the Ocean House soon after midnight, and means to be here about nine o'clock. Our train leaves at seven. Will you use your own carriage or shall I send a cab in half an hour? You will be ready, of course?"

Nancy was not of that neurotic type of womankind which screams or faints in a crisis. "Yes," she murmured. "In less time, if you wish."

"No need to rush things," he said coolly. "He is not to be called for eight. I heard him give the order."

"You heard him?"

"Yes. Thanks to Dacre, when he arrived I was sitting in the verandah, well hidden, as it happened, so that I planned to reach you this morning with a couple of hours in hand."

"But, Derry, I have a note written and ready for the post. I can't explain now—"

"Put the note in your pocket, and deal with the new situation at leisure. There's only one thing I regret."

"Regret!" Oh, Derry, what is it?"

And again the shadow of fear dark-ened her eyes, eyes of that rare tint of Asiatic blue known as blonde Kagoul, a blue darker at one than any other, and again, bright, dazzling full of promise, rivalling the clear sky on a summer's night.

"That I dare not take you in my arms and kiss you," he said. "You look uncommonly pretty in that negligee wrap."

She flushed, and put up a hand to make sure herself lest her hair might be tumbling out of its coils. Then she ran to the screen doors and pushed them apart.

"I can't wait another second," she said. "Please send that cab. Our own men will hardly be at the stables yet."

She waved a hand and vanished. Her hurried orders to the domestics came in the natural sequence of things, and caused no surprise. When she drove away from the house at twenty minutes of seven every member of her establishment believed that Mrs. Marten had gone to join her father in New York, but for some reason communicated by her "cousin," was travelling by the first train of the day instead of the second. The only perplexed person left in "The Breakers" was Jane, the French maid, who thought she would find a holiday in Newport swift, and was moreover genuinely concerned because of the scanty wardrobe which her mistress had taken.

Oddly enough, Power was in a stone anxiety outside the New York, New Haven & Hartford station, shared some part in Dacre's thought when he saw Nancy's two smart steamer trunks and a hatbox.

"We'll be cried, helping her to alight. "How have I been worrying about the capacity of the cab to hold your baggage, and you've less than I!"

"Pay the man," she said quickly. Then, under cover of the approach of a porter with a crossing stairway, she added: "I am coming to you penniless and plain versed as ever was Nancy Willard. You catch that, don't you?"

"You dear!" he breathed. But he had her full answer in the colour that suffused his bronzed face and the light that blazed in his eyes.

He had experienced no difficulty in securing the small coupe on the Pullman car to Boston. In that train there was little likelihood of any chance passenger recognizing them. In actual fact, they had the whole car to themselves. Nancy, who could not banish the notion that the whole world was watching her, was nervous and ill at ease until the train pulled out of the station, she even started and flushed evidently when the conductor came to examine their tickets, whereupon the man stared discreetly, and Power laughed.

"You're the poorest sort of a conspirator," he said, when the door was closed on the intruder. "We had better admit straight away that we're a honeymoon couple, because everybody will know it the instant they look at you."

But he failed to charm away the terror that oppressed her spirit. She felt herself a fugitive from some unseen but awful vengeance, and her heart quaked.

"Derry," she said, almost on the verge of tears, "I'm becoming to be afraid—"

"Afraid of what?"

Somehow, despite his utter lack of experience of woman's ways, he had guessed that this moment would arrive, and was, to that extent, prepared for it.

"Of everything. I know that I alone am to blame. It is not too late for you to draw back."

"Why on you think I might wish to draw back?"

"Because of the horrid expense you must incur on the next journey."

"My only trouble is that I may not bear your share as well as my own, Nancy. The combined ones could not light as thistledown on my shoulders. Let us be true to ourselves, and it will surprise you to find how readily the world can be won. All except one view."

"In your heart of hearts, Derry, do you believe we are doing right?"

"When I come in at the eleven love flies out by the window. We are fighting a glorious wrong and although our actions must, at times, appeal to the sensitive accepted code of morals, I do honestly believe that there is a court which the evil entities the means—"

"I never, never, Derry, could but have kept within bounds."

"You might have come to Boston and spared me the distance and expense of a run to Newport by residence."

WOMAN'S MOST SUCCESSFUL MEDICINE

Known All Over The World —Known Only For The Good It Has Done.

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or received so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In nearly every community you will find women who have been restored to health by this famous medicine. Almost every woman you meet knows of the great good it has been doing among suffering women for the past 30 years.

Fox Creek, N. B. - "I have always had pains in the abdomen and a weakness there and often after meals a soreness in my stomach. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better and I can work with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers." Mrs. WILLIAM S. BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N. B.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, many of whom state that it has saved them from surgical operations.

SEA FOOD FOR LONDON

ARMY OF MEN EMPLOYED GETTING FISH TO METROPOLIS.

Billingsgate Market Is the Centre of Distribution and Immense Quantities Are Handled Daily—Dogger Bank In the North Sea Is the Source of the Greater Part of London's Supply.

In a recent article on the fishing trade a London magazine gives an interesting survey of the immense industrial machinery whereby the world's metropolis gets its supplies of sea food.

Few of us realize, perhaps, as we partake of the humble herring and haddock, or, defying expense, indulge in a delicate sole, what a vast industry the fishing business is to-day, and how it has developed within the last decade. Let us take a few striking facts. In twelve months fish to the value of over £13,...,000 has been landed on the coasts of the United Kingdom, something like 250,000 men and boys being constantly employed in obtaining our fish for breakfast, dinner, or supper.

Ten years ago only 100,000 men were employed, the total value of the catch for twelve months being £7,500,000, abundant proof that the "harvest of the sea" is richer than ever it was.

The price of fish affects the pockets of millions, for it is one of the principal items in the food bill of the average family. It has been estimated that we eat something like 56 pounds of fish for each man, woman, and child every year. Fried fish shops and fish restaurants have sprung up by the thousand in the large towns of late years, and some of these shops are said to be little gold mines to their proprietors.

Go to Billingsgate Market and there you will see between 700 and 800 tons of fish being dealt with daily, while one of the most remarkable sights in the world is to be seen at Yarmouth and Lowestoft when the Scottish herring fleet arrives. In two months the first-hand value of herrings landed at Yarmouth and Lowestoft reached £1,000,000, the earning of each boat averaging from £250 to £1,000.

The herring-fishing industry is the most valuable of all, nearly £4,000,000 representing the total value of these fish caught in twelve months, although the inexplicable disappearance of the famous Lochfyne herring has brought ruin to Tarbert-on-Lochfyne, which at one time was probably the richest village for its size in the United Kingdom.

Years ago the fishermen of Tarbert thought they had done badly if they did not clear at least £20 each in one week, while frequently £40 and £50 was earned. In a few instances £100 was obtained for a single week's work, and last autumn an old fisherman was admitted to poor relief who, in those prosperous days, lit his pipe with a £5 note as an act of bravado.

Then the "blue," or Lochfyne, herring, which brought anything from 15s to £2 per box, suddenly disappeared from its haunts. The herring now inhabiting Lochfyne is of a very poor and different type, and often not more than a shilling a box can be obtained for them. Hence the decline of Lochfyne fishing.

It is, however, from the Dogger Bank, that extensive flat sand bank in the middle of the North Sea, between Britain and Denmark, from which we get the bulk of our fish. The Dogger Bank commences forty miles from Flamborough Head and stretches 320 miles eastward to within a few leagues of Jutland. It is between forty and sixty miles broad, and over the sand the water is about fifty to a hundred feet deep. Hundreds of steam trawlers owned by large companies are constantly cruising over the bank, netting thousands of tons of fish daily. These trawlers remain constantly at sea, the fish being brought to Billingsgate by what are known as fish carriers—steamers of from 250 tons gross, fitted with the most powerful engines.

No matter what the weather may be, these fish carriers ply between the fishing fleet on the Dogger Bank and Billingsgate. There is no question of putting into port in a gale, or of slowing to half-speed, for the cargo is perishable, and does not improve by being kept unsold for twenty-four hours.

The fish is sorted and boxed on the trawlers, and transferred to the carriers by specially designed boats, very broad and as near unsinkable as possible, and as soon as the carrier is loaded all dispatch is used in proceeding to Billingsgate.

On arrival porters come on board at half-past five in the morning, when the fish is carried into the market in boxes, and sold by auction to the various fish dealers, fishmongers, and others.

Between six and half-past eight the scene is a most animated one. Crowds surge round the auctioneers, each man being eager to secure the very best bargain; for Billingsgate is quite an open market, and has been so for over 200 years. Anyone may go and buy. Fishmongers come with their carts, and great hotels and restaurants send their buyers. The selling is practically all over by nine o'clock, although there are many small dealers after that hour—costermongers and fish friers, who come for the small fish which the caterers for ... Apart, however, from the fish carriers, fish pours into Billingsgate every day by special trains from such places as Grimsby and far-off Thurso and Wick. The railway companies send special trains from all these ports, which take precedence even of the express passenger trains, so that the fish may arrive in London in time to be sold at six or seven o'clock in the morning.

Bayonet Fencers.

Fencing with bayonets is the most popular as well as the most dangerous game among British soldiers in the regular army. Those who participate must be strong and skilful, and the game is not one for weaklings. The regulation outfit is a mask, heavily padded coat and padded gloves. The bayonets are tipped with rubber, but despite all these precautions men are often hurt in the sette. Each regiment has its champions selected by a process of elimination from the various companies. When these champions meet on one of the field days often held at brigade posts the rivalry is intense.

Blind Cricketer.

Stories are being told of the feats of blind people who go in for gymnastics and play cards, but the most remarkable instance, perhaps, is that of a son of Sir William Hart-Dyke. He was seen regularly on the cricket field some years ago, and would field at point and has been known to make a catch.

A special ball was used, of course a bell inside indicating its course to the highly-trained ear of the blind man. As a batsman this enthusiast shaped wonderfully well, the bowler modifying their pace when he was in.—Evening News.

Buckingham Palace and Fire.

While the King and his household are asleep in Buckingham Palace there are two men who never rest. They are the firemen who patrol the palace continually during the night with keys which will enable them to open any room in which fire is suspected. No place is better guarded against fire than Buckingham Palace.—London Mail.

Brittle Lizards.

Some kinds of lizards break in two when suddenly startled. In the bush in Australia the traveler often comes across a number of these little silvery reptiles basking on a log or piece of old bark. As soon as they perceive the invader there is a great commotion. They dart hither and thither so quickly that the eye can scarcely follow their movements. The effects of the shock are evident from the quantity of wriggling tails lying about which have been cast off in a hurry, while the mutilated owners may be seen scurrying away to safety still wagging the stumps that remain.

Barrie's Critic.

J. M. Barrie some years ago was persuaded to take the chair at a Burns celebration in Scotland. He was extremely silent and stole away at the earliest opportunity. Next week appeared in The National Observer a humorous article entitled "Mr. Barrie in the Chair," in which Mr. Barrie's lack of social tact was held up to ridicule. Many people thought the writer had gone too far and protested. But the author of the article was Mr. Barrie himself.

Caught In the Act.

In his early days Sir Thomas Lipton used to perform very creditably on the violin, and he usually spent the evening playing to a friend who kept a small shop in the neighborhood. These impromptu concerts took place in the parlor behind the shop after closing hours, and one evening as he was making his way to his friend's place a fire engine raced past him.

He joined in the crowd that followed it and was horrified to find that his friend's shop was on fire. To add to his dismay he suddenly remembered that he had left his precious violin in the back parlor the night before. Alarmed for the safety of his instrument, he rushed into the blazing shop and made his way to the place where he knew it would be lying, tucked it under his jacket and after a struggle reached the doorway again.

But no sooner had he reached the street than a burly policeman pounced on him and arrested him on a charge of stealing a violin from the shop.

Recognized Him.

In one case ...ge late Mr. Justice Hawkins, the English judge, sentenced all the prisoners to death. The sentences were afterwards remitted to terms of penal servitude, while one of the defendants, Alice Rhodes, received a free pardon.

In the summer of that year Mr. Justice Hawkins, feeling warm after a walk over Wimbledon Common, called at an inn and asked for a ginger beer. He thought the barmaid looked at him strangely.

"Thank you, my lord," she said as she handed him his change.

"You know me, then?" exclaimed Hawkins, with a smile.

"I shall never forget you," answered the barmaid. "It's now a year ago that you sentenced me to death."

The barmaid was Alice Rhodes.

DON'T GROW BALD
It's Quite Needless. Nourish the Hair Roots—Remove Dandruff —Use Parisian Sage—
If your hair is getting thin, losing colour, or has that matted, lifeless and straggy appearance, the reason is evident—dandruff and failure to keep the hair roots properly nourished. These are the main causes of baldness or dry, brittle and unsightly hair.
Parisian Sage applied daily for a week and then occasionally, is all that is needed. It is a scientific preparation that supplies hair needs. It gets to the hair roots, nourishes them, and furnishes the elements necessary to make it grow. It removes dandruff with one application; almost immediately stops falling hair, and relieves head; cleanses, cools and invigorates the scalp. Equally good for men, women or children—everyone needs it.
Parisian Sage not only saves the hair but beautifies it. Thin, dull, stringy hair is made soft, abundant and radiant with life.
This delightful and refreshing hair tonic can be had at any drug or toilet counter in 50 cent bottles only. The Warne Drug Co always sells Parisian Sage with agreement to refund the money if you are not satisfied.
Get a bottle at once—use it every day for a week and you will be surprised with the result. Delighted users say Parisian Sage is the best and most invigorating hair tonic made.

Run Village as Saxons Did.

Fifteen years' trial of a strange system of land reform in the little village of Winterslow, near London, has proved the excellence of the plan.

In 1899 Major Poore, father of the Duchess of Hamilton, secured possession of the old village and some of its environs and re-established a local government practically identical to that of the Saxons there more than a thousand years ago. At the beginning of the experiment the major chose for the personnel of the scheme persons noted more for industry than for wealth.

A Saxon village hundred was chosen, and this primitive legislature allotted land to heads of families under contracts whereby the payment for the land could be extended over a period from fifty to one hundred years. These plots surround a large common which belongs to the village, the grazing right of which is held in perpetuity by the villagers.

The village is now a self-sustaining community, and what was started as more or less of a charity has proved successfully commercially.

There Was a Difference.

When Dr. Randall Davidson, Archbishop of Canterbury, was a curate, one day at Dartford he took a Sunday school class in a neighboring parish. The subject was "King Solomon," and after the lesson he proceeded to catechise the children.

"Tell me, boys," he said, "what was the difference between Solomon and other men?" No answer. "Come, come!" said the future archbishop. "Was there any difference, for instance, between King Solomon and myself?"

A tiny hand went up, and a tiny voice replied, "Please, sir, Solomon was wise."—London M. A. P.

A Real Sample Room.

In the laboratory on the top floor of H. M. Customs House, near London Bridge, England, there is always a most extraordinary collection of drinks—drinks of all nations and all colors, stored in official bottles which bear the Government seal. These drinks are samples of imported wines, spirits, beers, liqueurs, and they are sent to the laboratory by the customs landing staff from the ships that come to Britain's shores, so that the duty payable upon the cargoes of which they form an infinitesimal portion may be assessed.

Broad Toed Shoes.

In Henry VIII.'s reign the style of shoes grew so broad (to suit his gouty feet) that in his daughter Mary's reign footwear had become so large that Parliament limited the breadth of the toes of shoes to six inches.

IN ROYAL CITY RUINS.

Buildings of Queen Candace's Capital Coming to Light.

The story of Queen Candace's ancient capital should make interesting reading when the excavations now in progress under Prof. Garstang are completed. The royal city of Meroe lies between Aabara and Khartum, on the Nile.

The story of these discoveries is indeed one of the most romantic pages of modern research; no one, unless it were Prof. Sayce, had imagined or could have inferred how extensive the ruins of the city were, nor how remarkable in character. When the excavators first arrived three or four seasons ago, the only visible trace of ancient handiwork was a simple line of wall and three or four carved stone rams in the same vicinity.

Now, however, all is changed; the stone rams are found to line the avenue of approach toward the great Temple of Ammon, which in more ancient history was one of the chief features of the city. The stone wall which rose in isolated ruin is found to be only a portion of a great enclosure, inside which there are coming to light the stone built palaces, official buildings and the royal baths which form the royal city of tradition.

The broken potsherds begin to tell their story and to disclose to expert examination three main successive periods of local activity; the first subject to Egyptian influence, the second marked by an influx of Greek ideas, and the third suggesting a Roman occupation or colony.

The historical material confirms these evidences, showing the city to have been founded about the eighth century, B. C., possibly when the Ethiopian power in Egypt began to decline before the advance of Assyria, impelling the king and the court to seek the security of a refuge further up the Nile than their previous capital of Napata afforded.

Many tombs of the Necropolis have been examined and show that the development of local funerary art and customs pursued a parallel course. These are archaeologically divisible into three separate groups corresponding to the main historical divisions, and, it would appear, to the groups of pyramids.

Even a fourth period, later in date than the third century A.D., is suggested in some of the northernmost tombs, agreeing with evidence, as yet not fully developed, which the excavators have remarked amid the ruins of the city. This is accordant with the last historical reference to Meroe, found in an Ethiopian text published by Bent, which records the sack of the city, apparently its final overthrow, in the seventh century, A.D.

Adjoining the royal palaces in which considerable hoard of traditional gold treasure and jewels of the Ethiopian kings has been discovered there was found an extensive series of buildings forming the royal baths. The excavation of these is still proceeding, but so far as it has gone, it has been rewarded with remarkable and instructive finds. Statues of local execution based upon familiar classical ideas decorate the colonnade and the facade of its central feature; this was a sort of plunge and shower bath, fed by cascades of water from a system of storage tanks and water conduits.

South African Tobacco.

It is estimated that during 1912 the Union of South Africa produced approximately 11,000,000 pounds of tobacco, of which 6,000,000 pounds were grown in the Magaliesberg district of the Transvaal. An experimental station for Turkish tobacco is being started at the Government Agricultural College at Elsenburg in the Cape Province. About 525 acres of this variety of tobacco were planted in the neighborhood of Stellenbosch and Paarl during the year, the yield from which was expected to be about 210,000 pounds. The Secretary for Agriculture states that if the production of pipe tobacco increases at its present rate, the home consumption will be overtaken, and steps will have to be taken to find a market oversea. This he anticipates will not be difficult, providing the tobacco is properly grown, cured, and packed.

Jenny Lind's Piety.

Jenny Lind, who gave her first $10,000 to the poor, continued throughout her life a series of charities and pieties. In regard to the latter we have the assurance of a friend that this greatest of singers deliberately cut short her own public career while her voice was still in perfection. It was Lady Taylor, wife of the author of "Philip Van Artevelde," who found Jenny Lind sitting toward evening on a south coast beach just after her withdrawal, with a book in her lap. She spoke of her resolve. "I found that this"—the setting sun—"was becoming less to me and that this"—the book in her lap was a Bible—"was becoming nothing to me, and I knew then that I must check myself and change my life."—London Standard.

Named It.

Dr. Stanton Coit of London tells this story on himself:

"At a reception in London a young woman was persisting that I should dance with her. I explained that I had not danced for years. 'But,' said she, 'I do so want to say I've danced with the head of the Ethical Society in London.' So I consented on condition that we dance in a room off to one side, where my awkwardness would not be so conspicuous. As I was hopping about perspiringly I became conscious that I was under observation. I looked up. In the doorway stood Bernard Shaw, with a smile of devilish delight.

"'Ah,' said Shaw, 'it's the ethical movement, I perceive.'"

A WORD OF COUNSEL TO JUNE BRIDES

June is the month of marriages. Many young girls are going into matrimony head first. It is a question whether they will land on their feet. The following advice from the editor of Pictorial Review will guide them.

A young my friends is a man who is married life is so happy that all who know him comment on the fact. Yet this man tells me that the first six months of marriage was a veritable hell upon earth for both him and his wife. His bride had been petted and spoiled by family and friends. She spoiled by family and friends. She continue the same regime process no matter how much it interfered with his business or how tired he was when he came home. She expected him to be a hero, figure at his humble task of supporting her and their home.

But he never had been an impassioned lover and he was not exactly a heroic figure in his chosen profession. When his bride discovered that he was common clay, she had to tell him how disappointed she was. Once she went even further and told him she could not understand how she had been so heedless to marry a man who did not have a single one of her tastes and ambitions. Then Mr. Young-Husband talked back. He said she had had ample time during a two years' acquaintance to discover his shortcomings. He had never posed nor masqueraded.

On this occasion some sharp speeches were exchanged, but nevertheless what the husband said must have sunk into his wife's heart for soon afterward she came to him to "talk it over." She had learned where all the trouble lay. She had found the cause of all the unpleasant scenes which were slowly but surely undermining their married happiness. She had been trying to make her husband live ideals instead of fitting her ideals to her husband.

The average girl sketches the man she loves so much that her good and his sex endows him with qualities at random from books and plays. She decides in an entirely feminine and inconsistent fashion that he is what she would have him be and when he refuses to climb up on her self-erected pedestal she does one or two things informs him that he is not the man she thought he was or she fits her ideals to the man she has married.

And the last is not the best thing to do. It only worries, wounds and calls for to uncover the true nature of the men they have married to.

Don't Swat That Fly

Mashing flies is unsanitary and dangerous because it always leaves the disease germs to be distributed through the house when dry.

WILSON'S FLY PADS kill both flies and disease germs, and they kill them all.

Just think of it! One ten-cent packet of WILSON'S FLY PADS has actually killed a bushel of flies.

No other fly killer gives results at all approaching this.

All druggists and grocers sell WILSON'S FLY PADS.

TEETHING BABIES

Teething time is usually a time of worry to mothers. It is usually accompanied by nervousness, stomach trouble and extreme restlessness. The mother can avoid all this and can see her baby pass through the dangerous teething time without pain or uneasiness. Baby's Own Tablets are the mother's greatest friend at this time. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, allay feverishness, relieve colds, simplify constipation and cure or prevent indigestion. The mother can rest assured that this medicine contains no opiate or harmful drug. Mrs. Wm. Gaudet, Pointe du Chene, N.B., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my baby when teething and found them very satisfactory. I can recommend them to any mother." Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CLOTHES ECONOMY.

Spots and stains should be removed at once, as most of these cause marks especially sponging with alcohol mentholated spirit is the handiest method, while a good brushing with methylated spirit now and then is a wonderful freshener for navy, black or dark serge or other fabrics. Coats should be hung on hangers and kept over a shoulder stretcher and sponged and pressed when necessary, and small repairs, or corners turned seams or loose buttons must be executed immediately. This constant care will double the wear of a garment.

Boots and shoes should be repaired the heels set up especially as soon as they show the least sign of wear.

The greatest economy that can be effected in maintaining the family outfit is a constant supply of coal and coke on hand, for those are the seasons that must not be neglected while boys should always look extremely clean and fresh. Very much crumpled collars or cuffs would spoil the effect of the smartest suit, one extra collar, boy or man should always be kept in readiness for use. By so doing much money can be saved, and experience will teach you how to get the best out of your clothes.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

MISS INNOCENCE.

A writer in the Pictorial Review addresses a timely article to mothers of young girls in which the evident tendency of feminity in her teens to adapt to herself the fashions of her elders is deplored. "What has become of the young girls' demands that what is who pleads for the return of Miss Innocence. We have made a mistake, he declares, in letting our girls grow up too fast. There is neither sweetness nor shadow in the eyes of Miss Sixteen today; she is smart and ambitious, but she is no longer sweet. Her bearing announces an independence that is so assertive and we do not like to think of her as a wife of our son. The situation when it commands the attention of fathers is outlined as follows:

"A member of our staff was sent to find out what young girls are wearing. She did not go to the shops supported by the socially exclusive, but to stores patronized by the middle class, prosperous fathers. Here is what she found most popular for girls in their teens, bound for mountain or shore. Small editions of imitations of what smart and dashing matrons and widows are choosing. Short skirts, tucks worn over spotted ankle-tie shoes and no petticoats. A touch of lace and rich satin as accessory. A veil to shadow but not conceal the face, with pumps cut low on the vamp, with dazzling buckles and even sparkling hose, sporting out in search of adventure and blatant stupidity of simply swaying, seeing, rocks so tight of skirt as to make even the hanny jag a dancer as dance and bathing suits not of mohair, linen or serge, but of silk, which clings when wet, the very quintessence of suggestiveness. Small wonder she is a woman problem to bewilder her dad."

Only one member.

The school room in which love is not found as a bond between teacher and pupils must be as barren of fruit as a garden without nature's precious gifts, sunshine, rain, and dew. Trust and love your pupils, teacher. Children must not be made to feel that sense of oppression of being watched as though they were prison birds. They are always more willing to act the noble part if credit be advanced to them, if they are considered by their teachers to be honourable and sincere. By this I do not mean they should remain unnoticed or out of the watchfulness we prize be that of the friend, the loving adviser, the companion and then there will be no antagonism to enforcement on the part of the children. Watchfulness is the price of discipline but it should be that of the parent the child-lover, the affectionate guardian.

Love your pupils first, then watch them because you love them.

Although cheerfulness of disposition is very much a matter of inborn temperament, it is also capable of being trained and cultivated like any other habit. We may make the best of life or we may make the worst of it and it depends very much on ourselves whether we extract joy or misery from it. There are always two sides of life on which we can look, according as we choose the bright side or the gloomy. We can bring the power of the will to bear in making the choice, and thus cultivate the habit of being happy or the reverse. We can encourage the disposition of looking at the brightest side of things instead of the darkest. And while we see the cloud, let us not shut our eyes to the silver lining.

Life is a tangled yard of gold and all together—attentiveness a weary pilgrimage but more often a sunny dream. We choose our own destiny. It is ours to make our lives sublime or the opposite. Let us choose for the best and make the few years we spend on earth one grand song swelling with praises to God.

The name of mother is our child-hood's talisman, our refuge and safeguard in all our mature misery. 'Tis the first half-formed word that falls from babbling tongue, the first idea that dawns upon the mind, the first, the tenderest and the most lasting tie in which affection can bind the heart of man. It is not a feeling of yesterday and to-day, it is from the beginning the same unchangable, it owes its being to the world, but is independent and self-existent enduring while one pulse of life animates the breast that fosters it, and if there be anything of mortality which survives the grave, surely its best and noblest passion will never perish.

Sam Jones says, dirt, debt and the devil are three enemies to social life, which, if we conquer we will be crowned conquerors indeed. I have seen social life in the home of the millionaire in the east, in the wigwam in the west, and I say in candour that the finest type of social life on which my eyes ever looked is the plain quiet country homes hidden nestles on the hills and amid forests and flowers where the noble manly father and the industrious, painstaking mother bring up their rosy cheeked industrious children.

Rest when you are weary. It is a sacred duty.

CHOICE RECIPES

RECEIPT FOR WHOOPING COUGH.

Following is a remedy for whooping cough that never fails. Simply smoke up the room by burning sulphur until room is black with sulphur, have stoves to recumbent pan heaps that open windows of smoke nearly as out, then close windows again, put who gets enough patient in the room to sleep. A few stove sulphur treatments will cure worst chronic case of whooping cough.

COFFEE DATE PUDDING.

Any evening a date dessert. Here it is: 1/2 pound clear stoned dates cut in halves in one cup of cold water, one cup of coffee, one cup sugar, steam 30 minutes. When it begins to cook add one-half pound chopped dates and one-half pound English walnuts. Serve with whipped cream.

CORN BREAD.

One and one-half cups corn meal, one teaspoonful soda, one-half teaspoon salt, two-thirds cup sugar, two cups sour milk, two tablespoons melted shortening, one cup granulated meal, sifted flour enough to make thick batter, pour into buttered pan, bake in rather hot oven 30 minutes and eat hot.

GERMAN POT ROAST

Put into a deep kettle one spoonful of lard and a medium onion cut up. In this thoroughly brown your meat (about 3 or 4 pounds of beef), turning it from side to side so all sides are brown and seared. Season with salt and pepper before browning. Then add 4 cups of boiling water, enough to almost cover. Add half bay leaf and 6 or 8 whole cloves. Cover tightly and let cook slowly 3 hours.

The gravy should then be cooked down and brown. It may need a bit of thickening. Strain gravy before serving. This is very nice.

CLAM FRITTERS.

One pint of clams, two eggs, one-third cup milk, one and one-third cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, salt and pepper. Clean clams, drain from their liquor and chop. Beat eggs until light, add milk and flour mixed and sifted with baking powder, then add chopped clams and season highly with salt and pepper. Drop by spoonfuls and fry in deep fat.

One egg, one cup of granulated sugar, butter size of an egg, one-fourth cup of milk, one cup currants. Put all ingredients together and boil until like soft custard. Flavour and cool. When cool put in tart shells and serve.

WHO TO CURE STOMACH TROUBLE

The Common Cause is Lack of Blood—Therefore You Must Build Up the Blood

There is the most intimate relation between the condition of the blood and the activity of the stomach. The blood depends upon the stomach for a large part of its nourishment which every act of digestion, from the time the food enters the stomach and is assimilated by the blood needs plenty of pure, well-oxygenized blood. The muscles, glands and nerves of the stomach work only according to the quality of the blood.

The most common cause of indigestion is lack of rich, red blood. Not only does impure blood weaken the muscles of the stomach, but it lessens the product of the glands of the intestines and stomach, which turn to the digestive fluids. Nothing will more promptly cure indigestion than plenty of pure blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the surest and most certain blood-builder. A thorough trial of these pills gives a hearty appetite, perfect digestion, strength and health. Here is proof of the value of these pills in cases of indigestion. Mrs. Alfred Austin, Varna, Ont., says: "My system became run-down and my stomach very weak. I had no desire for food and what I did take caused me great distress and did not afford me nourishment, and I was gradually growing weaker and could scarcely do any work at all. Nights I could not sleep soundly at night and would wake up not at all refreshed and with a feeling of dread. Some years previously I had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with much benefit and thus decided me to again try them. My confidence was not misplaced, as by the time I had used six boxes I was again feeling quite well."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by sending to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Tomatoes Good In Many Ways

The tomato readily adapts itself to combinations with other vegetables or meat. A particularly good combination is Spanish tomato salad, says the Country Gentleman. Peel and chill four tomatoes. Score an onion very thin crosswise and shred a green pepper, removing seeds and core and boiling it two minutes. Arrange crisp lettuce on a salad bowl, place the tomatoes upon the lettuce and garnish with the onion and pepper.

Serve with this a dressing made from two tablespoonfuls and a half of granulated sugar, a few grains of cayenne, half a teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and three tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Mix the dry ingredients together. Add the oil gradually and beat in the vinegar slowly.

Another good salad is made by following out firm tomatoes and filling the centres with young celery hearts. Serve on young lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

Although the tomato is a true summer food, it is not substantial enough in itself to serve as a meat substitute, but as it may be combined in many attractive ways with eggs, milk, cheese, mushrooms and bits of meat or fish, it may be used frequently as the main dish at luncheon or supper.

One of the simplest ways of preparing tomatoes is with bacon with salt and pepper, and fill the hollow stems with a teaspoonful of granulated sugar. Set them in an aluminum or agateware pan (tin should never be used with tomatoes) pour a little water in the dish to and place a thin slice of bacon on each tomato. Bake about 20 minutes in a hot oven and serve surrounded with cream sauce.

Ham also combines well with tomatoes. A substantial dish to support upon a cool day is scalloped tomatoes with ham and corn. The necessary ingredients are three cupfuls of cooked meat, one-half a teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth a teaspoonful of sugar, one cup of stewed corn, a pepper, the cupful and a half of cooked tomatoes, one cup of crumbs mix with two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Butter a deep dish, mix ingredients with the tomatoes and put a layer in the dish. Add a layer of crumbs, a layer of meat and continue until the dish is filled. Dot with bits of butter between each layer and put the last layer of crumbs on top. Bake in a moderate oven about 30 minutes.

Baked stuffed tomatoes are an appetizing supper dish. Cut off the stem end of tomatoes and scoop out the pulp. Season highly with salt and pepper, then invert and let stand for 20 minutes. Prepare a stuffing of any kind of leftover meat mixed with half as much buttered bread crumbs and seasoned highly. A little onion juice is a desirable addition to the stuffing. Fill the tomatoes with the stuffing, put a bit of butter on each and bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes. Baste with butter and water. Serve with a cream sauce. To prevent tomatoes from falling over when baking, a small piece should not be removed.

Tomatoes may be combined with eggs in various ways, eggs baked in tomatoes being one of the favorites. Two tomatoes are boiled with a teaspoonful of butter, one of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and one cup of milk. Cook the sauce until it is smooth and thick. Then add two eggs well beaten. This dish is suitable for either breakfast or supper. Another combination consists of one tablespoonful butter, one tablespoonful flour, one cup stewed tomatoes to make a sauce and three eggs. Separate the yolks and whites of the eggs, beat the yolks and add to the sauce, season with salt and pepper, pour into a buttered baking dish, put the whites of the eggs on top and brown in the oven.

RHUBARB.

Rhubarb which is usually a fruit is in reality a vegetable, as everybody knows. But not everybody knows how delicious it is when cooked as a fruit. Part of the rhubarb crop is forced in hothouses and part grows in the open. The forced rhubarb is the first to appear in the spring. It is tender and delicate and has a beautiful pink color. The rhubarb that grows in the open is coarser and stronger in flavor. It is also redder in color. As an appetizer in the spring, rhubarb can be counted on. It is the form of the juices, prepared as follows: Wash and cut into inch pieces. Do not peel. Put in a saucepan and cover with water. Add sugar to taste. Cook slowly until tender. Serve cold.

Rhubarb cut in inch pieces can also be put in a pie and cooked without sugar. Place it from the bottom crust. Pie made in this way has a delicious flavor, but the sugar is left out, and it is not as sweet. Cooked, and served as a sauce.

Rhubarb cut in inch pieces can also be put in a pie and cooked without sugar. Place it from the bottom crust. Pie made in this way has a delicious flavor, but the sugar is left out, and it is not as sweet. Cooked, and served as a sauce.

When necessary, the juice of rhubarb is useful not to cut with lemon juice and the pink color of rhubarb is useful in the kitchen as it is also in the laundry.

Untying the Knots.

There is a marriage custom among the Santals, a tribe in India, by which, after an agreement has been reached between the parents, who usually do the bargaining, the youth's friends, after a short interval, visit the girl and give her a piece of cloth as a sign of betrothal. The money is then paid—this is called "the binding down of the thatch"—and a date for the wedding is fixed. The next step is for each party to tie a knot in a string for each day that is to intervene before the wedding day. Then the parties separate. Day by day a knot is untied, and when the end of the string is reached the real knot is tied that makes the couple one.

Cecil Rhodes and His Clothes.

Cecil Rhodes was not much of a dresser. When Premier of Cape Colony he usually wore a flannel suit which badly wanted cleaning and a dilapidated slouch hat. His successor in office, Sir Gordon Sprigg, who wore a black frock coat even in the hottest weather, once made an effort to enforce the wearing of "respectable" dark clothes in the Cape Parliament. But Rhodes would not have it. He said in Parliament that if he could not help to legislate in comfortable clothes he would not help at all, and he thought that members would agree with him. They did.

Only 6,000 Seen at One Time.

Dr. Sydney Chapman, lecturing to the Victoria Institute in the theatre of the Royal Society of Arts, London, gave a general census of the stars. He said that under the best conditions not more than six thousand were visible to the human eye, so that, although they had been compared to the sands of the sea for multitude, no one could ever have seen more than half of the visible ones—that is to say, three thousand—at one time.

Cost of Raising Bridge.

A cost of a little over £2 is incurred each time the bascules of the Tower Bridge in London, Eng., are raised and lowered, and the yearly cost of maintenance amounts to about £17,000, this being met, as was the original cost of the bridge, out of the funds of the Bridge House estates, so that not a penny falls upon the ratepayers.

EVOLUTION OF TENNIS.

The Game Was First Played With Gloves Instead of Rackets

Tennis as we know it to-day originated on the continent of Europe in the earliest form of the game known in medieval England as "handball," the players simply passed the ball from one to the other by means of the naked hand. In due course gloves were invented by the Italians, and when later cords of tendons were stretched across them the ball was enabled to rebound with much greater force. From these gloves it was an easy step to the racket, the face of which was at first composed of wood, parchment or loosely stretched gut, and such primitive implements are mentioned by Chaucer in 1380.

Rackets were first strung diagonally, but by 1632 they had attained to some resemblance to their present form. Between hand play and the general use of the racket there was a transition period when one player used his hands and the other a bat.

The first courts were simplicity itself. At one time the French played jeu de paume with a cork ball across a line marked on the ground. Presently a bank of earth about two feet in height was substituted, and this in turn was replaced by a single cord stretched across the centre of a prescribed space. Sometimes a short fringe hung from the cord, and this gradually increased in length until it developed into the modern net.

Uncovered courts were at first the fashion, but so rapidly did the game come to the fore that in order to make the players independent of the humors of the weather clerk roofs were added.

By the end of the sixteenth century there were 1,800 courts in Paris alone. Now there are under a dozen in the whole of France, those in the Tuileries, at Cannes, Beauvilliers and Versailles being the most famous.

Of existing English courts the most ancient is that at Hampton Court, which was built by Henry VIII.—London Chronicle.

Commission Rules In Leeds.

Leeds is making an experiment in municipal administration, new to England, under commission government.

The innovation followed the recent strike of municipal employes, the investigation into which revealed a lack of co-ordination in labor matters between the municipal departments and also a tendency to regard municipal employment as political spoil.

The municipal administration of Leeds will be concentrated in the hands of a small commission, which can be held more responsible than is possible in the case of a large city council. If the Yorkshire experiments prove successful it is suggested that the London County Council might advantageously follow suit and even go the length of engaging a general manager.

A salary of $50,000, it is urged, would not be excessive for a good man, who would undoubtedly be able to make a large reduction in the present system of government in the metropolis.

Dinner Table Language.

English is the sea language and French is the dinner table language, and we cannot understand the dinner menu drawn up in German (as the Kaiser decrees) instead of French. We tried in Smollett's time to translate hors d'oeuvres into "whets," and later on the attempt has been made with "appetizers," which suggest only "cocktails." "Fat liver paste" has been suggested as an equivalent for "pate de foie gras." But none of these will serve. The dish with its compounds must be disguised by a polite tongue, and there is much difference between the delicate veiling of the French and the dreadful frankness of the German.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Indigestion and Literature.

H. G. Wells is among those who believe that indigestion is an aid to successful authorship. Some years ago, when called upon to answer the question, "What is the first step toward literary production?" Mr. Wells replied: "It is imperative, if you wish to write with any power of freshness at all that you should utterly ruin your digestion." Victor Hugo appears to have done his best to bring on indigestion. Edmond Lockroy states in his memoirs that it was Hugo's invariable custom when served with crayfish to devour the head, claws, and tail; and to swallow the skin and pips whenever he ate an orange.

Don't Overwork the Heart.

"To keep your temper is rather a good thing," says Dr. Strickland Goodall of London. "Every time the heart contracts its force would raise a weight of two pounds to the height of one foot, and it does this from 70 to 140 times every minute.

"Running to catch a train increases the heart's work by 228 foot pounds a minute. Ascending a staircase slowly increases the heart's work by 112 foot pounds and ascending quickly by 152 foot pounds.

"A man who is really angry increases the work of his heart by 72 foot pounds. A rest of half an hour daily would save in a year 219,000 foot pounds of work on the heart."

Parliamentary Amenities.

Sir Henry Lucy tells how, after the home rule bill rupture, Sir William Harcourt and Sir Henry James still retained unbroken an intimate friendship.

One day, in conversation, Lord Morris remarked on the charm of this incident in the storm and stress of party warfare.

"Yes," said Harcourt, softly, with a wistful, faraway look in his eye, "we are, as you may say, brothers."

"So were Cain and Abel," said Lord Morris.

Birds That Play.

Some birds, like all children, like to play, and Australia and New Guinea produce the "bower bird," which builds regular playhouses. These houses are not a part of their nests, but are constructed usually in the shape of covered archways of little boughs two or three feet long, eighteen inches high, and about as wide. They use these houses simply for their games, as if they were clubhouses. Generally these playhouses are decorated with bright colored shells and feathers.

Origin of Tumblers.

The glasses we now know as tumblers differ widely from the drinking vessel to which the name was first applied. These appear to have been of metal or wood, and from their peculiar shape seem to have served as perpetual reminders to pass the bottle. One authority says they were called "tumblers" because they could not be set down, except on the side when empty; and another derives their name from their original shape, rounded at the bottom, so that they tumbled over unless they were carefully set down. Tumblers were probably introduced into England from Germany, for goblets of wood, rounded at the base, so that they readily tumble over, are still made in that country.

Kept Them All on Edge.

One of the favorite devices of Lord Nelson when ships were cruising in company was to signal to a given craft that Lieut. Smith or Staff Engineer Brown or Captain of Marines Jones was to take charge, on the assumption that all his superior officers on board had been put out of action. The author of "Trafalgar Refought," says the result was very good, for every one therefore made a point of trying to make himself fit to carry out the duty should it ever be assigned to him.

Nerves Were So Bad

THOUGHT SHE WOULD GO OUT OF HER MIND.

Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and worn out by household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with the nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the nerves, strengthen the heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. Archie Goodine, Tilley, N.B., writes:—"When I was troubled with my heart two years ago, I was very bad. My nerves were so unstrung that sometimes I would almost go out of my mind. I doctored myself with everything I could get, until at last I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and they have cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this wonderful remedy, and will recommend it to all sufferers."

PASSING OF ORGAN-BLOWERS.

Functionaries In English Churches Were "Important" People.

The organ-blower, like the cab-horse, is slowly but surely passing into oblivion in England. On drowsy summer days he had a habit of going to sleep during the sermon, and the organist would find that he had no wind for the closing hymn. There is an ancient anecdote about a railway porter blower who, when roused by his irate organist astonished the congregation by shouting out, "Change here for the North."

There has always been a good deal of the "We-can-do-it" with the organ-blower; who, indeed, has been known to describe his organist as his "assistant." There is even a story to the effect that a certain blower once inscribed the case of an instrument with a legend—

"This organ was managed by so-and-so (the blower) with the assistance of so-and-so (the organist)."

Some of these "musical" blowers used to insist upon having a detailed list of the music to be sung at every service. On one occasion the regular organist of a church where this was conceded, left a deputy in his place, and the wind-producer did not receive his usual list. All through the Te Deum and Benedictus, the wind came in intermittent strains; sometimes there was a total cessation, anon there would be a few jerks just to make a pretence of keeping the thing going. This was enough to try the temper of the most genial of organists, and after the service the player vented his wrath on the aged pumpist. That functionary meekly made answer, "Well, sir, wot was the service you was a-singing." Calkin in C., he was told. That explained it! "There you are, you see!" said the delinquent, "I had no music given me; 'ere was I, a blowin' Clark Whitfield in G."

It does not happen now so often as it used to do, but in some of the old instruments it was no uncommon thing for the bellows to give way under the two strenuous exertions of the blower. In a Dublin church the choir and organist were startled one Sunday morning during the singing of a hymn by the head of the organ blower, who called out in a hoarse whisper, "Sing like blazes; the bellows is busted."

In another case of the kind the solution of the matter was left to the clergyman, and this was how he managed it—"Brethren, the bellows has broken, and the organist cannot play. Let us therefore rise and sing 'Praise God from whom all blessings flow'" — a fine instance of unconscious humor!

Some fellows can't even breathe for a living without feeling that their lungs are overworked.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

CAROL'S ISLAND

Or the Mystery Solved

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Carol Atwood watched Captain Hussey as he stowed her suit case and the covered basket in the bow of the little motorboat; then she took her place, while the captain pushed away from the landing steps and grasped the wheel all in one agile motion, born of long experience on the waters of Gull lake.

"Where is the island?" asked Carol after they had fairly started on the blue water.

"Ye can't glimpse it till we turn Pine Tree p'int; kinder queer that your cousin, or—was Steve Atwood your cousin, did ye say?" asked the captain inquisitively.

"He was my father's cousin," replied Carol, with an air of reserve.

"Well, I was saying it's mighty queer that out of all his money he should leave you nothing but Pine Island here. You can't do nothing but sell it, miss. I hear you're from New York city. Work there?"

"Yes."

"So I heard. It was all printed in the newspaper when Steve Atwood died—how he left Pine Island to a little cousin who was a bookkeeper or something like that in the city. The paper said it was too bad that Mr. Atwood hadn't left a sum of money so his orphan cousin could do something with it, but I dunno—you can sell the island if you want to. There's summer folks would like it for a camp.

Carol made no reply. Her blue eyes were dreamily fixed on Pine Tree point, but her thoughts were far from Gull lake and the odd inheritance left by her eccentric relative, Stephen Atwood, the many times millionaire. How easy it would have been had Cousin Stephen only left her a sum of money instead of the valueless island in this Maine lake! She sighed bitterly as she remembered the clause in Stephen Atwood's will which said that the island was not to be sold within five years after his death.

If he had left her a sum of money she might have given up that office position and gone away to seek the health that was so necessary to her successful future. She was pale and delicate looking, city born and bred, and the struggle to earn her bread and butter was growing more difficult every day. She had craved her allotted vacation. She was taking her annual two weeks' vacation in the month of May instead of August, so that she might look over the property.

The breeze ruffled the placid surface of the lake, pickerel leaped now and then, and occasionally from the bushy thicket along the shore mild eyed deer peered at the speeding boat and its passengers.

"There's Pine Island," pointed the captain as they rounded Pine Tree point into the upper end of the beautiful lake.

"It is beautiful!" cried Carol, breathless with delight, as she gazed at the small green island that was her very own.

It was set like an emerald in the blue of the lake, and from amid the thick growth of pines Carol could glimpse a red roof.

"You be'ant going to stop there alone!" argued Captain Hussey as he brought the boat up to a small stone landing.

"For a few days," said Carol practically. "I'm not afraid up here in this beautiful country. Why, there is more to fear in the big city where I have always lived."

"That's all very well," decided the old man, "but I guess I'll leave old Watch with you. He can have a little vacation here along with you and hunt rabbits to his heart's content. You can bring him back with you."

Watch, the big collie, who had been asleep at his master's feet, pricked his beautiful ears at the sound of his name and leaped ashore to jump around Carol, who had reached the landing without assistance.

"Now, that is kind of you, Captain Hussey!" cried the girl, taking his reluctant hands into her little white ones. "I believe that you brought Watch along on purpose."

"The missus made me do it," protested the captain as he picked up the basket of provisions packed by his wife for the young stranger. "She thinks you're crazy to stay here all alone for two weeks, and I ain't telling what I think about it. You know I done all I could to keep you away, but I ain't never found the woman yet that would listen to reason—no, ma'am! But I'll try and run over every day and see how you get along. And now I'll look into the boathouse and see if that tidy little skiff is still there. If it is you can use it to run away from the island if things get too lonesome for you. Can you row?"

"Oh, yes!" laughed Carol. "I've learned to do that on my summer vacations."

"Good! Well, if anything bothers you or you get lonesome you jest pack into the skiff and come over to the mainland. You'll find the latchstring always out on the Hussey house."

"Thank you a thousand times!" cried Carol gratefully.

First Captain Hussey took the bunch of keys from Carol and unlocked the boathouse. Here everything was in perfect order, the cedar trimmed rowboat, the oars, the fishing nets and poles all arranged with a careful hand.

Captain Hussey dropped the skiff into the water beneath the boathouse, laid the oars in it and showed Carol how in a moment of emergency she might run down the short flight of steps, get into the boat and emerge through the swinging doors into the lake.

"It's all lovely," murmured Carol as they walked through the pines toward the little log house among the trees.

"It's kind of a tidy little place," assented the captain as he unlocked the front door. "I've heard say that out of all his houses your cousin Stephen liked this best. Ain't that just the way? Millions of money, palaces to live in, and him coming way up here to live in his log cabin and cook his own meals! It does beat all!"

"I wonder why."

"I've heard that he had poor health for awhile, and he got well up here. And he always said that his riches wa'n't nothing without health. Seems like he valued health more than money. You look kinder delikit yourself," added the captain, looking with concern at the girl's face, pale in the gloom of the darkened house.

"I'll feel better after I've been here a few days," laughed Carol. "If Cousin Stephen could regain his health here, perhaps I can find mine also."

"Did you ever see your cousin, Stephen Atwood?"

"Yes, once. A year ago he sent for me to come to his office. He questioned me closely, but he made no remark upon my answers. I never heard from him afterward. Two months ago I heard of his death in California, and I was notified that he had left Pine Island to me. I thought it rather a ghastly joke at first, but there is this lovely little house, and, Captain Hussey, I've a great mind to stay here all summer!" A pink color flew into her cheeks at the notion.

"Never!" gasped the captain. "How'd you live, miss?"

"Maybe I could take a woman boarder," said Carol hopefully. "I'll advertise at once."

"That ain't a bad idee," muttered the captain. "I think I know of some one right now, Miss Halpin and her nephew. They're artists, and they'd admire a green little spot like this. Want me to speak to 'em? They're stopping at the Benner House, and you know what that is!"

"If you only would, dear Captain Hussey!" cried the delighted Carol. "I'll row over to the mainland tomorrow and find out. If they want to come I'll send in my resignation to the office at once."

"I'll see about it soon's I get ashore," promised the captain as he departed.

Carol felt very much alone as she went all over the little house, with Watch trotting patiently at her heels. She found the log cabin furnished plainly, but with every comfort for snug housekeeping and lazy enjoyment. Soon every window was wide open to the pine scented breeze and a small fire was crackling on the living room hearth just for the very homelikeness of its blaze.

It was fun to light the blue flame oil stove in the kitchen and to prepare her evening meal with the dainty aluminium cooking utensils. From Mrs. Hussey's generous basket there came forth homemade bread and butter, preserves, cakes and pies, besides groceries from the store.

The next morning Carol awoke feeling strangely strong and energetic. She found everything so attractive that she was quite bewildered as to what to do first. Should she satisfy her longing to go out at once or remain indoors long enough to prepare at least a semblance of a breakfast? She decided on the latter course and flew around doing her light housekeeping singing all the while. Then she donned a white linen sailor suit and a duck hat and went over to the mainland, leaving Watch on guard.

On the village dock Carol met Captain Hussey with a middle aged woman and a sunburned young man, whom he introduced as her new boarders, Miss Halpin and her nephew, Gerald Lane.

Together they went back to Pine Island and then began the most wonderful summer in Carol Atwood's existence. The island, which she had at first deemed a white elephant on her hands, turned out to be a treasure indeed, for during those long days of free life under the pines Carol recovered her health—nay, she found new health, for she became round and rosy and sunburned and strong as a young Indian maiden.

She found happiness as well as health. How else could it have ended with a beautiful girl like Carol and a handsome, heart free youth like Gerald Lane living there under the kindly chaperonage of Miss Eugenia Halpin?

And the queerest thing of all was that one day while Carol was rummaging among some books in the living room she found a small tin dispatch box bearing her own name on the outside, and in the box was a letter addressed to her in a crabbed handwriting which proved to be that of her eccentric cousin, Stephen Atwood.

And the letter told her that Stephen Atwood believed her to be a sensible girl, and if she fulfilled that belief she would seek Pine Island to regain her health, and in the course of time she would find this letter, which declared that, while health was greater than wealth, a blending of each was desirable in this world, so Carol would find placed to her credit in a certain city bank the sum of $50,000, and the bank book was there to prove it.

Pine Island is the summer home of Gerald and Carol Lane, and to them each year comes their aunt, Miss Halpin, who loves to tell visitors of the romance woven into the story of the island while she reproduces its beauties on canvas.

I OWE MY LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

They Did Me More Good Than All Other Treatments Combined

Mrs. H. S. WILLIAMS

PALMERSTON, ONT., June 20th, 1913

"I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctors' bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old stomach trouble and distressing headaches nearly drove me wild. Some time ago I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use. "Fruit-a-tives" completely cured me.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked me the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if "Fruit-a-tives" are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

Mrs. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Prepared to Be Pessimistic.

An exact illustration of pessimism was that given by an elderly person who remarked one sunday morning: "I have a premonition that something is going to happen today. I don't know what, but I won't like it." — Collier's Weekly.

Radway's Ready Relief

Mrs. J. Dittmar, 710 E. 135th St., New York City, writes: "I caught a severe cold and after using one bottle of your Radway's Ready Relief I found wonderful results. I have since found it acts like a charm for sore throat. I used it with great benefit for several others and always have both and recommend it to my friends."

NEURALGIA

The Relief is the best counter irritant known, and Radway's Pills the best purification that can be used for Neuralgia. Rub it on the part affected, and keep flannels soaked with it on the seat of the pain until ease is obtained, which will usually be in the course of ten or fifteen minutes.

ROMANCE IN RAGS.

Diamonds and Wills Are Found In "Wastepaper."

The wastepaper trade is as full of surprises as a lucky-bag at a bazaar, says The London Standard.

A diamond ring was recently found at the paper-sorting depot at Whitecross street, in which the Salvation Army employ many men. The man who made this discovery, though naturally poor, handed up the ring, and the owner was traced. At the same place, two £5 notes were found among some wastepaper. In this case they were also handed up.

But the most frequent source of piquant discoveries is discarded envelopes. In an East London store the back of an envelope was torn while the manager was handling it, and three postal orders for one pound each fell out. The name and address were still legible on the envelope, and by this means the postal orders were returned to the owner, who proved to be an aged woman. The money had been sent her by a son working in the north of England, who had refrained from mentioning his gift in his letter, and the mother, being nearly blind, had not noticed the orders when pulling out the letter.

A bundle of love letters, delicately scented and tied with blue ribbon, was discovered among a quantity of colored paper used for fancy decorations. They were human little epistles, starting in a bright, optimistic vein, gradually dwindling into a sad diminuendo, and telling the whole story of a courtship and a severance.

But it is in the rag trade that most discoveries are made. For every opportunity there is of losing things among wastepaper there is a dozen among old clothes. Romance in rags! People put a purse or a document in a pocket, and, discarding the garment, forget all about it. In this way a budding author recently lost a manuscript on which he had pinned high hopes. While revising it he was disturbed by a visitor, and placed the valuable document in an inside pocket of his old working coat. The next morning his housekeeper sold this shabby coat to an "old clo'" man with the manuscript still in the pocket. Fortunately the housekeeper knew the man to whom she had sold the coat, and the writer was able to recover his manuscript.

The finding of wills among rubbish is more easily understood. Many probate suits are caused by the action of eccentric old people secreting their wills, and several cases are recorded of these documents being picked out from among waste material. Marriage certificates, too, have a habit of turning up in unexpected places.

He Was Changed.

At a certain Scottish mansion notorious for scanty fare, a gentleman was inquiring of the gardener about a dog which some time before he had given to the laird. The gardener showed him a lank greyhound, upon which the gentleman said:

"No, no! The dog I gave your master was a mastiff, not a grey hound."

The gardener quietly answered:

"Indeed, ony dog might some become a greyhound by stopping here."

Every Bird a Weathercock.

"Where's the wind?" scoffed the sailor, "Why, look at the birds. They'll tell you. Don't you know that every bird's a weathercock? Stop moistenin' a finger and holdin' it up," he went on in a tone of disgust. "The practice ain't hardly cleanly. Look at the birds is all you got to do, for every bird sets with its head always straight at the wind. Every live bird in a tree is as reliable a weathercock as them dead birds on the spires."

How Lang Learned to Read.

Andrew Lang—the best prose writer of the age, according to many critics—took to the printed page almost as instinctively as a duckling takes to water. "About the age of four," he relates, "I learned to read by a simple process. I had heard the elegy of Cock Robin until I knew it by rote, and I picked out the letters and words which compose that classic till I could read it for myself. A nursery legend tells that as a child I used to arrange six open books on six chairs and go from one to the other perusing them by turns. No doubt this was what people call 'desultory reading,' but I did not hear the criticism until later, and then too often for my comfort."

Wool Made To Look Like Fur.

Wool which makes up to resemble fur is a new idea being shown in London. The wool does not look any different from ordinary wool, but after the garment is made when it is brushed vigorously a furry surface appears. Hard brushes are sold with the furry wool skeins. A manufacturer states that after washing the garments retain their furry appearance. Wool is growing dearer, says The London Daily Mirror, one reason for this being the huge quantities that go into the foreign markets.

PLAIN COOKIES

To make a nice cake is to make them from the first sow of materials in small batch then take [illegible]

Two cups sugar

One cup lard, a cupful of sweet milk

Two or three eggs

Two or three quarters of a cup full of butter

Three teaspoonfuls of baking powder

Nutmeg to taste, and enough sifted flour to make as soft a dough as can be handled. Rub the butter and sugar to a cream, add the eggs, nutmeg, milk and flour with the baking powder sifted into it, be careful not to get them too stiff. Roll out cut into any shape desired and bake in a quick oven.

To Clean Shoes.

To clean children's white kid-topped shoes use sweet milk and a good white soap. Rub in well and set in the sun to dry. This will leave the kid nice and soft as well as clean.

HAD RHEUMATISM IN ALL MY BONES

"Sometimes I Could Hardly Walk!" 2 Boxes of Gin Pills Cured Me

I SUFFERED from Kidney Trouble for five long years. I also had Rheumatism in all my bones and muscles—could not sleep at night—and sometimes could hardly walk. I was treated by some of our best physicians but without relief. I lost over fifteen pounds, was very weak, and friends who had not seen me for some time, were astonished. One day, I met one of our leading hotel keepers, who had been cured by Gin Pills, and he advised me to try them, so I bought two boxes at my druggist's.

Before I had used one box, I felt a big change for the better, and before the second box was gone, I was completely cured.

I assure you I can hardly believe it for if I had known what I know now about Gin Pills, I would not have spent over one hundred dollars for nothing, when two boxes of Gin Pills cured me.

HE SAYS HE TOLD HIS NEIGHBOURS

And They Told Him to Try Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mike Rudy, Young Manitoba Farmer, Sick for Two Years, Tells How He Got a New Lease of Life.

Camperville, Man., May 29.—(Special.)—Cured of Kidney and Heart Disease of two years' standing, Mr Mike Rudy, a well-known young farmer living near here, is telling his neighbours that he owes his new lease of life to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"For two years," Mr. Rudy states, "I suffered with a terrible pain in the small of my back and shoulders. I took many different medicines and was under the doctor's care but nothing seemed to do me any lasting good. Finally heart-disease was added to my troubles.

"Hearing Dodd's Kidney Pills well spoken of by my neighbours, I decided to try them. To my surprise and relief one box cured me completely."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cured Mr Rudy because his troubles all came from sick kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a kidney remedy, pure and simple. If you have pain in the back, rheumatism, lumbago, grave or diabetes, your kidneys are wrong. You need Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Favourite Cake.

One cup flour, one-third cup cornstarch, one heaping teaspoon baking powder, a little salt, one-half cup butter, one cup sugar, one half cup milk, two eggs. Sift the flour two or three times, adding the cornstarch and baking powder the last time. Cream the butter and sugar thoroughly, add a little of the milk and beat, then break one egg into the mixture and beat in well, then add a little more milk, the other egg and so on until all the ingredients are used, beating well after each addition. Very fine grained and moist.

Walking With God Made Possible

Written for the Boston Monitor

(Written for the Boston Monitor.)

Into the heart of every individual, no matter how far that individual may seem (to others) to be from living a life of Christianity, there comes at times an intense longing to be better than one is, and out of this intense inner longing there comes a growing hunger to know the actual truth about life and heaven and God and man. The cry that goes up from every heart in times of stress is the same that springs to the lips of wave-tossed mariners at sea, "Lord save us; we perish." Instinctively every human being knows in times of extreme peril that God is his only help. Singularly enough, perhaps, to one who has not given the matter close attention there is an innate longing in the human consciousness for God when all else fails, and this very fact is proof enough that when the scales of mortal unrest and shattered experiment fall from our eyes man will be found to be indeed the child and representative of God. Men would not call to God in their extremity, had not God first planted in the true man's inner consciousness His own indelible likeness. This is what causes the individual to cry out to the Father always for that present help which material things fail to supply when assistance is most needed.

But how to reach God in the daily life and for the daily need has been the query of the ages. Human knowledge fails to satisfy the longing of the sufferer in mind or body when he starts out on this precious inquiry and after many disappointments from fruitless searching among the endless theories of mortal thought he comes at last to the only Book that gives him promise. In the Bible he finds that many men of the olden time actually walked with God as with a dear and cherished friend, and hope springs up in his heart that in some way as yet unknown he, too, may learn the secret and receive a lasting comfort from divine friendship. In Genesis the inquirer finds it recorded that "Enoch walked with God, and was not; for God took him." In Fenton's version the record is perhaps a little clearer in its statement that "he did not die, God having taken him to Himself." At this point the seeker after wisdom may pause, perplexed.

What is meant by walking with God, and what is meant by the statement that Enoch attained such perfection in his life and conduct that he "was not"? The inevitable inquiry also arises in the thought of the earnest seeker after the actual truth of things. By what means did Enoch know so well the will of God that he was enabled successfully to live it? To ordinary human experience such an attainment seems to be far removed from the possibilities of this day and generation, and with no other guide than that of ordinary human experience the investigator might be led to turn back from his eager quest for the royal road to spiritual happiness and safety.

Viewed from a material standpoint, thinking of Enoch only as a mortal and of God as an almost unknown Deity, what wonder that the sinner seeking pardon, the sick man seeking health, the man of business troubles seeking guidance, or the fearful one seeking peace, should ask the account of Enoch's experience with hopelessness and bemoan the fact that while God loved the ancients sufficiently to give them daily guidance, He had made no such provision for the men of the present day. Who, under ordinary conditions of mortal belief, could hope to walk with God even a little way as did the prophet? But, fortunately for mankind, into this atmosphere of despair and hopelessness comes the teaching of Christian Science, lighting the torch of a higher consciousness of spiritual things, and pointing the way that Enoch walked in so that every child of God may follow, reaping the same results as he.

In "Science and Health with Key to Scriptures," the text-book of Christian Science (p. 537) is given the rule for Scriptural interpretation in these words: "Inspired writers interpret the Word spiritually, while the ordinary historian interprets it literally." With this change in the spirit of one's interpretation, the line of communication between Enoch and his God is lifted clear of material entanglements and is recognized as purely spiritual, a line of thought-force divinely directed in which Enoch recognized himself to be spiritually the child of God, subject to the impartations of Wisdom through his spiritual sense, which spiritual sense became his guide in life. Furthermore, such divine guidance as this becomes an instant possibility to every man who takes the trouble to understand his own spiritual nature and his intimate and close relations with creative Mind (God). To walk with God becomes possible because God is one's very Life, divine intelligence, all-inclusive Love; and all men do walk with God even if utterly unconscious of the fact, because "In him we live, and move, and have our being," and anything that has life and intelligence has an element which reflects the great creative Deity as sunlight reflects the sun. Men may walk in the sunlight and not praise or recognize the sun; men do walk in the sunlight of God's presence constantly; but few, like Enoch, do it consciously and with a constant effort to walk properly, because they have not been taught to recognize the good which God provides for them. Even though they do "hunger and thirst after righteousness" they are in unconscious ignorance of the way to find it.

To walk with God according to the spiritual interpretation given to the Scriptures by Christian Science, is to spiritualize every condition of life, to apply to every problem the rule of right as God sees the right to measure every purpose with the rule of an unselfish and unselfed love, to hold subject to the government and use of Spirit every treasure that one possesses, and to live as the agent of God in all that one thinks or hopes or tries to do. This does not mean that one shall walk alone according to the plan of an absent and distant chief; it rather means that one shall walk consciously in the company of good, taking steps with God, advancing toward a goal of lasting happiness which has been prepared for man from the foundation of the world. Humanity is prone to forget what was written years ago: "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what does the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

ARE YOU GOING TO MUSKOKA THIS SUMMER?

If so take the 10.20 a.m. fast express from Toronto, daily except Sunday, via Grand Trunk Railway, and arrive Muskoka Wharf 1.45 p.m., where direct connections are made with steamers for points on Muskoka Lakes. This train carries Parlour, Library, Buffet car and first-class coaches, and passengers are assured of a comfortable ride along the most interesting route to Muskoka Wharf, which is the origina gateway to the far-famed Muskoka Lakes.

The curative odour of balsam and pine, and the preponderance of water area to land surface, together with the high altitude (1000 feet above the sea), render hay fever an impossible condition and perfect immunity from this annoying ailment is assured.

Return connection is made with train leaving Muskoka Wharf 10.30 a.m., daily, except Sunday, arriving Toronto 2.55 p.m.

Tourist tickets at low fare are now on sale to Muskoka Lakes' points, good for stop-over and valid to return until November 30th, 1914.

HOW TO PREVENT ACID STOMACHS AND FOOD FERMENTATION

By a Stomach Specialist.

As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles, I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is acid in the stomach, usually due to, or aggravated by, food fermentation. Acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements acid and wind. In all such cases and they comprise over 90 per cent. of all stomach difficulties the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is doubtless the best and only really effective antacid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your chemist for the bisurated magnesia, as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valuable properties.

PEOPLE ARE DIVIDED

The Ekoi people are divided into two equa parts by the boundary which separates the Camerroons from southern Nigeria. Their land is most easily reached by way of the River Kwa, which empties itself into the Cross River, a few miles from the latter's mouth, says the Buffalo News.

For some distance before its junction the Kwa is too broad to permit of a good photograph and it is not til nearing the beech from which runs the main Calabar-Obar road that one can be obtained.

The banks are fringed first with mangrove and crew pine, then further on by palm trees. When that part is reached which the Ekoi proudly term "our own water," the river narrows and becomes more beautiful. At its edge grow giant arums, green on the outer sheath, but cream splashed with purple within. Behind these spring trees of every variety of shape and time from mimosa with their delicate mauve or cream balls and feathery foliage to the huge, trumpet-shaped flowers of the Gardenia physodylla, the heavily scented, purple splashed blooms of the Kalbreyeri, or the Berlinia, the white flowers of which shine with a pearl-like lustre from amid its dim, dark eaves.

Here and there at a bend one comes across oeaches of clear white sand glistening with mica, where crocodiles lie sunning. On the single occasion when I went down the river after having expended all my ammunition during a long "bush tour," the fate which presides over such matters arranged an interesting tableau. On the branch of a great tree which hung directly over the water lay a creature such as I have never seen before or since. In shape it was like a medium-sized crocodile, but with a flat snout like that of a pig and with six or eight back rings about its tail. As if aware of its perfect security it ay quite still until we were almost level and then slid out of sight.

Sometimes a monitor slips from a fallen tree trunk as one draws near or a great snake ruffles the surface as it swims across with a bird just caught in its mouth. Huge butterflies of gorgeous colouring flutter hither and thither and now and then a flash of turquoise hangs for a moment over the water as a kingfisher swoops down to rise again with a tiny fish.

As one passes up the river further and further from Calabar and all it represents one leaves behind not only one's own race, but one's own century as well, and glides backward through the ages up the stream at time to the childhood of the world—to a land of mystery and terror, of magic plants, of rivers of good and all fortune, of trees and rocks ever lowering to engulf unwary wayfarers; where the terror of witchcraft stalks abroad, and where against this dread the most devoted love or faithful service counts for naught.

After a while the banks grow steeper, and one enters a deep gorg which the water has worn for itself in the course of centuries. Down this rolls the thunder of the falls, and seems to shut out all sounds from the world one has left, just as the bush, creeping down around one, curtains off familiar sights. This gorge forms the boundary between the sedimentary deposits below and the crystal line rocks of the hilly country, of which the greater part of the Oban district is formed. The line of demarcation lies along this parallel latitude to the Calabar River on the one side and the Aran Valley on the other.

FOSSAL BALM
Goes Right to the Spot

If you have a cold in the head—if your nasal passages are inflamed, stuffed up, smarting—or if you suffer from chronic nasal catarrh—you can get quick relief by using Fossal Balm.

This is an antiseptic, healing salve put up in a collapsible tube so formed as to make it remarkably easy to use. When the elongated cap is removed it uncovers the nozzle-shaped end of the tube, about half an inch long. This is inserted in the nose and the tube squeezed gently, depositing a little of the Balm well up in the nasal passages. A little rubbing of the nose, and the indrawn breath, distribute the Fossal Balm throughout the passages, where it comes directly into contact with the inflamed membranes and the germs of disease. The latter it kills—the former it soothes and heals. The smarting irritation disappears—the nostrils are cleared, making breathing easy—and the catarrhal conditions, if they exist, are corrected.

Get a 50c tube of Fossal Balm from your Druggist, or write for it direct to us. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 1

Famous Dancer Gives Complexion Secrets

I've learned the secret of Dolores entrancing beauty—the wondrous charm that has dazzled the courts of Europe and captivated vast audiences everywhere. The famous dancer abhors rouges and cosmetics. Yet, despite the strenuosity of her life, she retains the incomparable complexion best described as indescribable. An intimate friend tells me the senorita regularly uses on her face what druggists know as mercolized wax. This is applied at night in the manner cold cream is used and washed off in the morning. It absorbs the dead particles of skin which daily appear and a fair, soft, fresh, girlish complexion is always in evidence.

Dolores' skin is not marred by a single wrinkle, not even the finest line. She wards these off by daily bathing the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. As your druggist keeps these ingredients, as well as mercolized wax (one ounce of the wax is sufficient) no doubt your readers will welcome this information.—Aileen Moore in Beauty's Mirror.

BOY'S DESCRIPTION

H. Percy Blanchard, Hants Co., Ont.

The little boy described "apis vulgaris" as "a big fly with a red-hot tail that lays honey."

Poets have sung of the bee and of its drowsy hum in the nectar laden valleys of fragrant Apulia. The philosopher has praised its tireless industry, and a more modern bard apostrophises thus:

How doth the little busy bee,
Delight to bark and bite;
To gather honey all the day,
And eat it up at night.

Some one may remind me that there is some confusion of thought in this little gem of poetry just quoted; but the experience of a near friend of mine seems to confirm me in the belief that the poet was under no delusion when he penned those lines.

Last spring he bought two hives full of bees and set them in a sheltered warm spot near his orchard. Later in the season, with much assumed courage, he put a super in proper shape on each hive. In due time he went to collect his honey. He could find none. A few miles away lived a bee-man who did well with his hive, and he was brought into consultation and examined his friend's two profitless hives. Sure enough there was no honey and his conclusion was that the bees had every now and again swarmed away, on the principle presumably that "it is cheaper to move than to pay rent."

AN UNCONVINCED DOUBTER

Perhaps so; but I am still inclining to the aforesaid poet's explanation. As likely as not, hearing every word of the expert's learned diagnosis that morning, were those glutted, guilty bees, smiling the smile of the satisfied there in their back kitchen; and licking from last night's orgy the honey from their chops. But have bees got chops? Lambs and mutton and veal have, but what about bees?

Au contrare (as the seasick Frenchman answered when asked if he had dined), assuming the poet wrong and the expert right, what was our friend going to do with his two hives? Bees, said our expert, will come out of their hive, wait impatiently around the front door a quarter of an hour or 20 minutes for Mrs. Queen, who has to have a last word with the cook, button her gloves, etc. (any married man will understand the situation) and when she at last appears, the whole outfit will peel for a tree. Here they will cluster and hum and think they are having a gay, good time; and then, away they go to the woods, and never come back. To carry out our expert's advice, our friend would have to be hovering around those mellifluous precincts all summer. I feel that I am quite competent to give him advice, because I am thoroughly unprejudiced on the matter, as I know nothing about bees; and so my suggestions will not be forefended by facts to show them impractical.

First, I will have him set his hive on a large, smooth platform. By the time a swarm is probable, he will put a similar empty hive, corner to corner with the full one, and both facing on a square to be enclosed with net and a common front door under net for both hives. At the top inside of this front verandah have a piece of a limb with a little "essence of swarm" rubbed on it, and a little of the same essence inside the new hive. If the outdoor of all could be made of a size so the workers could use it and the queens could not squeeze through, well, the thing is done. When the swarm issues it collects on the twig. "Essence of swarm" causes that. Here alongside is a vacant apartment house, flats added as occupants desire. "For rent we take all you can make." The swarm move into their new habitation, after which the old house is moved a bit back out of the way. I will not endeavor to work out the detail, as I generally find that working out the details ruins many a magnificent invention. The detail I will leave to those who know something about the bee business.

If this simple plan will not work, why, there is nothing else but to admit defeat and appeal to the columns of The Beekeeper for the needed assistance.

Tourist—You have an unusually large acreage of corn under cultivation; don't the crows annoy you a great deal.

Farmer—Oh, not to any extent.

Tourist—That's peculiar, considering you have no scarecrows.

Farmer—Oh well, you see I'm out here a good part of the time myself.

ABUNDANT FLUFFY HAIR IS IMPOSSIBLE IF YOU HAVE DANDRUFF

How often we hear a beautiful woman referred to as having a regal head!

Denude that head of its hair and instead of a queenly, royal-bearing we have a fright. The hair makes all the difference. To have that glorious abundance of radiant hair which always crowns "a regal head," one should use Newbro's Herpicide.

Herpicide represents the last word in scientific hair culture. It destroys the dandruff, checks falling hair and corrects generally diseases of the hair and scalp.

The positive results and its delightful refreshing odour recommend Newbro's Herpicide to ladies of refinement everywhere.

Send 10c. in postage for sample to Herpicide and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R, Detroit, Mich.

Newbro's Herpicide 50c. and $1.00 sizes are sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If your hair is not entirely restored your money will be refunded.

Thrilling Stories Are Told By The Survivors Of The Disaster

The Big Liner Listed On Side Immediately After The Crash

Dr. Grant, Surgeon of the Empress, Tells Thrilling Story of the Tragedy--Was Rolled Out of His Birth When Collision Came and Was Dragged Out Through a Port Hole on to the Side of the Liner Just Before Boat Went Down.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

RIMOUSKI, P.Q., May 30.—Perhaps one of the best unofficial reports of the disaster is given by Dr. Grant, one of the ship's surgeons, who was picked up in a boat and returned to the scene and aided in the rescue work. He then boarded the Storstad and out of the confusion that made the grimy collier a place of horror, brought a semblance of order that meant much. Women died as they reached the deck, and he took charge of the bodies and ordered where they should be laid. Down in the engine room, men, foreigners for the most part, were shrieking and screaming in the ecstacy of terror that had not yet left them, and there were women there—trying to warm their chilled bodies and dry their draggled clothing. All over the ship he went earning that praise that afterwards was unanimously granted him.

Asked for his story of the disaster, he told it in the following words. There were interruptions—women wanted him for a moment, women whose nerves had not yet become readjusted since the terrors of that woesome night. He would excuse himself for a moment and then returning he would smile gently and resume his narrative.

SIGHTED THE STORSTAD.

E "We left Quebec on May 27 at 4:30 p.m. and had an uneventful trip during the evening. During the early morning a fog dropped around us and we proceeded slowly. At 1:30 a.m. we put the pilot off at Father Point. At 1:50 a.m. the collier Storstad rammed the Empress of Ireland. The vessel's lights had been sighted by the watch who reported to Captain Kendall, who was on the bridge. The captain signalled with three blasts of the whistle. 'I am continuing my course,' the collier answered, but what the reply was I have not learned. Then Captain Kendall sounded the whistle twice saying: 'I am stopping.' The lights of the collier could be seen approaching and the captain of the Empress signalled the engine room to reverse and steam full astern, but the big liner could not avoid the small ship. She was rammed amidships in the engine room on the starboard side. The plates were ripped open to an enormous length. The collier then backed off about a mile.

LISTED TO ONE SIDE.

"In a few moments the Empress began to list to one side. She made an attempt to right herself and then canted over still further to the starboard as the water forced its way in through the gap into the break in her side. She listed further and was doomed.

"An attempt was made to lower the boats on the starboard side. The first one was thrown clear and the sailor in it was thrown out. A boat was overturned, then some of the port boats were flung across the deck by the list of the vessel and several people were killed.

"They were crushed to death against the rail. I believe that the chief officer, Mr. Steede, lost his life when these boats catapulted.

"There was no disorder among the crowd. The captain and other officers remained on the bridge until the vessel sank. It was just seventeen minutes from the time she was rammed, until she sank below the surface. Comparatively only a few were able to obtain life belts, and practically all were forced out in their night attire into the icy water.

A TERRIBLE SCENE.

"Several clung to the ship until she sank, holding to the rail until the vessel canted over so far that it was necessary to climb the rail and stand on the plates of the side. Then, as she keeled over further they slid down into the water as though they were walking down a sandy beach into the water to battle. Then there were several hundred souls swimming around in the water, screaming for help, shrieking as they themselves being carried under and uttering strange weird moans of terror undisguised. The life boats of the Storstad were launched and came rapidly to the rescue. Not one went back that was not well loaded. About five of the Empress' boats got away.

CAUGHT LIKE RATS.

"Then the catastrophe was so sudden that scores never left their bunks. They were caught like rats ni a trap. Added to this, is the fact that the passengers had been on the ship only a day, and were not yet familiar with their surroundings. In the confusion and semi-panic many would not find their way to the decks, and only a few knew how to reach the boat deck. This was largely responsible for the terrible toll of death.

"Four women perished after they reached the Storstad. In each case I was called and the unfortunates died before anything could be done. The last spark of energy had been exhausted. One other woman died just ar she was being taken ashore."

All this time the doctor had said not a word regarding his own experiences. He had dropped no word occasionally that he had gleaned his information from one or another reliable source. He was then asked to relate his own personal story, and a strange story it was.

DR. GRANT'S OWN STORY.

"I knew nothing of what was occurring," he said, "until I was rolled out of my berth by the listing of the boat. At once I knew that there was something wrong and I tried to turn on the lights, but the power was off. The dynamos had been stopped by an inrush of water, a few moments after the collision. And then I could not find the door. I could hear screams of terror and the sound of rushing water. I did not know what was wrong, nor was there anything to guide me, as to the immediate danger. Finally I managed to get out of my stateroom, but I was unable to walk up the alleyway because of the list of the boat. I tried to crawl, but could not, so I scrambled along the wall and grasped a port hole.

'I got my head out and what was my astonishment to find the upturned side crowded with people, standing there as though it were the deck. I called and some one reached down. I was trying to get my shoulders through the opening. This man pulled me out and I stood there with them for a moment. There were fully one hundred people around me. There was no time to question. I had no time to think.

THE SHIP PULLED FROM IN UNDER.

"The ship pulled from under and we were all struggling in the water, and then the fog that had been all around us, just so soon as the boat sank, as though it had accomplished its purpose, rolled up like a curtain and low in the water I could see a boat while away off were the lights of the collier that I afterwards learned had struck us. I swam to it and was picked up by a life boat which had just been launched. I returned to the spot where the ship had gone down and helped to pick up those who were struggling in the water."

In Memory Of Those Drowned

Local Salvation Army Band Played "Nearer My God to Thee" as They Passed Through Montreal Streets

(Montreal Herald.)

Playing "Nearer My God to Thee," the Salvation Army of Peterborough, Ont., passed through the Streets of Montreal at one o'clock on their way to the steamship, Alaunia, where they will board a boat for London, England, to the International Congress of Salvation Army to be held there.

According to the leader of the Salvation Army there were 175 men belonging to the Salvation Army Band, on the ill-fated ship and it is unknown how many perished, the same number of men will sail to-day for London, Eng.

The Army, comprising over a hundred men, stopped at Victoria Square at 12:30 to-day and after the band played in memory of those who were drowned on the Empress of Ireland, it marched up Beaver Hall Hill, turned in at Dorchester Street towards Windsor, where the band will play again in memory of the dead.

Lindsay People On The Empress

LINDSAY, May 30—Mr. W. H. Stubbings, Elgin Street, informed the 'Post' this morning that his sister, Mrs. Arthur Mawby, of Toronto, was a passenger on the ill-fated Empress of Ireland, on a trip to England to visit her relatives. Mr. Stubbings is naturally very much concerned regarding her fate. Mrs. Mawby is well known in Lindsay, having resided here until three years ago, when she removed with her husband to Toronto. While residing here Mr. Mawby worked at his trade as a carpenter and was employed for a time in the Dominion Wheel Works. Mr. Stubbings is anxiously awaiting news regarding his sister. Her many friends sincerely hope that she will be among those saved from the ill-fated vessel.

Mrs. Alf. Hyncman, who resided with her husband at 42 Colborne Street, is believed to be a passenger on the ill-fated Empress of Ireland. Mrs. Hyncman was in the 'Post' a few days ago and made arrangements about her paper, announcing that she intended sailing with the Salvation Army contingent on the Empress.

Former Lindsay Lady.

It is also reported that Miss Florence Easton, formerly of Lindsay, who was a S. A. captain, was a passenger on board the Empress of Ireland. Miss Easton and her mother are in the habit of spending the summer months at Sturgeon Point summer resort.

MR. TURNER HAD FRIENDS ON EMPRESS

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., of this City, received word from Mr. Reuben Birch of Toronto, stating that Mrs. Birch, who is Mr. Turner's cousin, and her two daughters were passengers on the "Empress of Ireland" and it is feared they have been lost.

They were going to England for a family re-union.

PROGRAMME FOR MONDAY

Vice-Regal Party Will Arrive in Peterboro' via C. P. R. at 10 o'clock on Monday Morning

DETAILS OF RECEPTION

For the beent of the genarl public a short programme of the visit of the GovernorGeneral, on Monday, is here outlined.

Their Royal Highness will arrive at the C. P. R. Station, at ten o'clock, together with the aide-de-camp and ladies-in-waiting. The first event will be the inspection of the Guard of Honour, which will be drawn up outside the station, and which will be in charge of Capt. McLean, assisted by Lieut. K. G. Loch, and Lieut. Hagerman.

A drive around the City, by the route given in the Examiner, last evening, will then be made, after which the Royal party will go to Central Park, where His Royal Highness will be presented with an address to which he will reply.

A reception of those named in to day's issue will then be held by the Duke of Connaught. It is also probable that he will go to the Armouries, for a few minutes, and meet the officers of the Peterborough Garrison. In the Park the children of both the Separate and Public Schools will render patriotic airs and the P. C. I. Cadets and Boy Scouts will be inspected. A drive around the northern part of the City, ending with a trip over the Lift Lock, in the Government Steamer "Bessie Butler".

The programme will be concluded with a drive back through the City to the Grand Trunk Station from which the Royal party will depart, to Port Hope.

No Word Has Been Heard From Perry

It is Thought Local Boy Must Be Among the Lost

The worst fears as regards the safety of Wm. Perry, the only passenger from this City on the "Empress of Ireland," seemed to have come to pass. His name does not appear on the list of survivors, and no word has been received by local friends from the young man. It is thought that had he been rescued from the terrible disaster he would have wired some of his intimate friends here. Nothing has been heard of him and the fear of his death seems almost a certainty.

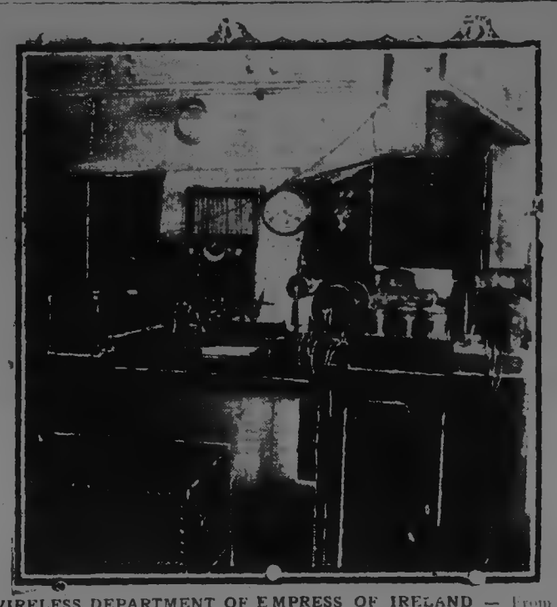
INTERESTING SERVICES IN GEORGE STREET TO-MORROW

The services in the George Street Methodist Church to-morrow will be of unusual interest. In the morning the Rev. Mr. Pecver will discuss the Provincial Temperance situation and the attitude of the two parties to temperance. In the evening his subject will be "Lessons from the loss of the Empress of Ireland."

APPOINTED SUPERINTENDENT

An American has been chosen by the Canadian Pacific to head the department of building construction, D. H. Mapes, for the past two years connected with the Canadian Pacific, but engaged for twenty-two years in building construction work, and formerly vice-president of the J. V. Schafer Jr. and Co., of New York City, one of the large construction firms of the country, is appointed superintendent of building construction. He succeeds F. L. Ellingwood, resigned. This is one of the very important posts on the railway, as the company builds its own hotels and takes a vital part in the construction of its railway stations. There are under construction at the present time about a dozen new buildings for the railway as well as several large jobs of remodelling and repairing. All of this vast work will come under the direction of an American. The Company is noted for its recognition of the merits of the American in the various departments of its organization. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the President, is an American, who, about thirty years ago, came to Canada to assist Sir William Van Horne, another American, in the construction of the Canadian Pacific, now the largest transportation company in the world.

A Young Girl Tells of Her Desperate Fight For Life



WIRELESS DEPARTMENT OF EMPRESS OF IRELAND — from which messages for help were sent, which were picked up by a couple of Government steamers nearby.

Alice Bales, of the Salvation Army Jumped From the Sinking Liner Into the Black Water and was Picked Up After a Long Struggle

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, May 30.—Tales of each others heroic rescue were told by the survivors who arrived at Viger Station. With a blanket thrown round her shoulders, her eyes lit with the wild excitement of the night of horror, Miss Alice Bales, one of the young women Salvationists, who was saved, recounted how her desperate struggles finally brought succour and safety. Her cheeks were successively hectic and palid as Miss Bales told the hideous story.

She said: "I thought we struck an iceberg when I heard the fearful grinding of the shock in the boats. With a cry to the girls who were with me I stumbled out of the narrow berth room and groped up to the deck. Here was chaos. The ship was listing listing, listing. Every step I took to the uppermost part of the deck I seemed to be slipping back into that maelstrom of water and falling bodies. Finally I gained the rail. I climbed up on the rail and with a prayer in my heart I jumped into the blackness. The water surged over my head. Down, down I went. I could not swim a stroke. I remembered that you should keep the air in your lungs, and as I sank I clenched my jaws determined to stay with the little as long as my strength lasted. After long periods of struggle and fainting and renewed struggle, I saw a man not far off swimming with a lifebelt. I forgot to tell you that I fastened the belt around my waist when I jumped. I reached my hand towards this hope of rescue. The man's belt eluded me. Finally I grasped it. Then I saw how the man made the swimming motions like a frog. I tried to do the same. I used every fibre and nerve to make the motions. I knew this was the chance for life. Then when my energy was ebbing to the lees I heard a faint cry far off to my back. Instinctively I turned around, there was a cluster of people. It was a life boat. The next few moments are indistinct in my memory. Some one was lifting me, dragging me over something hard. Now they were speaking to me. They revived me and I was got aboard the Storstad, the ship that struck us. I can't tell you any more."

LIKE WALKING DOWN BEACH.

MONTREAL, May 30.—"It was just like walking down a beach into the sea. As the boat went over we climbed over the taffrail and slid down the stanchions on plates and walked into the water."

In this matter of fact manner did J. L. Duncan, of London, Eng., describe how he left his cabine on the promenade deck in his pyjama suit, and how he parted company with the ship. When asked what he had to say about the disaster he replied, "My cabin was not crushed in like an egg shell as were some of those immediately below me. Directly the collision occurred the Empress began to list and I immediately went on deck. The lights went out almost immediately and there was a struggle to get on the decks, but there was no fighting that I saw. We simply stood there. We knew we were going down. There was no question about that from first, and it was no good struggling. The poor women were hysterical but there was no chance to do anything for them. When the steamer keeled over we walked into the water and I struck out for the rescuing steamer which was standing about half a mile off."

DECLINED TO TALK.

QUEBEC CITY, May 30.—Collier Storstad which rammed and sunk the Empress of Ireland, passed here under her own steam for Montreal. Captain Anderson declined to make a statement intimating that he would do so to the proper authorities when time came. It is understood that the collision was probably due to mistaking the signals. The Storstad officers thought the liner was going ahead, and that they would pass behind, but the liner stopped dead and reversed, and she was "sideswiped" in railway parlance with fearful results.

DADDY TO PLAY BEFORE KING

TORONTO, May 30.—"Daddy has gone to England to play before the King," said the little children of William Horwood, baritone soloist of the Salvation Army Staff Band, as they played about the house, evidently unconscious of the fact that their father was drowned, that he had appeared before a greater king than of earth's monarchs.

COMMISSIONER REES GONE

Refused to go in Life Boats While There Were Women to Save and Finally Died of Exposure

HOW THE END CAME

Special Wire to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, May 30. — That Commissioner David Rees, Chief of the Salvation Army in Canada, died with conspicuous heroism is indicated this morning by the stories of survivors, who said that he refused to get into life boats, although he had a chance to do so, because he said, there were women in the cabins below, although there were none on deck, to use the boats at the time. His wife and daughter, who were with him, declined to leave him and they were seen clasped in each others arms as the bow listed. They were thrown against the railing and separated. Later Major Morris found the Commissioner struggling in the water and attempted to save him, but he died of exposure.

LATEST FIGURES.

QUEBEC, May 30.—The latest revised figures of wreck lost are. Total passengers aboard 954, saved 159; total crew aboard 113, saved 237; total lost 934.

QUEBEC, May 30.—Lawrence Irving, the famous actor, son of Sir Henry Irving, perished in attempting to save the life of his wife, according to survivors. He was last seen buckling the life belt on her and helping her up the gangway.

A DISGRACE TO THE NORTH WARD?

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir, I have watched with appreciation your campaign to have the caterpillars on the City exterminated, or eliminated, to a great extent, and believe that every citizen should take great care to see that all the pests on his property are destroyed. But near my residence, on a vacant lot at the north west corner of Smith and Water Streets, are a number of apple trees, growing wild, and in these are thousands of caterpillars breeding and multiplying. On a rail-wire fence surrounding the property is a notice that all trespassers will be prosecuted. And meanwhile the caterpillars are spreading from the vacant lot in all directions to neighbouring properties. Could not the owner be compelled to have the pests disposed of? There are a number in the vicinity who would gladly burn the nests but will not take the risk of being dragged to Police Court as trespassers. This condition of affairs, I think, is a disgrace.

Thanking you for your space, I am,

Yours truly,

"North Ward."

DROWNING ACCIDENT

Wesley Hicks Loses His Life While Breaking a Jam of Logs on the Missassauga River Yesterday

COULD NOT SWIM

Yesterday morning about seven o'clock, Wesley Hicks, a resident of Burleigh Township, was drowned about eight miles above Buckhorn, in the Mississauga river. Hicks was an experienced river driver and well known in the north country.

According to eye witnesses of the tragedy Hicks with two other men was working on a small jam about 8 miles up the Mississauga river, and succeeded in breaking it up. The two others jumped from the logs to the shore, but Hicks remained on a log and was propelled at a good rate by the current. Some distance down the river another log bumped against the one on which he was standing and threw him into the river. He could not swim, and his efforts to keep himself afloat by holding on to the log were in vain. Before assistance could reach him he went under and never again came to the surface.

Hicks lived about a mile north of Burleigh Falls and was employed regularly by the Peterborough Lumber Company.

Yesterday all efforts to find the body were fruitless and the water was shut off at the entrance of the river at Gull Lake. This morning the search was started at four o'clock, but so far no information has been received concerning the finding of the body.

TEA TO THE LADIES

With Talks on "Kitchen Engineering" and Cooking With Gas, Next Week

The ladies of Peterborough will be sure to take advantage of the instructive and entertaining lectures on "Kitchen Engineering" and cooking with gas which have been extensively advertised during the past two weeks by the Peterborough Light and Power Company. The very liberal and intelligent character of the advertising which has appeared in the Examiner, should be an earnest of the valuable privileges which will be afforded by these kitchen talks.

The place, date and hour fixed for these lectures will be found on the large half-page advertisement in another page of this issue, and ladies will surely not fail to take advantage of them.

Every housewife who is interested in cutting out much of the drudgery of cooking, and even in the possession of valuable information during these lectures that every one can use in practical life.

Tea will be served each day to visitors with the compliments of the Company who extend to have the pleasure of the company of every housewife in the City. Keep the date in mind.

SATURDAY, MAY 30.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

Peterborough and the most of people are subject to spasms. The echoes of the squibs with which we celebrated Empire Day and Victoria Day are still in our ears, but not for long. We shall put our loyalty in cold storage for another year. We often make a great fuss about many things and, unfortunately, too often, the fuss is all there is to it. It is hoped that this will not be the case with the enterprise suggested by the banquet in the Oriental hotel a few days ago. We should like to see some motion, some beginning. The banquet referred to was not an end, but only the promise of beginning. The unanimity in sentiment shown at the meeting must be translated into practice if definite results are to be expected. The divine system proposed is only a point of departure. That completed, or launched on the way to completion, would be only a drop in the bucket of what we should aim at and work and cooperate for.

The first thing to be done is to bring about conditions that will include the whole city in a scheme of progressive improvement in appearance. The way to enlist individual cooperation is to give confidence to citizens, to show them that the city authorities, naturally charged with leadership in the matter, are earnestly willing to cooperate with citizens in the effort to beautify our streets and public places. Citizens must be assured that the work they do in this regard will be protected and not be destroyed by thoughtless vandalism. Until every citizen who owns or controls a property can, for example, be assured that if he lays down and beautifies a lawn and plants flowers, that his lawn will not be made a thoroughfare to its destruction and that vagrant dogs and bad boys and bad men and women do not destroy them or steal the flowers bodily as has been done.

But it is feared that this is not the first step after all. The first step will be a step towards introducing and effecting a great moral reform—to create a public and universal conscience—founded on the spirit of the divine injunction, "Do unto others as ye would that others should do unto you"—to make the golden rule the will of the lives of our citizens in regard to respect of the rights and respecting the civic beautifying work of others. The disregard of this rule is characteristic of the age. We see general manifestations of disregard of authority—of undoubted surrender to selfish passions—in the pursuit of even recognized rights. We have as examples the sacrilegious suffragettes and the Ulster rebels and even some of our own Peterborough aldies are not embarrassed by an exaggerated regard for authority—not quite unwilling to "speak evil of dignities." The spirit of disrespect for authority is unfortunately general in Peterborough and finds unfortunately frequent expression in disregard of the Divine authority that commands respect for the rights of others and the love of our neighbour as of oneself.

It is this disrespect of others' rights that inspires the abnormally selfish carelessness that destroys the beauty of public places and private and public property. The man that throws down his lawn fence does so in the spirit of a public benefactor. He wishes to make private beauty a public possession and enjoyment. A wide and long sweep of green turf, carefully groomed, bedight with flowers, extending along a clean, bright, treelined street, is as much a joy to the casual public as to the owners and creators; and it is the sum of these things that makes the city beautiful.

But these things cannot be if they are not respected: if the law of decency and the demands of ordinary civilization are disregarded, as is too generally the case. How are we to reach the public conscience? Will appeal do it? With a disfiguring label, "please keep on the grass" do it? It might have an effect upon the few who desecrate the beauty of public places through thoughtlessness, those with whom vandalism is only skin deep, but there are others that have to be roused, to have a conscience created for them, to be seized by a sense of the moral obligation of loving one's neighbour as themselves.

Since the successful beautification of the city invokes a moral question, should we not look to the churches and the pulpits and their natural coworkers in reforming and improving the cultural sense, the schools, to lead in the work. If the churches and pulpits and schools can influence our people, not to plant trees and flowers and build boulevards, but to the point of Christian grace, to respect them, to regard the rights of others as sacredly as they would their own, then we would have an impulse to improvement—the sense that labour would not be lost and money wasted, that would in a few years, revolutionize the appearance of our public and semi-public places and make Peterborough in fact, as she is potentially, the city beautiful.

Savants Hope To Learn When Sun Will Die

PASSADENA, May 26.—Prof Charles E. St John, of the Carnegie Solar Observatory on Mt. Wilson declared in a lecture here that the astronomers of that observatory hope to be able to determine within five years whether the universe has a limit in space and just what that limit is, if there is one.

The astronomer stated further that his associates hope to be able within a few years to forecast the future of our solar system by astronimical eras—to determine wahit the condition of the sun will be through its epochs of cooling and the attendant effects upon the earth, to know definitely how long the sun will live.

HOPE TO KNOW IN FIVE YEARS

These problems Prof. St John said, are being studied particularly by Professor Adams and Professor Kaptyne, the famous Dutch astronomer, who remained at Mount Wilson following the international conventions of astronomers there some years ago, to devote himself to the study of these and related problems.

"We hope to know definitely within five years," said Professor St John, "whether it will be possible to determine the boundary of the universe. We hope to arrive at this knowledge by discovering whether light in passing through space is absorbed. I rather hope the we will be able to prove there is no absorption of light in space.

"If we can demonstrate that there is no such absorption then we know inevitably that ultimately light from even the most distant star must reach us. If we are certain that we are seeing the light from the most distant star, then we will know what the boundary of the universe is and can define it."

Professor St John explained that the old theory was that the red stars are red because the rays from the violet end of the spectrum are absorbed as the light from these stars comes to us through space, and that there are stars so distant that all their light is absorbed before they reach us, and, hence, which can never be seen with the aid of the most powerful astronomical instruments.

Buy Land in the way of a Growing City and you cannot fail to make money.

Go to Western Avenue. GO TO-DAY. Use your eyes. See all the new houses, the beautiful gardens, the big new school, big factories, car line, C. P. R. trains passing—then use your brains, and ask yourself how long until this will be City property. NOT MORE THAN THREE YEARS. That is not long to wait for a BIG PROFIT on a small investment recommended by your own good judgment. Inspect the new house on Ford Ave., it will be finished in a few days. You can buy it on easy payments, with all the land you want for garden.

LONELYDALE ON THE DUKE'S VISIT

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I have seen by the evening paper where they are not going to come down Aylmer Street from Monaghan to Hunter Streets on the drive around the City when the Duke comes here on Monday next. Too bad that they cut out that section of the route, because we, residents of that section, were in hopes of getting one day's comfort without being smothered by the dust. That's right, take the Duke through all the patches of burdocks, mullens, and milk weeds, and he will think that he is in some old hamlet, 100 years behind the times, when he gets on some of the streets on the south end. I was also observing in last evening's paper where the residents of Otonabee think that Mayor Butler should have a bottle of Western Village sewage on his hip when he meets the Duke on Monday, to treat him to it. That would be a good idea or scheme, providing that Mayor Butler does not give the Duke too much to drink because travelling at a lively clip the Duke might get dizzy and fall headlong into some of those patch holes in the City. Trust for Mr. Stratton to remark that the cemetery was an awful dead place. What in the name of heavens do they want to take the Duke and Duchess through the cemetery for. The place is dead enough now, without making it appear worse. We will all be there soon enough.

Yours truly,
"Lonelydale."

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Concession, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

AMPLE SUPPLY OF BOATS.

Were Piled Up on Decks—Increased After Titanic Disaster.

MONTREAL, May 30.—"There was ample accommodation on the two boats for every passenger on board the 'Empress of Ireland'," it was stated at the office of the C.P.R. marine superintendent.

"The lifeboats on the Empress would accommodate at least 1,000 persons, and there were not over 1,000 on the Empress about 1,050. There was therefore no lack of lifeboats."

Following the Titanic disaster the number of lifeboats on all ocean-going vessels was increased, so as to provide accommodation for every person on board.

"There were as many lifeboats on the Empress," said Mr. Curtis, the assistant marine superintendent of the C.P.R., "that they were piled up on the decks. There was more than enough for all on board."

THE GURNEY OXFORD GAS RANGE IS NOTED FOR WHAT IT WILL DO AND WHAT IT WILL SAVE

No Housewife Should Miss This Series of Talks

THE HOUSEWIFE who Cooks with Gas doesn't have to "lay the fire." She simply turns on the gas and touches a match to it.

She has no uncertainty as to whether the fire will "go." She doesn't have to wait until the fire burns "up." She has no coal to carry, or ashes to throw out.

She does'nt burn fuel between meals when the fire is not required. She turns the Gas off. She doesn't light the whole fire if she only requires one burner. She lights what burners she wants, no more.

In fact it is only when you "Cook with Gas" that you understand what economy and satisfaction in the kitchen really means.

The Gurney Foundry Co. are Canada's Largest Makers of Gas Ranges. Their Gurney Oxford is noted for what it will DO and what it will SAVE.

This Company has carried on a series of experiments to find out how to cook a meal in its proper order. The result of these experiences will be given in a series of talks called Kitchen Engineering. It means preparing a meal from soup to dessert, in the proper order, each dish ready as required.

These talks will be given in the Turnbull Store during the week of June 1st. Every housewife is invited to attend. Admission will be by ticket which we will send you free on request, and at the Afternoon Lectures, tea will be served to visitors.

We want you to come and hear these Lectures. They will be helpful in your daily work. They will cut down the time and trouble of cooking. They will be interesting and instructive.

We give below the Place, Dates and the Time:—

PLACE The New Turnbull Store Fourth Floor

DATE Wednesday, June 3rd; Thursday, June 4th; Friday, June 5th; Saturday, June 6th

TIME Afternoon, 4 to 6; Afternoon, 4 to 6; Afternoon, 4 to 6; Wed. & Fri. Evening 8.15

Points Of Similarity In Loss Of Two Great Vessels

Iceberg and Collier.

Steaming full tilt through a starlit sea on the night of Sunday April 14, 1912, the S.S. Titanic of the White Star line, with 2340 passengers and crew on board, struck a gigantic iceberg off the Newfoundland coast. Steaming slowly through fog in the Gulf of the St. Lawrence, thirty miles east of Father Point, on the night of May 28, 1914, the S.S. Empress of Ireland, with 1,040 passengers on board, was struck amidships by a collier and sunk.

Titanic Lasted Four Hours.

The Titanic crashed into the iceberg at 11.40 p.m. and foundered at 2.20 a.m. The Empress of Ireland collision occurred at 2.30 a.m., and, according to all reports, sank immediately.

Age of the Boats.

It was the maiden trip of the Titanic. She left Southampton for New York. The Empress of Ireland has been in the service of the C.P.R. since 1906, having been built by the Fairfield Company, of Glasgow. She left Quebec Thursday afternoon, May 28, bound for Liverpool.

The Life-Savers.

The Carpathia, the Virginian, the Parisian, and the Baltic, played an prominent part in saving the 705 lives on the Titanic. The Canadian Government steamer Eureka and the mail tender Earl Grey were among the first to come to the assistance of the ill-fated Empress.

Passenger Lists Compared.

The passenger list on the Empress of Ireland and the S.S. Titanic compare as follows:

	Empress	Titanic
First class	90	330
Second class	250	220
Third class	850	750
Officers and crew	650	940
	1840	2340

Lost on Titanic.

Canadians lost on the Titanic were: Chas. H. Hays, Montreal; Thornton Davidson, Montreal; Quigley Baxter, Montreal; J. Hudson Allison, Mrs. Allison and daughter, Montreal; H. Markland Molson, Montreal; J. R. Levy, Montreal; Dr. Paine Hamilton; Hugo Ross, Toronto; Mark Fortune, Winnipeg.

First News Reassuring.

The first news with regard to the Titanic accident received in Toronto on April 15, 1912, was of a most reassuring character. The statement was flashed over the wires that all of the passengers were safe and were being transferred to the Carpathia. This proved on the day following to be an absolute exaggeration of the facts, and at the investigation held later every effort was made to learn who had been responsible for the dissemination of the misinformation.

His Life in His Hands.

At the investigation into the wreck of the Titanic held in Washington, U.S. Admiral George Dewey said: "I think that every passenger who crosses the North Atlantic takes his life in his hands. I would rather go around the world in a man-of-war than go almost any place in one of the North Atlantic liners now in operation, and I could offer a great many reasons for my choice."

The Bands Played.

Just when the Titanic sank, the strains were heard, "Nearer My God to Thee." When the Empress of Ireland left Quebec Thursday the Salvation Army Band played, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

The measurements of the Titanic and the Empress compare as follow:

	Titanic	Empress
Length in feet	882	570
Tons displacement (approx.)	46328	30,000

Comparisons of Size.

The "Empresses of the Atlantic" are great vessels, well proportioned and built to meet every requirement of the service, and also remarkably steady in rough weather. Their length is 570 feet, breadth 65 feet 6 inches, and 14,500 tons register. The Titanic was 882 feet long and the tons displacement amounted to 46,328.

Capacity of Empress.

The Empresses' capacity provided for 350 first-class, 350 second cabin, and 1,000 third-class passengers. They have a good sea record and have been popular with the travelling public. But, as was shown by the disaster to the Titanic, the best formed and most soundly constructed steamers cannot survive collision under certain circumstances. The side was ripped out of the giant White Star liner and she sank like a stone off the Grand Banks, when her builders believed her to be practically unsinkable. On the day of that never-to-be-forgotten tragedy of the sea the "sea of ice found crime" was pooh-poohed by those who had taken a hand in her construction, yet their worst fears were realized.

THE FLOWER OF THE ARMY'S OFFICERS IN CANADA WERE AMONG EMPRESS' PASSENGERS

Scarcely a Prominent Executive Officer Left in This Country--The Loss is Irreparable.

TORONTO, May 30. — The blow which appears to have fallen upon the Salvation Army, with the disaster of the Empress of Ireland, is one of the worst features of the tragedy. More than a hundred and fifty representatives of the Army, including many of the head territorial officers for the Dominion of Canada were aboard the Empress, on their way to London, to take part in the International Congress which was to be held in that city, with representatives from fifty-eight countries. While these officers were the pick of the Army and came from all the large centres in the Dominion, the greatest proportion were from Toronto and the immediate district.

Out of the hundred and fifty, about a hundred came from the Toronto ranks and offices, while the Toronto headquarters were practically swept clean of its officers for the conference, only the number absolutely necessary to keep business running having been left behind. Between 50 and 60, including the Territorial Staff Band, which numbered 35, were taken from the head offices alone to attend the conference, and the proportion of these who may be saved as the matter which is now agitating the Army from one end of the city to the other.

Commissioner Rees and Family.

Commissioner David Rees, head of the Army in the Dominion of Canada, and who had charge of the Newfoundland, Bermuda and Alaskan territories as well, was on the Empress, and with him were several other members of the family. Mrs. Rees, Capt. H. Rees, Capt. R. Rees, and Miss A. Rees, all of Toronto.

On Wednesday evening a celebration was held in the Army headquarters, as a sendoff to the London party, and the representatives who left were in the highest of spirits. It is explained that the reason so many of the prominent officers were sailing on the ship was in order that conferences might be held on board.

Next in command in Canada to Commissioner Rees is C. L. Sydney Maidment, who also sailed on the Empress, and regarding whom no word has been yet received. Among others prominent in the ranks, and who will be keenly missed, from their capacity as business men as well as they are not among the rescued, are Brigadier Potter, who was financial secretary for Canada; Major Findlay, head of the Special Efforts Department; Major Creighton, assistant immigration secretary; Adjutant Hannaan and Adjutant Pearmine, accountants; Major Frank Morris, head of the London division; Major Turpin, head of the Trade Department at the Army Temple Staff Captain D. McAmmond, head of the Social Department; Captain Morris of the Subscription Department; Major Attwell, of the Printing Department, and many others.

Will Cripple Organization.

If all these men are among the missing, the business management of the Toronto branch will necessarily be crippled temporarily. In addition to those named, the territorial staff band to the number of thirty-five, came mostly from the headquarters offices, many of the bandsmen holding high staff positions. In addition to their business positions these bandsmen represent the best in Army music which the city is able to produce, and comprise many members who have been constantly touring to various parts of the Province.

One of the pathetic features of the tragedy which has befallen the Army is that whose families may possibly be wiped out, or if not wiped out, many of them will doubtless be broken into when the list of the dead is returned. Two brides and grooms are upon the list of those who sailed, both young men coming from the offices of the War Cry. They are Messrs. Thomas Greenaway and Capt. T. Dodd, both of whom were married recently, and who were making the journey to London on their wedding trip.

Scene a Pitiful One.

The scene at the Army Headquarters, Toronto was a pitiful one. The news of the disaster was conveyed to Col. Samuel Rees at five o'clock in the morning, and he got together as many officers as he could, to set things into shape to answer the storm of inquiries which they knew must follow the spreading of the message about the city. Shortly after daybreak the inquiries began to pour in, by telephone, and by personal messengers, who came to the offices in the vain hope that some definite word might have been received from their relatives or friends who had gone aboard the ill-fated ship.

"It is terrible, we are almost driven distracted," declared Major McGillivray, who is left in charge of the immigration department. "It does not seem possible that it can be true. All our best men in the Dominion were on board that vessel, and it does not seem possible that they can be drowned. There are very few of us left in the office, perhaps a dozen officers. We considered that the head officers had surely gone away on furlough."

THE "WHITE ROSE" GARAGE OPENED ON HUNTER STREET

The "White Rose" garage, at 182 Hunter Street, is just closing the first month of its operations. The business that has been quietly developed since the opening has been decidedly encouraging to the management who are aiming to make the "White Rose" a synonym for reliable and prompt service.

G. K. Rackham is manager of the "White Rose" and T. W. Appleby is superintendent of the repair shop. Both gentlemen are well known in the City's automobile activities. Mr. Appleby is recognized as a capable mechanic, and has had a wide experience in specializing on automobile work.

The "White Rose" offices have been appropriately laid out and furnished, and particular attention will be given to the prompt and accurate rendering of accounts.

A complete line of automobile accessories will be carried and the garage will be open practically at all hours. The well-known "White Rose" gasoline, from which the garage gets its name, is handled, also the National Carbonless Motor Oil. The gasoline is supplied from a curb tank in front of the office and an air pump will be installed within a week or ten days for the supplying of tyre air.

No automobile agency has been obtained as yet, the management preferring to take their time in securing the agency with manufacturers of a good car.

The management of the White Rose" garage are placing before the automobile owners of the City a complete repair shop and a reputation for past efficiency and responsibility which they intend to maintain and develop. Mr. Appleby has charge of a number of capable assistants, and all kinds of automobile work will be undertaken. The garage offices will also be the local headquarters of the Canadian Oil Company.

REPRESENTATIVES WERE ELECTED

After the regular prayer meeting on Wednesday night the Society representatives to the Quarterly Official Board of the George Street Church, were elected as follows: Messrs. Geo. Robertson, G. Northey, N. Rontley, F. M. McCarroll, S. Edwards, J. E. Middleton, S. A. Oke, A. W. Callander and Jas. Middleton.

LICENSES TO PEDDLE ARE TAKEN OUT

The efforts being made by the Retail Merchants' Association to make every person doing business in the City pay their equal share of the City's taxes, is bringing results.

A tea peddler who has been peddling in this City for years without a license, was forced to pay into the City Treasury this week a fifty dollar bill for the privilege of doing business for one year.

Another peddler has quit doing business and still another has taken to the country roads, where he may or may not be molested.

"THE GREAT HEREAFTER."

A Free Lecture Under the Management of the I.B.S.A. Will Be Given at the Princess Theatre on Sunday Afternoon at 3 o'clock, May 31st.

Mr. Perrin, the speaker, has been with us a number of times. His thorough knowledge of the Scriptures and his absolute loyalty to them, coupled with intense earnestness, make his lectures extremely interesting. We understand that Mr. Perrin's subject, "The Great Hereafter," will be taken from the Bible standpoint, in relation of the sickening terrors that have made many thinking men turn from religious views with disgust. It is time the "Great Hereafter" was clear of the mysteries surrounding it, and we are glad that God's Word is here proved to be in harmony with all that is best and the noblest in us and respected.

Come early and never mind call or invitation as you will be welcomed for your own sake. All interested are invited and that is why the Pastor has not held an "Invitation" to make it easier for those of any denomination or of no denomination to attend.

Scout News

(By "Scribe").

The Friday night meeting of the Peterborough troops was well attended and the finishing touches were put to the ceremonial drill. Scoutmasters Sawers and McIlroy and Asst. Masters Brooks, McNeily and Vicks conducted the drill.

The boys of the Peterborough troops who availed themselves of the opportunity to spend the 24th of May at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paskins at Downers Corners spent a very enjoyable time. The sports, races etc., went off nicely in spite of the fact that it had been raining heavily in the early afternoon.

The Scouts assembled at the Armouries at 2.30 p.m. and went by way of Ashburnham. They arrived at Downer's Corners about 3.30 and after a time held races, etc. The following are the prize winners:

200 yard dash, Senior, Wilfred Fuller, 1st; Stanley Rooster, 2nd.

200 yard dash, Junior, Paul Trusler, 1st; Herbert Buzz, 2nd.

Vaulting contest, Walter Adams, 1st; Arthur Whittaker, 2nd; Wilfred Fuller, 3rd.

Boxing contest, Jack Daymond.

Sack races, Fred Sheppard, 1st; Egbert Frisk, consolation prize.

Three-legged race, Jack Daymond and Wilfred Fuller, 1st; Stanley Rooster and Ewart Puffer, 2nd.

After the races the boys had singing and the happy day was brought to a close by a storm and a big bonfire. The fireworks also put in an appearance and the boys returned about 9.45 p.m.

A hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. and Mr. Paskins by the troops in appreciation of their kind hospitality.

The boys of all Peterborough troops are requested to meet at the Armouries at 9.00 a.m., sharp, on Monday next for the reception of the Duke of Connaught.

The members of the Pony Pool troops will arrive Sunday morning at 11 a.m. and the boys who are entertaining the visitors are requested to be prompt on time.

District Commissioner Sawers has received letters from the Scoutmasters of the Norwood, Robertson and Peabody troops, and delegates are expected from each of these places. In all about one hundred Scouts will be on parade.

The Original Hotel has opened its new cafe which adjoins the hotel. A beautiful new marble bantam has been installed and entirely new fittings have been put in. The tonneau and the quarter-round are of mahogany and the wall decorations look very fine.

CONTEST FOR NOMINATION

That there will be a contest at the Liberal-Conservative nominations on Monday is an assured fact. It is understood that Mr. Peck, the present member, will have as opponents on the ballot Mr. Soden, Mr. W. G. Howden and Mayor Butler.

Mr. T. B. McWilliams was in Young's Point on Thursday evening endeavouring to arrange for the support of the delegates in that place for one of the above mentioned gentlemen.

FEW WOMEN SAVED.

They Form Small Part of Survivors Who Reach Quebec.

QUEBEC, May 30.—Of 1,387 souls who left for Liverpool Thursday afternoon on the C.P.R. Empress of Ireland, not more than 400 returned last night to tell the awful story of a marine disaster unparalleled in Canada. If one thing more than another stood out as the survivors limped, walked or were carried from the relief train at Levis, which reached here at eight o'clock, it was the presence of so few women in the crowd of 400, not more than 25 in all. As they stole out of the train among the three or four hundred men their drawn faces showed only too well the awful experiences of the night before, when the steamer on which they were passengers was rammed by the collier Storstad. Clad only in the scantiest of clothing, principally sweater coats and skirts, and with their hair dishevelled, in striking contrast to the women were the faces of the children, who seemed as bright as if nothing of the disaster lingered in their memory. The survivors were brought to this side and cared for by the C.P.R.

Very few children were saved. On the train that brought the survivors to this city there were only three children to be seen. Many were drowned. One of the really wonderful rescues was the little eight-year-old girl, Gracie Hanagan, daughter of a Salvation Army bandsman. Her father and mother were both drowned, and the little girl coming up on the train thinks that both her father and mother will join her again, coming on the next boat.

When asked how she was saved she replied, "Oh, I saved myself."

STORSTAD IS AFLOAT.

Collier Which Wrecked Empress Can Steam to Quebec.

SYDNEY, N.S., May 30.—The collier Storstad will be able to reach Quebec under her own steam, according to a wireless message received by the Dominion Coal Co. from the Government steamer Lady Evelyn. The message made no mention of the Empress of Ireland's passengers being on board the Storstad.

The Storstad is a freighter, owned by A. S. Klavenness, Lysanger, Norway, and is chartered by the Black Diamond Line. She was built at Newcastle-on-Tyne in 1911. For some time she has been plying in the coal trade between Sydney, N.S., and Montreal.

The Storstad registers 3,561 tons net. She is one of the biggest of what is known as the Black Diamond boats, measuring 440 feet in length with a 23½-foot beam.

HAD WARNING DREAM.

Kingston Salvationist Says She Foresaw Empress Tragedy.

KINGSTON, May 30.—Mrs. Smith, wife of Ensign Smith, officer in charge of the local Salvation Army corps, had a very peculiar dream on Thursday night. At three o'clock she was awakened from sleep as a result of a horrible dream, in which she imagined something dreadful had happened to the army. Rising Friday morning she learned of the sinking steamer, and received from Ensign Smith word that he had arrived in England.

Smith had arranged to leave on the Empess of Ireland with the rest of the officers, but changed his plans at the last minute, due to the advice of his wife. His wife advised him to leave on the earlier steamer so that he could visit his father while in England.

DEATH TOLL TOTALS 954

Hundreds of Canadians Perished in Catastrophe to Liner

LITTLE TIME FOR RESCUE

QUEBEC, May 30.—Out from this port Thursday afternoon with all the stately pride of a great ocean liner went the Empress of Ireland of the Canadian Pacific service, bound for Liverpool. She carried almost fourteen hundred persons, including many men and women of distinction on both sides of the Atlantic. As the huge ship left her dock and headed down the river the band of the Salvation Army Headquarters in Toronto played "God Be With You Till We Meet Again." The two hundred delegates to the Army Congress on board stood around the band, a brilliant bit of color in the scene.

To-day the Empress of Ireland lies at the bottom of the St. Lawrence, rammed in a dense fog Friday morning by a heavily-laden collier as she lay to near Father Point, awaiting day and the sun. Of all the great company that sailed out so confidently Thursday but little over four hundred returned last night. Almost a thousand bodies lie entombed in the ill-fated ship, or drift amid the eddies of the St. Lawrence.

As the Empress steamed down the river the fog thickened, and after she took the mails aboard off Rimouski Captain Kendall, whose first voyage in command it was, decided that the better course would be to lie to till morning. The activity following the taking aboard of the mails being at an end, the passengers and the bulk of the crew were in their berths. Out of the fog, steaming rapidly toward Quebec, came the deeply-laden collier Storstad, a Norwegian ship engaged in carrying coal from Nova Scotia to up-river ports. She struck the Empress amidships with such force that the side of the great ship was pierced, and the plates were ripped off for a considerable distance below the waterline. At once she began to fill, and as the water poured in she careened over so far that the launching of the boats became a matter of the utmost difficulty. In fourteen minutes from the time the collision occurred the Empress went down, carrying with her hundreds of passengers who had not been able to make their way up on deck.

The calls of the wireless operator for aid were heard at Father Point Wireless Station immediately after they began, and two Government steamers which had steam up raced to the spot indicated. Before they arrived the Empress had gone down, and all that could be done was to gather the survivors, many of whom had taken to the boats or thrown themselves into the cold water with but little clothing on them. It was almost three hours before the work of rescue was completed, and the survivors were landed at Rimouski and mustered for roll call. It was only then, when parents failed to find their children and husbands their wives among the survivors, that the full horror of the disaster began to make itself felt. For a time there was a ray of hope that others might be saved and landed later, but the number of passengers who reported was pitifully few. As Captain Kendall stated, many of them had not been able to make their way on deck, and were, therefore, carried down with the ship. When the train bearing the survivors reached here at 7.45 last night it carried 29 first-class passengers, 29 second-class and 101 third. Of the crew 237 were saved. It is stated that 37 additional survivors have been landed at Rimouski since the train left. This would make the total number rescued 433. As the crew and passengers totalled 1,387, the dead or missing number 954. No ocean tragedy in Canada's history has cost so many lives, and only two others in modern times, the sinking of the Titanic and the burning of the Volturno in mid-Atlantic have exceeded the loss in yesterday's horror.

Stories of the frightful panic which broke out in the darkness as the ship listed and her lights went out; of the futile efforts of the crew to lower the boats, which was made impossible by the strong list of the ship, and the desperate struggle which occurred in the water after the ship gave the last plunge, are told by the survivors, all of whom were witnesses of the disaster which will go down in the history as the most appalling in the story of navigation in the St. Lawrence river.

The most prominent men among the victims were Commissioner Rees of the Salvation Army, who was in charge of the Canadian contingent to the convention in London; the actor, Laurence Irving, son of Sir Henry Irving, his wife, and Sir Henry Seton-Karr, the famous sportsman and big game hunter.

Some idea of the terrible excitement that existed on board the ship as she started to sink is found in the story related of an Ottawa passenger, J. W. Black, who did not wait for the boats but jumped with his wife into the river and kept afloat until picked up.

The Empress of Ireland was valued at $2,000,000, and with her cargo of a value of $250,000, was fully insured.

At low tide this morning the top of the funnels of the Empress of Ireland could be seen. She is lying right in the channel. It is thought here by navigators that it may be possible to raise her. At present the wreck is a menace to navigation.

Ontario Government Sets June 29 as Polling Day.

MAKES APPEAL TO VOTERS

Proclamation Has Been Issued Dissolving the Legislature and Fixing Nominations For June 22—Condemns Abolition of Bar In Plea For Return of Present Government.

TORONTO, May 30.—"A proclamation has been issued dissolving the Legislature. Nominations for a new Legislature will take place on June 22, and elections on the 29th. The Government having received information that the voters' lists will be ready, the uncertainty which has delayed action in this matter, is removed, and writs will be issued in a day or two in accordance with the proclamation."

The above announcement, issued by Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, yesterday, confirms rumors of the past few weeks as to the date of the provincial elections. In accordance with his custom, Sir James Landed out an address to the electors of Ontario, "The Issues of the Day," in which he recapitulates the achievements of his Government since the last election, referring specially to the Workmen's Compensation Act, the legislation providing for the establishment of radial railways by municipalities and hydro-electric development under the direction of Mr. Beck and his colleagues. He declares that the public revenues have been more than doubled, and calls attention to the extension of the T. & N.O., and the administration of the license laws. "We believe," says the address, "that a policy which keeps shops open while closing the bars, will have a tendency to encourage and increase the sale of liquor in large quantities, and the consumption of it in the home. That policy we leave to our opponents. References to New Ontario development and public highways report, and an appeal for support on the Government record, conclude the address.

CAPT. KENDALL A HERO.

Stayed Until the Last and Then Picked Up Others.

QUEBEC, May 30.—Assistant Purser Hayes, in an interview last night, speaking about Captain Kendall, states that the captain said good-bye to him on the bridge, as the water was lapping at their feet. The captain had a life preserver, but handed it over to a passenger. They jumped together and Hayes was picked up by lifeboat No. 3 after an interval of 30 minutes.

After the ship had foundered they discovered Captain Kendall clinging to a piece of wreckage. He was taken in to No. 3 boat and immediately took active command and saved 73 lives in that boat alone. After placing these safely on one of the rescue steamers, Captain Kendall returned to the disaster and rowed around in No. 3 boat for over three hours, searching carefully for any survivors.

Captain Kendall himself took one of the oars and was indefatigable in his efforts.

Lloyds Sustain Heavy Loss.

LONDON, May 30.—Not since the foundering of the Titanic have Lloyds Underwriters sustained such heavy loss. The Empress of Ireland was insured in this city for $1,400,000, in addition to which must be considered her cargo, which is variously estimated at around a quarter of a million. At first it was considered extremely unlikely that a fine 14,000-ton steamer only built in 1906 should founder in fourteen minutes. Reinsurance business was done at two guineas per cent. when the news was first heard, and this shows how wholly Lloyds disbelieved the report.

Received Word of Rescue.

WINNIPEG, May 30.—The Manitoba Agricultural College last night received a message from R. A. Cunninghame, lecturer at the college, who was on the Empress of Ireland, stating that he was safe and would continue his journey to Scotland by the next boat. Mr. and Mrs. H. Peterson of Winnipeg have also notified their friends of their safety.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, May 29.—Instead of short sellers of wheat being subjected to a squeeze the big firm went to unusual lengths in easing all difficulties for wheat dealers and was itself caught short in corn. The real flurry was in corn, which closed for May at an advance of 2 1-4 compared with last night. Wheat finished 1-8 to 3-8c net lower, oats 1 1-2c down to 1-4c up and provisions 10c off to a shade advance.

WORST IN HISTORY.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy Issues Statement Regarding Wreck.

MONTREAL, May 30—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C.P.R., has issued a statement regarding the loss of the Empress of Ireland, in which he says, in part:

"The catastrophe, because of the great loss of life, is the most serious in the history of the St. Lawrence route.

"That such an accident should be possible in the St. Lawrence and to a vessel of the class of the Empress of Ireland, with every possible precaution taken by the owners to ensure safety for the passengers and the vessel, is deplorable. The saddest feature of the disaster is, of course, the great loss of life, and the heartfelt sympathy of everybody connected with the company goes out to the relatives and friends of those who met death in the ill-fated steamship."

Laurence Irving and Wife Lost.

MONTREAL, May 30. — Laurence Irving is reported here as missing and seven cablegrams have come from England enquiring for him and for his wife, who is also reported missing. Latest reports here shortly after midnight say that only 22 members of the Salvation Army company were saved.

Participating versus Non-Participating Life Policies Again

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO a Publisher of this City at age 43 took out a Ten Pay 15 year Endowment Policy of $2000. No 81226 in The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada paying therefore an annual premium of $187.20.

The Non-Participating Premium would have been $170.40.

The extra paid for profits per year (for 10 years only was $16.80.

On the 1st of May 1914 the above Policy matured and he received in cash $2620.25.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Policy he would have saved $168.00 extra in premiums paid for profits during the ten years but he would have lost $620.25 at maturity of Policy as he would have received only $2000.00 instead of $2620.25 as he did.

Where is there a man that would not like to invest money at such a rate and that too in the Largest and Strongest Life Insurance Company in the British Empire?

You are invited to call and investigate.

PETES ONLY MADE THREE HITS AND LOST ONE MORE TO LONDON

LONDON, May 29.—Three lonesome runs scored by London in to-day's session with Peterborough, after the latter had got away to a good start with a pair, gave the Tecumsehs another on their string of victories. The count was 3 to 2. Manager Reisling took the mound for the home team and allowed but three hits. An error, however, made possible the run-making of the Petes, in the second period. Thereafter London held on the lid. Score:

SPORTING GOSSIP

The Peterborough ball team — if such a designation may be made—is still travelling at a fast clip, but in the same downward direction. From London comes the story of another disaster yesterday—making a total of seven defeats in eight games with the Cockneys. The Petes are now firmly established in the cellar and only the fact that St. Thomas shows a friendly spirit by losing almost as many as our finely trained athletes, saves us from dropping clear out of sight of seventh place. To date the conglomeration that is travelling through Ontario under the protection of and flying the colours of this fair city, have captured five contests while the various enemy have bumped us fourteen times. The showing is scarcely one to arouse enthusiasm, and the need of a shakeup in the club as pointed out a week ago is still more strongly in evidence. The present aggregation will not do. They may be able to play better ball,—a brand such as they handed out Tuesday would do—but so far the good games have been few and far between. First-Baseman Swartling will help some, but he will have to be a Ty Cobb, Hans Wagner, Stuffy McInnis and Walter Johnson, rolled into one, or else Dick Merriwell, if he is going to change the Petes into a winning combination. With the pitchers going into every game with the feeling that a couple of runs scored by the opposition means defeat, and that any time the enemy can't put the aforesaid couple of counters over with their bats, there are some Santa Clauses on the Peterborough team ready to do the job for them by loose work in the field, the life of the twirling staff is not exactly a bed of roses.

As far as its attack goes the Peterborough team has been and is a joke. Those may be cruel words, Marguerite, but when a team scores only five runs in a week, any other description would be at variance with the truth.

The hand-picked aggregation that misrepresents this city is being paid good money to play ball. The manager is being paid more good money to make the gang play ball. And the team has been successful five times in fourteen starts.

Champions Die Hard

Glory Too Sweet to Relinquish Without a Struggle--Charley White's Task

Charley White, the star of the middle west, is the next to attempt to wrest the lightweight championship from its holder. Willie Ritchie gives him a chance at the honour on May 27th, in Milwaukee. The little Chicago boy has a job on his hands bigger than a white elephant.

The championship, the dream and hope of every lad that ever drew on a glove, the goal of every boxer's ambition, is desperately difficult to win. Champions die hard. The glory is too sweet to relinquish without a mighty struggle, and as we look back o'er the rings that were at once the death bed and birthplace of championships, we find that it is so.

One of the grandest losing struggles ever witnessed was the fight in which the beloved Jack Dempsey—the "Nonpareil" lost his title to Bob Fitzsimmons down in New Orleans in 1891.

Fitz was coming and Dempsey was going. Jack was never in it from the start and as early as the third round was practically knocked out, the gong alone saving him. From that out it was pitiful to see him go up round after round to be punished like a punching bag. In the tenth round Fitz begged the game Dempsey to give in.

"I'll never quit" was the gallant Nonpareil's response. "You'll have to knock me out. I'd hit you if I could."

In the thirteenth round Lanky Bob had to smash him to the floor three times before he went out.

Old John L. stood up before the youthful and cruel hitting Corbett for 3 rounds down in New Orleans, September 7th, 1892, before his body gave way and he was forced to surrender.

The old, untamed gladiator had guarded his title for twelve long years and don't think for a minute that he was easy that night when he saw it slipping from his grasp. An hour before the fight ended Sullivan realized that, barring a lucky accident, he was up against it, and in his mind he framed the ready speech that he delivered from the ring after it was all over. He was dead game, however, and fought on the best he could, hoping almost against hope that something might occur which would turn the tide of battle his way and enable him to snatch a victory from the jaws of defeat.

That lucky something did not occur and to the twenty-first round Corbett saw the old warrior's knees shake, and immediately tore into him like a tornado. His knees bent under him and the "champion of champions" sank downward in a heap—like a flag might fall. He was almost unconscious, but mechanically tried to regain his feet. He was unable to do so, and he toppled over with his face rested on the hard sand floor of the ring. The great tree of the pugilistic forest was felled at last.

The exhibition that Stanley Ketchel gave that time in Los Angeles, when he lost his title to Billy Papke in 1908, is one of the most courageous on record. The last punch of that fight was a right-hand bow of Papke's that caught Steve between the eyes, closing them and knocking him down. Blinded and "out on his feet" the game Western boy struggled on through 12 rounds, suffering almost inhuman punishment that Papke was able to deliver at will. Toward the last it was necessary to direct Ketchel as he left his corner, and he advanced feeling for Papke with outstretched hands.

Little Cal. McCarthy, the Eastern champion of early days, put up a magnificent struggle in protection of his honour. He stood off that little chocolate demon, George Dixon, to a 20-round draw, in Boston, and again at Troy, N.Y., on March 31, 1891, he was there battling tenaciously for 22 rounds before he succumbed.

Then there is Joe Gans, who carried along the toughest of all fighters—Battling Nelson for 45 rounds, winning on a foul. Afterward he stood up against him for 17 rounds of merciless gruelling before sinking in defeat.

Jim Corbett, at Carson City, beat Fitzsimmons up horribly, dropping him for the count of nine, before he went down in the 14th round.

Wolgast, Tommy Burns, Fitz, and Abe Attell all died hard, but the greatest dying struggle was Battling Nelson's 41-round stand at Point Richmond, Ca. That was the hardest of all. For 41 rounds in the cold and rain that struggle lasted. And when the end did come it found the durable one still on his feet with his grit and fighting spirit intact, even if his body was not. Referee Eddie Smith had to call the battered and delirious old warrior to his corner to make him stop fighting. "Bat" surrendered the hardest and with more honour than any other champion.

Champions die hard, we say—but then there are exceptions. They either die hard or ridiculously easy. Frank Erne lost in a 4 round to Joe Gans, and Terry McGovern lost in two rounds to Young Corbett.

A glance at the following list will give you an idea.

Cal. McCarthy—Knocked out by George Dixon, 22 rounds.

George Dixon—Knocked out by Terry McGovern, 8 rounds.

Terry McGovern—Knocked out by Young Corbett, 2 rounds.

Abe Attell—Lost to Johnny Kilbane in 20 rounds.

Jack McAuliffe—Undefeated.

George Lavigne—Lost to Frank Erne, 20 rounds.

Frank Erne—Knocked out by Joe Gans, 1 round.

Joe Gans—Knocked out by Battling Nelson, 17 rounds.

Battling Nelson—Lost to Ad Wolgast, 41 rounds.

Ad Wolgast—Lost on foul to Willie Ritchie, 16 rounds.

Jack Dempsey—Knocked out by Bob Fitzsimmons 13 rounds.

Joe Thomas—Knocked out by Stanley Ketchel, 32 rounds.

Stanley Ketchel—Knocked out by Billy Papke, 12 rounds.

Billy Papke—Knocked out by Ketchel, 11 rounds.

John L. Sullivan—Knocked out by Jim Corbett, 21 rounds.

Jim Corbett—Knocked out by Jim Jeffries, 11 rounds.

Jim Jeffries—Knocked out by Jack Johnson, 15 rounds.

Average, 17 rounds.

of the survivors. "I don't want to talk about it," he said. "I have had enough, please. All I can say is that I felt the water—I jumped from somewhere, somehow and I swam. I was picked up in a lifeboat, nearly frozen to death. I caught just one glimpse of the collier—it must have been her — staggering away — and vague blurs that indicated other boats. I heard no cries. We were picked up by the Evelyn. I was revived with some coffee and tried to be of use around the vessel. I don't know how many souls we had on board. My God—they were a mixed lot, mostly naked, first-class and crew, and third-class, all huddled together. All of us looked like muckers. You could not tell a gentleman from a hobo. We were reduced to mere items of humanity.

"Some died on the way to shore. Some had been cut by the prow of the other vessel. They were terribly mangled, and the women—" he did not finish. Pain swept across this strong man's face as the memory of the sights of that rescue ship, struggling home with her dead and living. "One woman," he said brokenly, "died—talking to her husband. She thought he was there. She used—She used all the—you know—the little silly names a good woman calls her — her husband when she is happy. She just babbled and died."

Oslander's eyes were moist.

TWO PASSENGERS ON MOTORCYCLES TO BE PROHIBITED

TORONTO, May 28.—Dr. W. A. Young, in a communication to the Board of Control to-day, called attention to the dangerous practice of a second passenger riding on the back of motor cycles.

"We should have a by-law to prevent the practice," Controller Sampson declared.

City Solicitor Johnston was asked to frame such an ordinance.

MESSAGES OF CONDOLENCE

House Leaders Refer to Disaster—Connaught and Teck Grieved.

OTTAWA, May 30.—The wreck of the Empress of Ireland was brought up in the House of Commons yesterday morning a brought sympathetic utterances from both the Premier and the leader of the Opposition. Rt. Hon. Mr. Borden referred to the terrible loss of human life, but hoped that the report as to the number of lives lost was exaggerated. He said it was an accident that could not have been prevented by any action which the country could have taken to render navigation safe. It was just one of those accidents which could not be prevented by any action on the part of the Government. He expressed sympathy for the families of those who lost their lives and intimated that some assistance to them might be considered later.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said it was hard to understand how an accident a few miles out could not have been prevented, but he hoped that investigations would show that it could not have been. He was overcome with the terrible news and expressed his sincerest sympathy for the families.

Connaughts Send Message.

TORONTO, May 30. The following message has been sent by H.R.H. the Governor-General to Premier Borden:

"On behalf of the duchess and myself, I desire to express to you our deep grief at the terrible disaster to the Empress of Ireland, and our heartfelt sympathy with the families of those who have perished."

Prince of Teck Grieved.

OTTAWA, May 30.—Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden yesterday received the following message from the office of the High Commissioner in London.

"Have received following message from Prince Alexander of Teck:

"Grieved to hear of disaster to Empress of Ireland. Kindly convey the sympathy of the princess and myself for the relatives of the victims.

(Signed) "Teck."

THE NEED OF MATRONS ON THE TRAINS

The May meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held yesterday afternoon in their room at the Y. W. C. A. with the President, Mrs. Taylor, in the chair. The attendance was good.

After Scripture reading by Mrs. Wood, earnest prayer was offered by five or six members.

Mrs. McKay read a paper on the need of having a matron on all passenger trains and on nearly all trains entering our great cities. These matrons would have some First Aid training, be of cheerful demeanour, and ever on the watch for the wolves of both sexes who prey on ignorant girls and women travelling alone. They would be supplied with leaflets on the dangers of our cities to young women, etc., and they would make it their duty to become acquainted with all women on their trains, waiting them as need required.

A resolution was passed by the Society fully endorsing this plan.

After beautiful solos by Mrs. Lane and Miss Grey, the meeting was closed with prayer, by Mrs. Whalley.

"Tenting On the Old Camp Ground"—a famous song of the olden time—sang often during the dark days of the Civil War by the saddened hearts at home as they thought of their soldier boy at the front! How they longed for a sound of the dear, familiar voice; for a sight of the beloved form, and what a relief it was to pour out their soul into these words of sympathy—this music so tender—that gave complete utterance to their hidden feelings.

The men around the camp-fires at night with only the distant stars looking on—with the leaves of the trees rustling in sympathy—with the rivulet murmuring in soft accord—they sang it, too—this wonderful song! What memories of home—of father, mother, sister, wife or sweetheart—it brought up! Somehow, its melody soothed them—its words brought rest to their weary bodies—and their sleep was sweeter and sounder for this song!

In "HEART SONGS" are many War Time Melodies. You don't have to know how to sing to enjoy them.

War Time Songs

Songs That Deserve a Place in History

The songs that were sung during the great civil war that had their origin directly from the hearts of the people while the fierce four-years' struggle was going on—these songs deserve a place in history. They served to soothe the fears and allay the anxious moments of many a crisis when the humming wires might flash a message that meant the destruction of the Union. They calmed and comforted the women who were left at home—with grief and suffering paramount in each of the days that dragged out their weary length. They served as an outpouring of that silent agony which must find utterance or break the heart. They were the audible and visible supplications of the millions that could only watch and pray—while the gallant boys in blue and gray fought the battles at the front.

The music and the words of these war songs cannot be reproduced to-day. It needs the inspiration of a moment such as war to produce their like. And it is eminently fitting that they should be gathered into one volume such as "Heart Songs." This unique book, offered by this paper, almost as a gift to its readers, contains nearly every song, either of the north or south, that brought solace to the dear ones at home, or the gallant boys in the ranks during the thrilling days of the greatest war ever fought. We consider that we are fortunate in being able to offer this treasury of song on such terms that every home into which this paper goes can own at least one copy. The coupon printed elsewhere in this issue explains fully how the reader can procure the book.

WHO WAS INDSON?

The Baptist churches of Canada and the United States are making to-morrow morning's service commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the commencement of the work of Indson in India.

Probably no missionary the world has ever known endured more or accomplished more than did Adoniram Indson, who began his work in Burmah in 1814. The announcement is made that the story of his life will be told at the service in Murray Street Church Sunday morning. The entire service will be suitable to the Indson Day occasion.

An entirely new programme of reworks will be given and changed every night. No person can afford to miss this year's Exhibition, Sept. 11th and 19th. All particulars given on application to the Secretary, A. M. Hunt, London, Ontario.

ARE IMPROVING

In an interview given out at Montreal, Mr. J. S. Dennis, assistant to the president, head of the department of natural resources of the Canadian Pacific, and reputed to be one of the best authorities on western affairs, said: Business conditions on the railway as well as in the cities and towns are quiet at the present, but are beginning to show marked evidences of stimulation owing to the splendid spring weather and a consequent early movement of people to the western part of Canada. The abnormal growth of these centres is credited with causing a depression of the past year. The city development is now waiting for the necessary industrial and agricultural growth to catch up. When the two are more nearly on a level will the prosperity of the past begin to be appreciable again. It is too early now to speak of crop conditions, yet the spring indications are very encouraging and promise well for excellent crop returns. The immigration to Canada has dropped off to some extent, but this is only due to the holding back on the part of artisans and labourers. The numbers who are taking up land for the purpose of "sane" agricultural development, or mixed farming, as is so diligently preached by the Canadian Pacific, are becoming larger each year. The number of settlers taking up land in the west is larger this year than heretofore."

TEMPERANCE LEAGUE TO FAVOUR BEST CANDIDATE

Meeting of the Citizens' Temperance Committee Decide to Endorse Resolution of County Association.

ACTION DECIDED ON

A meeting of the members of the Citizens' Temperance Committee was held last evening in the parlors of the Y.M.C.A. to decide what action should be taken in view of the approaching political campaign. The meeting was representative in character.

The resolution passed recently by the County Temperance Association was discussed and unanimously adopted. Thus the Citizens' Temperance League has pledged its support to the County organization. Letters are to be sent to both the Liberal and Conservative conventions urging them to nominate canddates who will be acceptable to the Temperance interests and who will tak an advanced stand on the temperance platform. If both parties nominate acceptable candidates and adopt a policy in harmony with the desires of the Temperance Association the temperance forces will not take any part in the approaching fight. If either party takes a more advanced stand than the other and the candidate is acceptable then the League will back that candidate, no matter which party he represents.

Reports presented at the meeting showed that the temperance forces throughout the County and City are anxious and determined to take advantage of the existing situation. It was reported that a number of delegates to the Conservative Convention to be held on Monday night, have pledged themselves to speak in favour of the temperance platform. Preparations are being made to have the party represented in the same manner at the Liberal Convention when ever it is held.

In the event of the Temperance Association taking part in the campaign it was decided that it should do as a separate organization, and that it should not identify itself with either political party. The temperance people will maintain their own organization, see that their supporters' names are duly registered on the voters' list, provide speakers, and will assist in getting out the vote on election day. Reports presented showed that the temperance sentiment is strong and that men belonging to both parties, who have supported their parties all their lives, are willing this time to desert their parties, if necessary, to stand by their temperance principles. It is felt that all this sentiment needs is leadership to make it a big factor in the approaching campaign. One minister who was present reported that he had been canvassing the members of his congregation and found strong party men ready to back the temperance platform. It was decided to ask the temperance electors to refrain from pledging their votes to either party until the candidats for both parties are in the field and have announced their stand on the temperance issue.

During the evening the Chairman read a letter that had been sent out by a publising company in Toronto to the hotel keepers of the Province, including the hotel keepers of Peterborough, asking for contributions to a special issue of a certain paper that is to be issued in the campaign against the "abolish the bar" policy and pointing out that if the candidates who favour the abolition of the bar can be defeated in the approaching campaign it will have an effect in stemming the tide of local option and Scott Act sentiment now so prevalent throughout the Province.

A resolution was passed requesting that the League should protest to the License Commissioners against the transfer of a shop license, application for which has been made recently.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. H. B. Cowan, the Chairman of the Committee.

ALL KNELT IN PRAYER.

London Salvation Army Officials Did "Knee Drill."

LONDON, Eng., May 30.—A dramatic scene was witnessed at the Salvation Army headquarters here yesterday. Directly news of the disaster was received every person in the huge building was ordered to knee drill, namely, to prayer, over the castastrophe. The scene of a busy office in the heart of the noisiest part of London suddenly stopped in stillness was impressive to a degree.

Comrades Play In Streets.

MONTREAL, May 30.—The Salvation Army band from Peterboro, Ont., which is to leave for England to-day by the Cunard liner Alaunia, added a touch of pathos to the terrible shipwreck by playing in the streets of this city yesterday "Nearer, My God to Thee," and "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Western Chief of Orangemen.

REGINA, Sask., May 30.—For the first time in the history of the Orange Order in British America a westerner has been appointed grand master of the Grand Lodge, Loyal Orange Association of British America. The new grand master is Dr. D. D. Ellis of Fleming, Sask., who has during the past three years occupied the chair of the deputy grand master.

Memorial Services To Be Held.

MONTREAL, May 30.—Reference to the disaster which overtook the Empress of Ireland and her passengers will be made from nearly every pulpit of Montreal Sunday. At St. James' Methodist Church there will be a memorial service in the evening. The church will be draped.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Tess Wallace of North Bay is visiting Miss Estella Knox, 142 Hunter Street, East.

Ex-Police Constable Phimister left this morning on the 11:43 C.P.R. train, for Montreal, from which port he will sail for Scotland on Monday. Mr. Phimister was on the local police force for about twelve months and during that time proved himself an efficient officer. His departure is much regretted by other members of the force.

THE MOTORCYCLE

The motorcycle is a portable gasoline engine with a stuttering form of speech and the disposition of a coyote. It is used to carry people from one point to another at the rate of one mile every fifteen seconds and, incidentally to discourage pedestrians from crossing the street without having to duck under a dray.

Motorcycles are so constructed that they never kill anybody except the innocent bystander. Nobody ever heard of a motorcycle blowing up and kicking a speed maniac into the future state. The motorcycle always picks out somebody who is in perfect health and shuffles him into the great beyond before he has time to straighten out an overcharge at the butcher shop. On this account, motor-cycle victims should be regulated by law, and nobody should be allowed to be killed by one unless his life insurance will wipe out his outstanding debts.

Motorcycle riders always wear green goggles so that they cannot see anybody who gets in the way. This gives them a comfortable sense of security and enables them to run down people who ought to be on the sidewalk or up a tree without being annoyed by their conscience. As the owner of a motorcycle aims to ride with his head down, he never knows when he passes over a lady victim unless he punctures his rear tire on a hatpin.

The motorcycle has a deep-toned exhaust which warns pedestrians that the most successful form of sudden death ever invented is about to perform in their midst. Many a pedestrian has heard this exhaust coming down the road two mles away, and tried to get across the street in two frenzied jumps, only to be overtaken in the second cap and scattered in four directions from his last transfer. It is more dangerous to attempt to pass in front of an intoxicated motorcycle than it is to mount a trolley car backward. Some motorcyclists slow up on passing through a crowd but they make up for it by burning large holes in suburban pavements.

OBJECTS TO THE EXAMINER'S REPORT OF THE CASE

The Examiner is in receipt of the following from Mr. G. N. Gordon, representing Mr. Chas. Healey. The statement of the letter is correct and the statement of the case in yesterday's Examiner should have read, "alleged to have been stolen." At the time, of course, Fife said that his horse had been stolen, but the court subsequently ruled that that was not the case.

The letter referred to above reads:

Dear Sirs,—Mr. Healey objects to your statement of his case, as contained in yesterdays paper. You state that the case arose from the fact that Mr. Fife had his horse stolen, but the court came to directly the opposite conclusion, and Mr. Healy was acquitted. At the trial the man, Fife, who had the charge was criticised for his conduct by the judge sitting at the trial of this case. The case simply did not continue to trial because Mr. Healey did not feel like putting three or four hundred to fight this action. He succeeded in one action against Mr. Fife before a jury, and obtained the amount of the earnest money which he had paid in the horse trade.

Yours truly,
G. N. Gordon.

BODIES ARE LANDED

Nearly 700 Are Placed in Shed at Quebec Docks

BRITISH TARS OFFICIATE

QUEBEC, June 1. — The deep is yielding up its dead. Throughout the dreary hours of a long, murky night groups of drawn, tense faces gazed unceasingly over the silent St. Lawrence, shrouded in Cimmerian darkness. Dawn broke clear; sunlight bathed the waters. As the Sabbath bells of the historic Basilica gave forth their early call to worship there rounded into view, far down the bright river, the revenue cutter Lady Grey. The "funeral ship," the Salvagnac called her in quaint reverence.

The little steamer, commanded by Captain Mercier, and conveying 400 bodies from the Empress of Ireland, was guarded and escorted by H. M. S. Eagle, an armored cruiser despatched by the Admiralty for this service at the personal request of the King. The flags of both vessels dipped at half-mast.

It was shortly after seven o'clock when the two vessels approached the Government pier, half a mile below the city. The warship came to another out in the river and reverently saluted. The little Lady Grey, with her load of dead, steamed quietly up to the pier. On her bridge with Captain Mercier and the pilot was Commander Tweedie of the British warship, while, standing guard over the dead, were marines and bears of the British ship-jackets, acting in co-operation with Chief McCarthy of the provincial police and four detectives. The morgue of the city contained jewelry and valuables found on the dead. The Lady Grey reached shed at eight o'clock.

The harbormaster, Captain Murray, who commanded the Empress of Ireland before Captain Kendall took her over, representing the Marine Department, a group of clergymen, several officers of the Salvation Army, and a score or more of newspaper men, with Coroner Elliot of the C.P.R., alone were permitted entrance to the pier. The flag at the pier was at half-mast, and within the adjoining C.P.R. freight shed, guarded by Dominion officers and officials, were rows upon rows of coffin-covered shrouded forms. Upon these the dead were laid for identification. All about the great building, on the tops of sheds and other points of vantage, were clustered scores of members, curious men and women.

Amid the yearning there arose profound respect for the British tar. The task of removing the dead was allotted to his Majesty's sailors. Silent, reverent, and efficient, one hundred and eight seamen were about their work. They carried the rough boxes upon their shoulders, marching in solemn step, the rhythmic beat of their feet the only sound heard. As each body was placed upon its temporary resting-place in the shed the sailors reverently saluted and returned to the vessel for their next ghastly burden. Particularly pathetic was the removal of the tiny caskets, the remains of the children, on the shoulders of the "little middies." It took one hour and ten minutes to land the one hundred and eight eight bodies.

So profound was the impression made by the men of the Navy that as they marched on the vessel at the conclusion of their work clergymen and others raised their hats in tribute.

The improvised mortuary was under the authority of Coroner G. W. Jelicoeur. Again the marines volunteered for duty, and at mid-day, when relatives and friends were admitted for the purpose of identification, the sailors were in charge, preserving decorum and order, and extending sympathetic courtesies to the bereaved.

Mr. N. W. Rowell Nominated.

WOODSTOCK, June 1.—Mr. Newton W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P., received the nomination of North Oxford Liberals Saturday for the provincial House. Mr Rowell's name was the only one mentioned and he was given an enthusiastic reception. Mr. Rowell addressed the convention on important topics, referring especially to Premier Whitney's manifesto. Mr. Rowell argued that there was no reason for an election at the present time, but Liberals, he said, welcomed the fight. W. Nesbitt received the nomination for the Dominion House.

C.P.R. STEAMSHIP EMPRESS OF IRELAND—Which was sunk in collision with the collier Storstad in the Gulf of St. Lawrence in the early morning of May 29th, with a loss of about 900 lives. Her six transverse bulkheads, dividing her into seven watertight compartments, proved unable to float her after the collision, and she sank in a very few minutes.

Captain Kendall Says He Warned Storstad

Inquest is Begun—Asked Collier in Vain to Steam Ahead in Order to Keep Empress Afloat.

STORY OF COLLISION

RIMOUSKI, Que., June 1. — The inquest into the death of the victims of the Empress of Ireland disaster began Saturday in a little schoolhouse, which has been hastily turned into a morgue to accommodate the 200 bodies brought here. Coroner Pinaud conducted the inquest, and all the witnesses had to be translated because the jury was French. The central attraction was Captain Henry George Kendal, master of the lost liner, who consented to give evidence, though he was to leave a sick bed to do so.

"Will you tell us what happened when you had the accident?" asked the coroner of Captain Kendal.

"The pilot was dropped at Father Point," said Captain Kendal. "We then proceeded full speed. After passing Cockpoint gas buoy I sighted the steamer Storstad, it then being clear.

"The Storstad was then about one point twelve degrees on my starboard bow. At that time I saw a slight fog bank coming gradually from the land and knew it was going to pass between the steamer and myself. The Storstad was about two miles away at that time. Then the fog came and the steamer's lights disappeared.

"I rang full speed astern on my engines and stopped my ship. I took the way of the ship so as to stop her quick. At the same time I blew three short blasts on the steamer's whistle, meaning 'I am going full speed astern.' After that he answered me with his whistle, giving me one prolonged blast.

"I then looked over the side of my ship into the water and saw my ship was stopped. I then stopped my engines and blew two long blasts, meaning 'My ship was under way, but stopped, and had no way upon her.' He answered me again with one prolonged blast. The sound was then about four points upon my starboard bow. It was foggy; I looked to where the the sound came from. About two minutes after I saw his red and green lights. He would then be about one ship's length from me.

"I shouted to him through the megaphone to go full speed astern, as I saw the danger of collision was inevitable. At the same time I put my engines full speed ahead with my helm hard aport with the object of avoiding if possible the shock. Almost at the same time he came and cut me right in and cut me down in a line between the funnels."

Captain Kendall said he asked the steamer to keep full speed ahead so as to fill up the hole made, but the backed away and the Empress began to fill rapidly and sink. He tried to run the ship ashore, but the engines stopped. All were then ordered to the boats and distress signals sent out. The ship, however, sank in fifteen minutes. He went down and came up clutching a wooden grating on which he was picked up.

Brought Official Opening.

LONDON, June 1. — Speaking to the Canadian Associated Press yesterday, John Burns, President of the Board of Trade, said George Vaux of the department left for Ottawa yesterday to arrange with the authorities for an inquiry into the disaster. Mr. Burns said that as early as Friday he suggested to the Admiralty that a vessel should be sent to Canada to be present at the official opening of the C.P.R. offices. Mr. Burns added incidentally that he had been in personal attendance at his department day and night since the first news of the catastrophe was received.

CABLE FROM KING AND QUEEN.

Their Majesties and Several Others Send Condoling Messages.

OTTAWA, June 1. — Cablegrams expressing the sympathy of the King and Queen and Queen Mother Alexandra, Hon. Lewis Harcourt, the Colonial Secretary and the people of Newfoundland, with the relatives and families of those who lost their lives in the wreck of the Empress of Ireland, have been received by H. R. H. the Governor-General. The King's message reads as follows:

"I am deeply grieved at the awful disaster to the Empress of Ireland, in which alas so many Canadians have lost their lives. The Queen and I assure you of our heartfelt sympathy with those who mourn for the loss of their relatives and friends.

(Signed) "George R. and I."

Prince Louise, widow of the Duke of Argyll, who was at one time Governor-General of Canada, has sent the following message to her brother, the Duke of Connaught: "Terribly grieved at appalling disaster to Canadian liner Empress. My heartfelt sympathy."

MERE HANDFUL LEFT.

Fifteen Salvationists Arrive In Toronto from Scene of Wreck.

TORONTO, June 1. — When the Montreal C.P.R. train steamed slowly into the Union Station at 7.20 Saturday night, 11 minutes late, bearing fifteen of the Salvation Army survivors from the wreck of the Empress of Ireland, there were nearly two thousand cheerers on the platform and in the waiting-rooms of the station.

Friends or relatives were spied by the anxious people on the platform through the windows of the train before it had come to a stop, and many a cheer rent the air. When Staff Captain McAmmond came to the door of the car every person cheered. By the time he had reached the bottom step all form of self and the "Doxology" was being sung. He was seen in the arms of his friends and was carried across the tracks to Station street, to where a motor car was waiting to convey him to Eaton's store. There were about a dozen motor cars waiting to take the survivors to the store to be fitted out with clothing.

Many who were waiting on the platform had kept their hopes up that their friends and relatives who were on board the boat might have survived the wreck, although their names were not sent to Toronto. Pitiful indeed were many of the scenes as survivor after survivor filed from the train and the waiting people did not see their friends or relatives. Several ladies had to be carried out of the crowd as they could be quieted by others.

ALL THREE JUMPED.

But Only Mother and Daughter Were Saved—Father Lost.

MONTREAL, June 1.—To dive into the water with her husband and daughter, and to be separated from them, and to afterwards meet her daughter alone on the deck of the Eureka, was the experience of Mrs. O'Hara of Toronto. Mr. O'Hara, at first reported saved, was apparently lost. Telling her story, Mrs. O'Hara, arrived Saturday from Rimouski, says that her husband, her daughter and herself, made their way on deck when the alarm was given that the Empress was sinking. Mr. O'Hara thought that the ship could not hold up long, and there seemed to be no chance to get into the lifeboats. He told his wife and daughter, who are both good swimmers, like himself, to jump into the sea and keep afloat until the Storstad picked them up. The three went over the side and at first kept together, Mr. O'Hara supporting his daughter. In the darkness they became separated and afterwards Mrs. O'Hara was picked up by a boat and taken to the rescue ship Eureka. There she was met by her daughter, who had also been rescued. The girl did not know what had happened to her father.

Death of James Mack.

CORNWALL, Ont., June 1. — Mr. James Mack, a brother of the late William Mack, ex-M.P.P. for Stormont, died at the house of his grandniece, Mrs. J. C. Aigsire, here, on Saturday. Mr. Mack, whose parents came to Canada from Lanarkshire, Scotland, during the reign of George IV., was born in Huntingdon, Que., and was in his 83nd year.

Queen's Student Safe.

KINGSTON, June 1.—Friends received definite word yesterday that F. P. Codson, student in Queen's School of Mining, was rescued from the Empress of Ireland.

STORSTAD IS SEIZED

Deputy Sheriff at Montreal Arrests Collier on Arrival

CAPTAIN TELLS HIS STORY

MONTREAL, June 1.— With hawsers crumpled in and twisted around at an acute angle to port, and a gaping rent showing on the port side but a foot or so above the water line in mute evidence of the tragedy in which she has figured, the Norwegian collier Storstad limped into the harbor early yesterday afternoon. A few minutes later a warrant of arrest, taken out by the Canadian Pacific Railway, was mailed to her mainmast by order of W. Simpson Walker, K.C., registrar of the Quebec Admiralty Court.

"By what authority do you come on board my vessel and place it under arrest?" asked Captain Anderson, commander of the collier.

"By authority of the British Empire," curtly replied the Deputy Sheriff, who was commissioned to execute the warrant, and who forthwith proceeded to affix the warrant in the customary place.

No sooner was the vessel moored than the work of unloading her cargo of some 11,000 tons of coal started, and were it not for the battered condition of her bows it would be difficult to imagine that the collier had but a few hours previously taken part in one of the greatest marine disasters in the history of Canadian navigation.

The officers and men, however, bore traces of the harrowing experiences through which they had just passed. When questioned on the subject of the disaster they were averse to entering into conversation.

Captain Anderson, immediately the collier docked, was in conference with Captain Ove Lange, American chief of the Maritime Steamship Co. of Norway, and John L. Griffin, attorney for the company, both of whom had come on from New York to get the report of the captain and sailors first-hand and to look into the situation.

Captain Anderson declined at first to discuss the disaster, declaring that he would make a statement later in the evening. Subsequently a statement based on Captain Anderson's report, as well as the reports of other officers to Messrs. Lange and Griffin, was given out.
